RAINY WEATHER AND LACK OF GRAVEL BOTHER CONTRACTOR.

Will Take At Least Three Weeks To Complete Job On Ash And Columbia Streets-State Street Opened.

During the past week the new advantage of this short stretch and have been using it constantly. Tomorrow (Friday) the time is up on the balance of the pavement up to the old Hawley House and will be opened to traffic. Early in the week it was thought that it might be necessary to open this earlier as the Wolverine Engineering Co. have started work on North Main street.

Ryan & Co. have made fair progress the past week on East Ash street. Some difficulty was encountered when the corner of "D" and Ash was reached. It was at this corner that all the sewers were dug up and with the heavy rain of Tuesday morning the intersection was quagmire. It was impossible to get the gravel trucks near the paving ma-section south of the court house would be completed before Saturday night. This block is considerably wider than where they are now working and the cement will be laid in three parallel sections.

As soon as Ash street is completed, the machinery will be moved to the section between the Mickelson-Baker Lumber Co, and the Mason Elevator Co. As soon as that is completed, they will work west up Columbia street. This work should take eight days, if there are no delays. In the problem on his hands in the selection past lack of gravel and bad weather. slower than was expected.

The Wolverine Engineering Co. began last week on the grading work on North Main street. There is very little grading to be done on this street and this part of the work should be completed within a week. Another week or ten days will be needed to build the curbing before any of the paving can be started.

Is This Man In Arbuckle's Class?

. There appeared in a publication recently the story of a man in Illinois who may have to face a manslaughter charge. He has jeopardized the lives of five innocent children, and this is how he did it. This man is a farmer. He owns a large herd of cows. Came a time when it was necessary for him to have his herd tuberculin tested. Old Records In County Clerk's Office Tell Some Interesting Stories Of Early Mason History.

In these days of high taxes and living expenses, it is refreshing once in a while to look back and consider the simplicity in which our forefather's lived. Recently in looking over some old records in the county clerk's office, some interesting facts concerning the days when Ingham county's covered.

Charles Noble, one of the substantial men of those days had deeded about five acres to the county on condition that the "Seat of Justice" for he county should always remain in Mason. Included in these five acres south half and the northeast part of this block. The latter including all the residences on the south and east side of this block, including those of C. P. Mickelson, Mrs. Bement, Frank Webb, and the lots where Leverett's and Vandercook's stores now stand. Also the land where Hotel Ries is now located. In connection with these lots, Ingham county had her first official 'County Agent." He however had nothing whatever to do with farmers or farm crops, but his business was to sell those lots for the county, and sell them at not less than $35 each. A few sold a bit higher, but this was the average price. G. W. Burchard, one of the dignataries of those days, and a member of the Board of Supervisors at that time, was appointed to this position in 1842. the Ford garage now stands. They received the sum of $800 for building the court house, with the stipulation that it's size should be 28x34 with 18 ft. posts, and if it was not possible to build that size for $800 they should solve their difficulties, not by present day methods of bonding the county for more funds, but by the simple expedient of build-

"Limitation," Not "Disarmament"

Strange as it may seem, there is a wide-spread impression that the conference of nations to be held in Washington this fall is for the purpose of getting the nations represented to disarm. This is not so. The purpose of this conference is to arrive at a limitation of armaments. This conference will begin November 11th. All the important nations of the world are invited. The hope of those promoting it is to get the different nations to stop their mad race for supremacy of the sea and in armies. The underlying reason for this is to stop the steady increase of cost. The United States is taking the initiative to ease the burden on her own-people. It is hoped that other nations will see it in the same light. Undoubtedly, the representatives of these nations are being brought here with the idea of impressing them with the wealth of this country. They will see that the United States can better afford armaments than any other nation on earth. They will see that we have more wealth and could, if we would, build far greater navies and armies than can any other nation. These foreign representatives will endeavor to determine the attitude of the people of this nation, and they will find that we are not a war-like people—that we prefer peace if it can be had by any honorable means.

The proposition as it will be presented will be wholly sane and in no way visionary or theoretical. If the other nations can see the wisdom of limiting the burden of armaments on the people of the world, then the conference should be successful. If they cannot, they should at least be impressed with the strength of this country and what they are inviting when they prepare for another war.

The outcome of the conference may not be as hoped for, but it will be a good indication of what the people of this country and the world may ex- she probably tells herself the truth. pect in the shape of future wars.

This country will be represented by Secretary Hughes, Elihu Root, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, and Senator Underwood, Democrat, of Alabama. These men are the president's choice and are recognized as the foremost statesmen of this age. All have had years of experience in the affairs of this country and none are moonbeam chasers.

Civic pride is something intangible, but it is nevertheless, one of the biggest assets of any city or town. Apparently some sections of the country are blessed with a climate which inspires the inhabitants to forever boost. Other localities have a class of people that are the other extreme. Here in to run away, because any trouble can Mason there's a change being brought about. It would be a difficult thing to name just when, just where, or by whom, this change in sentiment is being promoted, but the change has occurred and is occuring. How do we know this? We have lived here over four years and cannot help but notice the difference in that time. Four years ago last April any man could suggest something that might be of benefit to the city, and he would be answered "You can't do it in Ma-son." You don't hear that today, for the very good reason that it HAS looked dignified at the steering wheel BEEN DONE in Mason. And there's a whole lot more to be done in Mason. Perhaps the war had something to do with getting people together on This city had a war record that was unique. It "went across" with the big loans in record time. Perhaps it was then that people found out that collectively they could occomplish wonders.

Four years ago Mason needed streets more than any other one thing. Within two months from today there will be few small cities in the state as well equipped with improved in-coming streets as Mason. These streets out and grabbing it. have been built, and are being built, with the cooperation of the county and state, but would not have been built had not the people of the city showed an inclination to help.

There is now located in Mason the biggest and best equipped milk condensary in the state, if not in the United States. This institution furnishes a all-year-around market for farmers. Just how big a success and how big a benefit it will become now depends almost entirely upon the farmers themselves. Quick action on the part of Mason business men insured the location of this plant in Mason.

Last winter Mason's school building burned and from this disaster there will emerge another big asset to the city. The school building now being built will afford the people of this city better educational advantages than is enjoyed in most cities this size. It is too bad that surrounding country districts did not join when the opportunity presented itself and share in

There are a great many other respects in which Mason could be improved. These all take time. Some of them are directly dependent upon individuals, and some individuals seem unable to change after reaching a certain age. But these improvements are as sure to come, as is death, Mason is prosperous and is surrounded by a prosperous country, and that is the basis of an up-to-date and live city. There may be particulars in which this city is not what you would have it, but it is better now than in the past and will grow steadily better in the future,

--0--During this past summer there was trouble brewing between Panama and Costa Rica. These two hot headed tropical countries were on the verge of war. Secretary Hughes acted promptly to protect the interests of the United States along the canal zone. Marines were sent and both countries were forcibly impressed that this country was keenly interested in the affair and that they would not stand idly by while a war was started. No war has resulted. Again peace reigns in the jungle. No time was lost. No lives were lost. Little expense was incurred. The many countries of the world were not called into conference over the matter. Now we are wondering what would have happened if this matter had to go to Europe for the consideration of the League of Nations. Would there have been prompt action, and would the interests of the United States have been served as well as the way it was disposed of. Somehow, we cannot help but believe that European countries and their representatives would not have been particularly interested in the matter, and if they had, there is a question of whether they would have protected the interests of this country in a canal which they would like to have supervision over.

There has been considerable dissatisfation with the condition of South Main street for the past two years and the people who have had to travel this half-mile stretch of stone piles and chuck-holes have had a right to kick. There is no doubt but that the condition of this road has cost the city more in lost business than it would have cost to put it in good condition.

City officials have expected all along that the county would begin imthe morning telling other girls of the proving this road. One development after another has delayed the matter. Big expenditures on other streets has kept the street fund low and the tendency was not to spend money for temporary repairs. This same thing has been true of north Main street in the city, on which work has now been

What about that bad corner of Ash and West streets? Must some one be killed there before a "Danger" sign is put up? There have been seven or eight accidents on this corner in the past five weeks. People who drive sanely get around it all right, but it is a well known fact that many drivers are not careful.

Why worry yourself about when the world will end. You were not here when it was started, and probably you won't be when it blows up.

Never mind what others think of you. If you don't measure up very high in your own estimation, what can you expect of other people.

There's plenty of room at the top of the ladder of success, but the top won't come down to you. You'll have to climb.

formed a Flag very unique in appearance, but it served its purpose, and the Sunday school had the satisfaction of knowing that it showed its patriotism as best it could,

At 1:30 W. M. Webb, the chairman called the meeting to order, all sung "Auld Lang Syne," Rev. Hartzog offered prayer, R. J. Bullen welcomed the pioneers and their families, telling of the trails and "chopped out" roads of early days, and the primitive conveyances in use, in contrast to the good roads and automobiles of today, which made it so easy for all to reach the place of meeting. J. W. Freeman, who has lived in Aurelius nearly 84 years, responded in much the same strain, calling attention to the many improvements that had been made during his life there.

Mr. Ives, the county president was unable to be present, and the secretary, Mrs. Adams, explained the object of the township meeting and gave opportunity for any who wished to join the county society, and the result was twenty-nine new names added to the membership list. Rev. Hartzog told of the Pioneer History of Ingham county now in the hands of the publishing committee, and of the plans for securing its publication. Jackson last week and the week be-

In his intimable manner, Wm. M. Webb, gave the history of District No. 4, which was organized at his father's Sunday at Grover Ackers'. home on November 19, 1842. He Miss Letha Scutt was a week end named the families living in the dis- guest at her aunt's, Mrs. Charley Ecktrict and the number of children they sent to this school, also the teachers who presided in the old log school house. From this district 26 boys went into the Civil War, and thirteen of them are still living, but only one, Mr. Webb, has remained at his old home in the district.

Mrs. John Bateman gave a complete history of District No. 5 by farms and owners, a valuable mass of information for the Ingham County History.

District No. 6, known as the "Plains District," lies in Aurelius and Onondaga townships in Ingham county and Hamlin and Eaton Rapids townships in Eaton county, and is best known from the fact that it was the home of the Montgomery family, whose names figure, prominently in the annals of both Ingham and Eaton counties. Robert Montgomery with his wife and five sons, settled in this district on land obtained from the government. The district was organized in 1837, and a log school house erected the same year, the present school house being built in 1865. In 1879 the district voted money for the ornamental pine trees set along the Plains road. In early days the stage coach passed along this road between Eaton Rapids and Mason. The road was fine and horseback riding a favorite pastime in those days, and this road became a rather famous race track.

Mrs. Mattie Evelin began with the year 1836, in her history of District No. 7, at the time Joshua and Henry Freeman settled there. The Freeman's cut the road through from Jackson and built a bridge over Grand river, which is still known as the "Freeman Bridge." J. W. Freeman, now 85 years old still lives on a part of the farm his father took from the government. J. C. Bond, Sr. is the oldest man born in the district and still living there, and was born on the farm where he now lives. The first school was kept in a log house of one room, in which lived a family by the name of Stewart. Here the boys and girls gathered and were taught by Mrs. Stewart. Mrs. Laura Bunker described early life and school days in District No. 9. followed by Mrs. Lucy Robertson of District No. 10. The first school was taught in 1856, in a shanty standing in the mill yard, but a school house was built that same year. Ten stalwart sons took their places in the ranks during the Civil war; some served three years and got home just in time to help pay the tax to clear Aurelius township from the draft. L. A. Parker recalls the fact that he got out timber for scythe snaths which he delivered to the state prison at Jackson, to pay his share which amounted to $36. Some Scrap iron is worth about $50 a ton. Mainspring steel for watches is worth about $22,000 a ton. Both are made from the same kind of ore. What makes the difference in price?

It's the TREATMENT the metal receives, that's all. The dollars you handle idly, spend foolishly, invest carelessly, are worth but little to you in the long run. The dollars you save and carefully invest, increase in value and lay the foundation for a fortune. The dollars in each case are the same. It's the TREATMENT they receive that makes the difference. The All-Stars were retired in order the first three innings. In the fourth with two gone Gehringer hit, but died at first when V. Berry fanned. In the fourth with one gone, Shaw walked. Carven was safe when Shaw was caught at second. Tuttle then connected with a fast one and lifted it far over the leftfielder's head. Carven attempted to score from first but was caught by a step by some fast work. This was the closest that that the county boys came to scoring, and although Grimm seemed to ease up later in the game, the fast fielding Senators did not let another man get

RUSSIA'S BREAKDOWN CREATES RYE MARKET

Prof. Cox Of M. A. C. Believes That There Will Be Foreign Market For-Mich. Rye For Years To Come.

Agricultural breakdown in Russia has served to materially strengthen the rye market in this country, and Michigan, as the leading rye state, is particularly affected.

"The famous Riga district, once the great exporting rye section of Russia, would import rye this year if they could get it," said Professor N. I. Vavilov, of the Bureau of Applied that to stoop is agony. No use to rub Botany and Plant Breeding, Petro-Michigan Agricultural College. "Conditions are such in Russia that only this Mason citizen. a comparatively small acreage was planted, and this has been seriously damaged by drought."

interest in Rosen inally from Russia and which is now in great demand as an export rye, was shown by Professor Vavilov. Michigan Rosen is being shipped to Denmark, Germany, and other countries which originally brought this type of rye from the Riga district of Russia.

There will apparently be a strong demand for American export rye for some years to come, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, of the M. A. C. farm crops department. It is not likely that Russia can make a quick recovery agriculturally, and Michigan farmers can feel fairly certain that the price of rye will continue to be much nearer the price of wheat than it was before the war.

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO CULL YOUR FLOCK?

Five Tests Enable You To Keep The Hen That Lays Regularly And To Get Rid Of The Lonfer.

Intelligent poultry culling must be parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Spaulding. based on the annual production of the hen and not any single characteristic. The hen possesses this one feminine fault of telling all she does. For instance, the past record of the hen is revealed by certain pigmentation changes that occur with egg production. A yellow far xanthophyl lines the legs, beak, earlobe, vent and whole epidermis of the hen's body. This fat is used up during egg production and bleaches in the order of |. most rapid blood circulation. If the ment from the vent bleaches white, this week. from the earlobe with 13 eggs, from the beak with 36 eggs, and from the legs or shanks with 80 eggs.

These changes enables one to detect which hens have been profitable winter layers and gives one a record on the past performance of the hen. The present production can be determined by making measurements between the keel bone and pelvic arches. A laying hen will show a span of four to six finger capacity in this region. In a dormant condition the Potter part of last week. keel bone becomes contracted, reducing the measurement to a two or three finger spread. This simply means the keel bone oscillates with yolk elaboration. Any hen that is laying shows a wide spread and in a non-laying condition it becomes contracted. The future production test can be most accurately determined by noting the condition of the hen's feathers. Regarding the molt, if pin feathers are showing all over the hen's body, this would indicate that she is finishing her year's production. If the hen molts late in October or November, she is a most desired type for the simple reason that she is a long distance layer, and in estimating production, a hen must put in from ten to twelve months work in order to secure a high yearly record. It is a pflysical impossibility for a ben to make a high record in three or four months. Thirty per cent of the hens in Michigan have been found unprofitable, and in each case the productive months of this type of hen is limited to the spring months. A broody character or rest periods can be quickly and easily determined by observing the changes that occur in the wing. The wing is divided distinctly Size Of Meals, What Should Be Eaten into two parts, the flight feathers, ten in number, and the secondaries. Between the flight and secondary feathers can be noted a short feather, The prevalent malnutrition among known as the thumb feather. OR many years the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been perfecting an organization with the sole purpose of giving the consuming public a maximum of service at a mininum of cost.

To do this, four large refineries have been built and equipped; 3,700 bulk stations have been placed at strategic points throughout the 11 states served; more than 1,300 service stations have been located at convenient points so that Standard Oil Company (Indiana) products may be obtained every few miles in the country and every few blocks in the city. ,

Fleets of tank wagons and motor trucks. are always in service ready to deliver Red Crown Gasoline, Perfection Kerosene and other Standard Oil products to consumers, wherever they may live.

In organizing this vast net work of service, those responsible for the management of the Company have had two major objects in view; first to reduce the cost of manufacturing, marketing and distributing to the lowest point possible; second, to make prices which would be fair to the consuming public.

While mindful of the rights and privileges of its competitors, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes that its first duty is to the consuming public.

During the present unsettled conditions in the petroleum industry, this Company has reduced the selling price of its goods as rapidly as sound management would permit, and it proposes to continue this practice.

This policy conforms to the established practice of the Company of letting service take care of volume, and volume take care of profits and return to the 20,621 stockholders, not one of whom owns as much as 10 per cent of the capital stock.

CHAPTER XVI.

Wherein Young Mr. Lincoln Safely Passes Two Great Danger Points and Turns Into the Highway of His Manhood.

For days thereafter the people of New Salem were sorely troubled. Abe Lincoln, the ready helper in time of need, the wise counselor, the friend of all-"old and young, dogs and horses," as Samson was wont to say-the pride and hope of the little cabin village, was breaking down under his grief. He seemed to care no more for work or study or friendship. He wandered out in the woods and upon the prairies alone. Many feared that he would lose his reason.

There was a wise and merry-hearted man who lived a mile or so from the village. His name was Bowlin Green. Those days when one of middle age pany.' had established himself in the affections of a community, its members had a way of adopting him. So Mr. Green had been adopted into many families from Beardstown to Springfield. He was everybody's "Uncle Bowlin." He had a most unusual circumference and the strength to carry it. His ruddy cheeks and curling locks and kindly dark eyes and large head were details of importance. Under all were a heart with the love of men, a mind of unusual understanding and a hand skilled in all the arts of the Kentucky pioneer. He could grill a venison steak and roast a grouse and broil a chicken in a way which had filled the countryside with fond recollections of his hospitality; he could kindle a fire with a bow and string, a pine stick and some shavings; he could make anything from a splint broom to a rocking horse with his jack-knife. Abe Lincoln was one of the many men who knew and loved him.

On a warm, bright afternoon early in September, Bowlin Green was going around the pasture to put his fence in repair, when he came upon young Mr. Lincoln. The latter sat in the shade of a tree on the hillside. He looked "terribly peaked," as Uncle Bowlin has said in a letter.

"Why, Abe, where have you been?" he asked. "The whole village is scared. Samson Traylor was here last night lookin' for ye."

I had a lot of thinking to do-the kind of thinking that every man must do for himself. I've got the brush cleared awey, at last, so I can see through. I had made up my mind to go down to your house for the night and was trying to decide whether I have energy enough to do it."

"Come on; it's only a short step," urged the big-hearted Bowlin. "What I feel the need of, just now, is a week or two of sleep," said Mr. Lincoln, as he rose and started down the long hill with his friend. Some time later Bowlin Green gave

Samson this brief account of what happened in and about the cabin:

"He wouldn't eat anything. He wanted to go down to the river for u dip, and I went with him. When we got back, I induced him to take off his clothes and get into bed. He was fast asleep in ten minutes. When night came I went up the ladder to bed. He was still asleep when I came down in the morning. I went out and did my chores. Then I cut two ventson steaks, each about the size o' my hand, and a half moon of bacon. I pounded the venison to pulp with a little salt and bacon mixed in. I put it on the broiler and over a bed o' hickory coals. I got the coffee into the pot and upnext to the fire and some potatoes in the ashes. I basted a bird with bacon strips and put it into the roaster and set it back o' the broiling bed. Then I made some biscuits and put 'em into the oven. I tell you, in a little while the smell o' that fireplace would have 'woke the dead-honest! Abe began to stir. In a minute I heard him call:

"Say, Uncle Bowlin, I'm goin' to get up an' eat you out o' house and home. I'm hungry and I feel like a new man. What time is it?

"'It'll be nine o'clock by" the time you're washed and dressed,' I says.

"'Well I declare,' says he, 'I've had about sixteen hours o' solid sleep. The world looks better to me this morn-

"At the table I told him a story and got a little laugh out of him. He stayed with me three weeks, choring around the place and taking it easy. He read all the books I had, until you and Doc Allen came with the law books. Then he pitched into them. I think he has changed a good deal since Ann died. He talks a lot about God and the hereafter."

In October young Mr. Lincoln returned to his surveying, and in the last month of the year to Vandalia for an extra session of the legislature, where he took a stand against the convention system of nominating candidates for public office. Samson went to Vandalia for a visit with him and to see the place before the session ended. The next year, in a letter to his brother, he says:

"Vandalia is a small, crude village. It has a strong flavor of whisky, profanity and tobacco. The night after I got there I went to a banquet with Abe Lincoln. Heard a lot about the dam nigger-loving Yankees who were trying to ruin the state and country with abolition. There were some stories like those we used to hear in the lumber camp, and no end of powerful talk, in which the names of God and the Savior were roughly handled. A few of the statesmen got drunk, and after the dinner was over two of them jumped on the table and danced down glasses. Nobody seemed to be able to stop them. I hear that they had to pay several hundred dollars for the damage done. You will be apt to think that there is too much liberty here in the West, and perhaps that is so, but the fact is these men are not half so bad as they seem to be. Lincoln tells me that they are honest, almost to a man, and sincerely devoted to the public good as they see it. I asked Abe Lincoln, who all his life has associated with rough-tongued, drinking men, how he managed to hold his own course and keep his talk and habits so

"'Why, the fact is,' said he, 'I have associated with the people who lived around me only part of the time, but I have never stopped associating with myself and with Washington and Clay and Webster and Shakespeare and Burns and DeFoe and Scott and Blackstone and Parsons. On the whole, I've been in pretty good com-

"He has not yet accomplished much in the legislature. I don't think that he will until some big issue comes along. 'I'm not much of a hand at! hunting squirrels,' he said to me the other day. 'Wait till I see a bear.' The people of Vandalia and Springfield have never seen him yet. They don't know him as I do. But they all respect him-just for his good-fellowship, honesty and decency. I guess that every fellow with a foul mouth hates himself for it and envies the man who isn't like him. They begin to see his skill as a politician, which has shown itself in the passage of a bill removing the capital to Springfield. Abe Lincoln was the man who put it through. But he has not yet uncovered his best talents. Mark my word, some day Lincoln will be a big

"The death of his sweetheart has aged and sobered him. When we are together he often sits looking down with a sad face. For a while not a word out of him. Suddenly he will begin saying things, the effect of which will go with me to my grave, although I cannot call back the words and place them as he did: He is what I would call a great captain of words. Seems as if I heard the band playing while they marched by me as well dressed and stepping as proud and regular; as the Boston Guards. In some great battle between Right and prophetic truth of these words began to reveal itself. A bill was being put through the legislature denouncing the growth of abolition sentiment and its activity in organized societies and upholding the right of property in slaves. Suddenly Lincoln had come to a fork in the road. Popularity, the urge of many friends, the counsel of wealth and power, and public opinion, the call of good politics pointed in one direction, and the crowd went that way. It was a stampede. Lincoln stood alone at the corner. The crowd beckoned. but in vain. One man came back and joined him. It was Dan Stone, who was not a candidate for re-election. His political career was ended. There were three words on the sign-board pointing toward the perilous and lonely road that Lincoln proposed to follow. They were the words Justice and Human Rights. Lincoln and Dan Stone took that road in a protest, declaring that they "believed the institution of slavery was founded upon injustice and bad policy." Lincoln had followed his conscience, instead of the crowd.

At twenty-eight years of age he had safely passed the great danger point in his career. The declaration at Decatur, the speeches against Douglas, the miracle of turning 4,000,000 beasts into 4,000,000 men, the sublime utterance at Gettysburg, the wise parables, the second inaugural, the innumerable acts of mercy, all of which lifted him into undying fame, were now possible. room city of Chicago." Henceforth he was to go forward with the growing approval of his own spirit asked, with a smile. and the favor of God.

> BOOK THREE CHAPTER XVII.

Wherein Young Mr. Lincoln Betrays Ignorance of Two Highly Important Subjects.

There were two subjects of which Mr. Lincoln had little understanding. They were women and finance. Until they had rightly appraised the value of his friendship, women had been wont to regard him with a riant curiosity. He had been aware of this, and for years had avoided women, save those of old acquaintance. When he lived at the tavern in the village, often he had gone without a meal rather than expose himself to the eyes of strange women. The reason for this was well understood by those who knew him. The young man was an exceedingly sensitive human being. No doubt he had suffered more than any one knew from ill-concealed ridicule, but he had been able to bear it with composure in his callow youth. Later nothing roused his anger like an attempt to ridicule him. Two women he had regarded with great tenderness-his foster mother, the second wife of Thomas Lincoln, and Ann Rutledge. Others had been to him, mostly, delightful but inscrutable beings. The company of women and of dollars had been equally unfamiliar to him. He had said more than once in his young manhood that he felt embarrassed in the presence of either, and knew not quite how to behave himself-an exaggeration in which there was no small amount of truth. In 1836 the middle frontier had entered upon a singular phase of its development. Emigrants from the East and South and from overseas had been pouring into it. The summer before the lake and river steamers had been crowded with them, and their wagons had come in long processions out of the East. Chicago had begun its phenomenal growth. A frenzied speculation in town lors had been under way in that community since the autumn of '35. It was spreading through the state. Imaginary cities were laid out on the lonely prairies and all the corner lots sold to eager buyers and paid for with promises. Millions of conversational, promissory dollars, based upon the gold at the foot of the rainbow, were changing hands day by day. The legislature, with an empty treasury behind it, voted twelve millions for river improvements and imaginary railroads and canals, for which neither surveys nor estimates had been made, to serve the dream-built cities of the speculator. If Mr. Lincoln had had more experience in the getting and use of dollars and more acquaintance with the shrinking timidity of large sums, he would have tried to dissipate these illusions of grandeur. But he went with the crowd, every member of which had a like inexperience.

In the midst of the session Samson Traylor arrived in Vandalia on his visit to Mr. Lincoln.

"I have sold my farm," said Samson to his old friend the evening of his arrival.

"Did you get a good price?" Mr. Lincoln asked.

"All that my conscience would allow me to take," said Samson. "The man offered me three dollars an acre in cash, and ten dollars in notes. We compromised on seven dollars, all casb."

"What are you going to do now that you have sold out?"

"I was thinking of going up to Tazewell county."

"Why don't you go to the growing and prosperous town of Springfield?" Mr. Lincoln asked. "The capitol will be there, and so will I. It is going to be a big city. Men who are to make history will live in Springfield. You must come and help. I shall need your friendship, your wisdom and your sym-pathy. I shall want to alt often by your fireside. You'll find a good school there for the children. If you'll think

"We need you plenty," Samson answered, "We kind o' think o' you as one o' the family. I'll talk it over with Sarah and see. Never mind the job. If I keep you behavin' yourself, it'll be tob enough. Anyway, I guess we can manage to get along."

"I've had a' talk with Stuart and have some good news for Harry and Bim," said young Mr. Lincoln, "Stuart thinks she can get a divorce under the law of 1827. I suppose they are still interested in each other?"

"He's like most of the Yankees. Once he gets set it's hard to change him. The Kelsos have moved to Chicago, and I don't know how Bim stands. If Harry knows, he hasn't said a word to us about it."

"I'm interested in that little romance," said the legislator. "It's our duty to do what we can to secure the happiness of these young lovers. Tell Harry to come over here. I want to talk with him."

CHAPTER XVIII.

In Which Mr. Lincoln, Samson and Harry Take a Long Ride Together and the Latter Visit the Flourishing Little City of Chicago.

Mr. Lincoln had brought the papers which Harry was to take to Bim, and made haste to deliver them. The boy was eager to be off on his mission. The fields were sown. The new buyer was coming to take possession in two weeks. Samson and Harry had finished their work in New Salem.

"Wait till tomorrow and maybe I'll go with ye," said Samson. "I'm anxious to take a look at that little mush-

"And buy a few corner lots?" Abe

"No; I'll wait till next year. They'll be cheaper then. I believe in Chicago. It's placed right-on the waterway to the north and east, with good country on three sides and transportation on the other. It can go into partnership with Steam Power right away and begin to do business. Your grain and pork can go straight from there to Albany and New York and Boston and Baltimore without being rehandled. When railroads come-if they ever do -Steam Power will be shoving grain and meat and passengers into Chicago from every point of the compass," Abe Lincoln turned to Sarah and said: "This is a growing country. You ought to see the cities springing up there in the legislature. I was looking with great satisfaction at the erop when Samson came along one day and fell on it. He was like a frost in midsummer."

"The seed was sown too early," Samson rejoined. "You and I may live to see all the dreams of Vandalla come

"And all the nightmares, too," said the young statesman.

"Yes, we're going to wake up and find a cold morning and not much to eat in the house and the wolf at the door, but we'll live through it."

Then the young statesman proposed: "If you are going with Harry, I'll go along and see what they've done on the Illinois and Michigan canal. Some contractors who worked on the Erie canal will start from Chicago Monday to look the ground over and bid on the construction of the southern end of it. I want to talk with them when they come along down the line."

"I guess a few days in the saddle would do you good," said Samson,

"I reckon it would. I've been cloyed on house air and oratory and

Harry rode to the village that afternoon to get "Colonel" and Mrs. Lukins to come out to the farm and stay with Sarah while he and Samson were Josiah, now a sturdy boy of thirteen, stood in the dooryard, holding the two saddle ponies from Nebraska which teen years old, stood beside him. Sarah, whose face had begun to show the wear of years full of loneliness and hard work, was packing the saddle-bags, now nearly filled, with extra socks and shirts and doughnuts and bread and butter.

They met Abe Lincoln at the tavern, where he was waiting on a big horse which he had borrowed for the trip from James Rutledge. Without delay, the three men set out on the north road in perfect weather. From the hill's edge they could look over a wooded plain running far to the east. As they rode on, the young statesman repeated a long passage from one of the sermons of Dr. William Ellery

Channing on the "Instability of Human Affairs." "I wish that I had your memory,"

Samson remarked. "My memory is like a piece of metal," said the young legislator. "Learning is not easy for me. It's rather slow work-like engraving with a tool. But when a thing is once printed on my memory it seems to stay there. It doesn't rub out. When I run across a great idea, well expressed, I like to put it on the wall of my mind where I can live with it. In this way every man can have his own little art gallery and be in the company of great men."

They forded a creek in deep water, where a bridge had been washed away.

ANNUAL WHITE SWEET CLOVER YIELDS WELL

New Variety May Possess Important Possibilities.

When Farmer Finds His Hay Supply Will Be Short This Crop Can Be Planted-Grows Well During First Season.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

It has been determined that sweet clover, which grows luxuriantly along roadsides and out-of-the-way, places, and which is grown in some sections as a forage crop, has one strain which is annual. The annual sweet clover occasionally appears in patches of the more common biennial form, either as single specimens or in small groups. Seed of the annual has been separated, and in recent years it has been prop-

Sweet Clover Hay Curing in the Cock agated. These points are brought out in Department 'Circuiar 169, Annual White Sweet Clover and Strains of the Biennial Form, recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture. The nature of this new variety, according to the bulletin, is such as to indicate that it may have important possibilities. Probably its greatest use for hay will be as an emergency crop. When a stand of clover has been winter killed, or when for any reason a farmer finds that his hay supply will be short, this variety can be seeded during the spring and, provided lime and the proper bacteria are present, will yield a good hay crop. Where rainfall is sufficient it may be seeded even after wheat harvest. It makes a good growth the first season, and experiments in Iowa and Michigan have shown that it, may be seeded with oats, to be harvested after the grain is cut. It grows rapidly, and for this reason will keep ahead of weeds. The annual has a smaller and more woody root than the biennial form, and crown or resting buds are not formed. The stems, branches, leaves, flowers, pods and seeds are indistinguishable from those of the blennial form, but during the senson of seeding the plant grows more rapidly, blossoms, fruits and dies. It blooms early and ripens seed in August when seeded early. Seed of the annual form is still very scarce and high priced and, since it cannot be distinguished from seed of the ordinary biennial, should be purchased with caution.

During this time 3,576 certificates of membership in the campaign have been issued by the department. In order to secure a certificate, a stock breeder or poultryman must fill out a blank, which is supplied by the bureau of animal industry, stating that he will use only purebred sires. A report recently issued by the department shows that 45 states and two possessions—Guam and Porto Rico-have stock breeders or poultrymen enrolled in the campaign. Virginia leads in the movement with 1,130 certificates issued, but Nebraska has the largest number of live stock enrolled.

BEST DIVISION OF PASTURES

20-Acre Tract Will Yield More Grass Where Herd is Shifted to Small Fields.

Dividing pastures into smaller fields is time and money well spent. A 20-acre pasture divided will yield much more grass where the herd is shifted from one field to the other than if allowed to tramp on the entire field at will.

BEST CONDITIONS IN WOODS

Trampling of Soil by Different Animale Among Growing Trees It Not Favored.

You can't do two things at once. If the best growing conditions are wanted in a woods, grazing animals must be kept out. Hard trampling of soil does about the same amount of good in a woodlot as it does in a ld of growing crem.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XXIX.--IOWA

THE State was originally occupied by the Iown Indians. The actual meaning of the word has been interpreted in several ways. Some say it means "beautiful land," but the more likely derivation is the Algonquin word "ajawa" which means "across" or "beyond." This was probably applied to this tribe of Indians by the Illinois tribes who were hostile to them, and resided on the eastern side of the Mississippi river. The early white visitors to this region included Marquette and Joliet, who landed here on their explorations of the Mississippi in 1673.

The first settlement was made by a French Canadian named Julian Dubuque. He obtained in 1788 a large grant of land from the Indians, where the city which was named after him now stands. Here he flourished, mining lead and trading with the Indians, until his death in 1810, when this settlement was given

With the acquisition of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803, Iowa, which was a part of this huge territory, came into the hands of the United States from France. At first Iowa was a part of the Louisiana territory, then of Missouri territory, Later it formed a portion of Michigan territory and then of Wisconsin territory. In 1838, however, it attained a distinct individuality when it was formed into the Iowa territory.

Pioneers soon came in large numbers and about 1832 a substantial settlement was made near Burlington, and Dubuque was founded in 1833. The population grew so rapidly that in 1846 Iowa was admitted as the twenty-ninth state of the Union. Its area is 56,147 square miles and it has thirteen presidential electoral votes.

Specialized Farming Has Created Peculiar Conditions - Poultry 1s Quickest Meat Supply to Produce on Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Bepartment of Agriculture.) "The American farmer is not going to be able this year to pay freight on water," said a department official. "Water makes up a large part of fresh fruits and vegetables. The answer is that he must grow his own table food. He must also study the possibilities of substitution. This applies to vegetables, fruits, poultry, eggs and dairy products which must be transferred from commercial channels to home consumption if they are to come within the reach of the average farmer's Peculiar Condition Created.

"Specialized farming has created conditions of which comparatively few persons are aware. The grain farmer In many instances buys even his potatoes and green vegetables; the fruit farmer buys his dairy products; and even the man who raises milk for creamery, condensary or cheese factory is likely to send his cream or milk away, feed the skim milk or whey to the calves, and not make his own butter. This year, just as far as possible for him to alter his system in n single season, the department officials advise that he get back to the old plan which was aptly described as Tiving at home.' This means not so much remaining on the farm as it does deriving every practicable product for consumption from the farm.

"The average American farmer knows how to raise other crops than those on which he specializes, but it has seemed good business, or at least expedient, to devote his energies to very few or even a single cash crop and buy his necessities, just as is done in other specialized industries. The grain farmer is perfectly capable of raising his own potatoes, his green garden stuff, and melons, tomatoes and other garden fruits, to take the place of orchard fruits which in many parts of the country have been killed by the late freezes. If the farmer has a piece of really good garden ground he can add materially to the variety and wholesomeness of the farm food supply with scarcely any expenditure except for seeds, and seeds, fortunately, are lower this spring than for sev-meat supply will come out of his poultry yard, either in eggs or in table chickens and other fowls. Poultry is the quickest meat supply to produce, and the farmer will do well to build up a small flock as rapidly as possible. The increased freight rates on butter and eggs, together with the farm money shortage due to the disappointing returns from last year's crops, will make it advisable for many farmers' wives to return to the butter-making arts which they learned as girls from their mothers and which have been largely discontinued as farmers became specialists. "Fruit is likely to be scarce in large and important farming regions, but its place can largely be taken by vegetable products. Two things are clear. In the first place, the average farmer, as it stands now, cannot afford to pay freight on the water which makes up the larger part of both fresh and canned vegetables and fruits. In the second place, under existing conditions he can raise those things cheaper himself than he can buy them, and he can make many substitutes out of the garden and poultry yard if he sets out to do it. He has the material for the crops, while he is short of money. It is not good business to run in debt except for essentials of production." The Department of Asticulture will be and at unformation and at the article with the article will be diversity

HOW ISRAEL PUTNAM OUT-WITTED THE INDIAN "BEAR"

In 1758, while General Lyman's army was encamped near Fort Edward, N. Y., during the French and Indian war, sentinels at one outpost began to disappear mysteriously. Night after night a soldier was posted there and the next morning could not be found. Only the bravest men in the army were selected for this post. General Lyman gave orders for them to call out "Who goes there?" three times, if theyheard any noise, and then if no answer came, to fire. But the disappearances continued until his men were panicstricken and refus.d to take such a dangerous station,

At last Israel Putnam, a member of Major Rogers' rangers, volunteered to go on guard at that place and solve the mystery. One hot summer night he heard a rustling in the leaves near-by. The, sounds were those Helen Janeke is not able to be out of an animal scuttling about on the ground for food and, peering through the darkness, Putnam saw by the faint .tarlight a huge creature, which he recognized as a hear, slowly shambling toward him. Something in the bear's galt aroused the scout's suspicion. Putnam obeyed the general's orders. He challenged three times and then fired. A loud groaning and struggling noise followed and when the scout rushed forward he found the bear in its death agony. Then he turned the animal over. Enclosed in the shaggy skin, still clutching a tomahawk but stone dead, lay

The mystery was solved. The other sentinels had believed it was a real bear they heard and allowed the daring warrior to get near enough to use his tomuliawk before they learned their mistake. No more sentinels disappeared.

Some time after this event, Putnam was captured by the Indians, who started to burn him at the stake. Just as the flames began to scorch his buckskin garments, a heavy rain began to fall and put out the fire. The savages collected more dry wood and again began the torture. But again they were foiled.

A French officer appeared upon the scene, dashed through the ring of and left and released the scout, telling to Montreal to be questioned by General Montcalm. Putnam was held in Canada: until an exchange of prisoners allowed him to return to his home

Some Inside Facts about Bedrooms-

Says Mr. Goodfeeler:

"YOU SPEND ONE-THIRD OF YOUR TIME IN BED SO THAT YOU CAN DO GOOD WORK AND ENJOY THE OTHER TWO-THIRDS. IF THINGS ARE GOING WRONG, BET-TER GO SEE McDONALD ABOUT IT. GET SLEEP SERVICE."

-If we should tell you there was not a comfortable bed in your home you would probably resent it.

-And yet it is true that there are few homes that have beds that are as comfortable as they should be.

-We wish we could arrange to have every man, woman and child in this community sleep just one night on a bed equipped with the proper spring and mattress.

-Our big stock of springs and mattresses would not last a week.

-For there is many a man and woman who think their health is failing who simply lack rest-good refreshing sleep.

-They drive away sleep on the old style stiff, unyielding spring and a straw tick, or hard mattress.

-They can afford better beds, and would, if they only knew.

-That's why we wish they could sleep on REAL springs and a REAL mattress JUST ONCE.

Good springs do not sag like a hammock, or pitch to the side of the heavier weight. A good mattress is flexible, soft and restful. It will not become matted and hard. The right springs and mattress on your bed will make you feel years younger after a good night's rest.
