Little Splash By: Mindy Ruble of Summer

The last bell
of the school year rings
Everyone is overwhelmed with that feeling of freedom, and looking for an adventure

"I backpacked across Isle Royale on my summer break," said Junior Michael Woodward

For some, adventure meant lending a helping hand, and working in the community was worthwhile. From volunteer work to helping parents around the house, it was a great way to make the summer days useful.

"I have spent the last five years volunteering at Potter Park Zoo," said Junior Margaret West.

Athletes also found summer time slipping away because of sports. The hard work and dedication starts in the summer for many fall sports.

"A big part of my summer plans was to play baseball," said Freshman Travis Gordon.

No matter what the adventure was for the summer,
many students were disappointed to see the back-to-school ads in stores and commercials. Knowing that soon, instead of smelling tanning oils and chlorine, they would be smelling the good ol' halls of Everett.

To Ricardó,

The sexiest

Sometimes the bond between friends is deeper than we think. Juniors Joshua and Jeremiah Palmer not only share a freshman class, but because they're seniors, they are friends for life.

"We always are looking out for each other that makes it fun," said Brennan.

Making the most out of each day outside of school is a big part of friendship. Even when hanging in the car driving around town or working on homework together there is always room for fun.

"My friend and I go together every Wednesday night and have a 'G.O.U.' party (all 'G' for girls). We're the 'G.O.U.' call ourselves the bomb squad."

“You Love,” in the midst of unforgettable times, laughter and tears become a mixture of experiences that become a part of who we are and what we did for love.

Spirit

The crowd goes wild as the cheerleaders strut their stuff on the gym floor. No it's not a cheer competition, it's the first pep rally, which was held October

3 during seventh hour. The Friday was also Fall Homecoming

"I liked being a part of the pep rally," said Freshman Amanda Cook

Pep rallies were held to create spirit and motivation for the varsity game that night. The band played the school fight song to help boost that spirit.

"I thought that the seniors had more spirit than anyone," said Senior Bridgette Nixon.

There were only four pep rallies scheduled at the beginning of the year for the students to attend.

"We should have had more pep rallies," said Junior Alan Soderberg.

Even though the gym floor is covered with confetti and trash, it's a ritual to have pep rallies every year.

"I feel bad for the janitors who had to clean up after us," Senior Heidi Fountain.

For those pep rallies that were held, the students used that time to show their spirit. Whether they painted their faces or just chanted along with the cheerleaders, they all showed that they can't hide their Viking pride.

A Way Out

Oh no! You forgot about the big test in your next class. A few of your friends are skipping next hour. What do you do, stay and face the consequences of your forgetfulness, or go with your friends and have time to study over the weekend? But what if you get caught, what would your parents say?

Many students were faced with this situation every day. When asked strictly off the record, most admitted to skipping every now and then.

"I am always late to class and I don't like to go to class. So I just roam the halls," said freshman Emmanuel Jones.

Yet some students committed themselves and never cut class.

"I never skip," said Sophomore Chris Johnson. "Those who do are only hurting themselves."

In any classroom throughout the school you could find students with opposing views on the skipping issue, and it wasn't easy to tell who thought what.

"The students who want to learn will be in class," said History Teacher Roger Small. "The ones with no focus, won't."

Flap Jacks, home or racking your brain in class, the choice is usually simple as long as you are willing to face the consequences of your excursion.

The Bell

The halls seem to be very empty and you might even hear the echo of a voice yelling to someone from a distance. That's right, school's out for the day.

Many students find time to just loaf around and watch the tube, while others find it difficult to even get a chance to sit down.

"I can never get a chance to eat dinner with my family between school a job, and softball," said Senior Shari Goodwin.

As some found the time to make the extra money, others felt it just wasn't necessary to go job hunting quite yet.

"I'll be working for the rest of my life," said Freshman Jennifer Yerke. "I'd like to enjoy my teen years while I can."

While a majority of the students are busy with a job or a sporting event, some find it difficult to even find time for themselves.

"I just spend time helping take care of my brothers," said Sophomore Art Ford.

After a full day of school, students found many ways to spend their free time, whether it was being involved in a club or sport or if it was just hangin' out at home. However, a few spend their extra time helping others.

"After school I mentor kids in order to make sure they don't stray away from their school work and into bad habits," said senior Eva Christian.

Freshmen

You're on top of the world. You seem to be reaching a peak in your performance and you've finally found comfort in your position. The world is flipped upside down. Suddenly you're the low person on the ladder and after all your hard work they're calling you wet behind the ears. Your reign has ended, you're a freshman.

There were many different reactions to the move from middle school to high school. Every freshman saw this change in his/her own light, but many of the feelings were the same. Some of them never took to it, and didn't like it at all.

"It's no fun being the little kids in the middle of all of these big ones," said freshman Tashia Wilson.

While some of the freshmen complained about the move, others felt quite the opposite.

"I like being here better than eighth grade," said freshman Jerman Deard. "Here I can get to know all kinds of people."

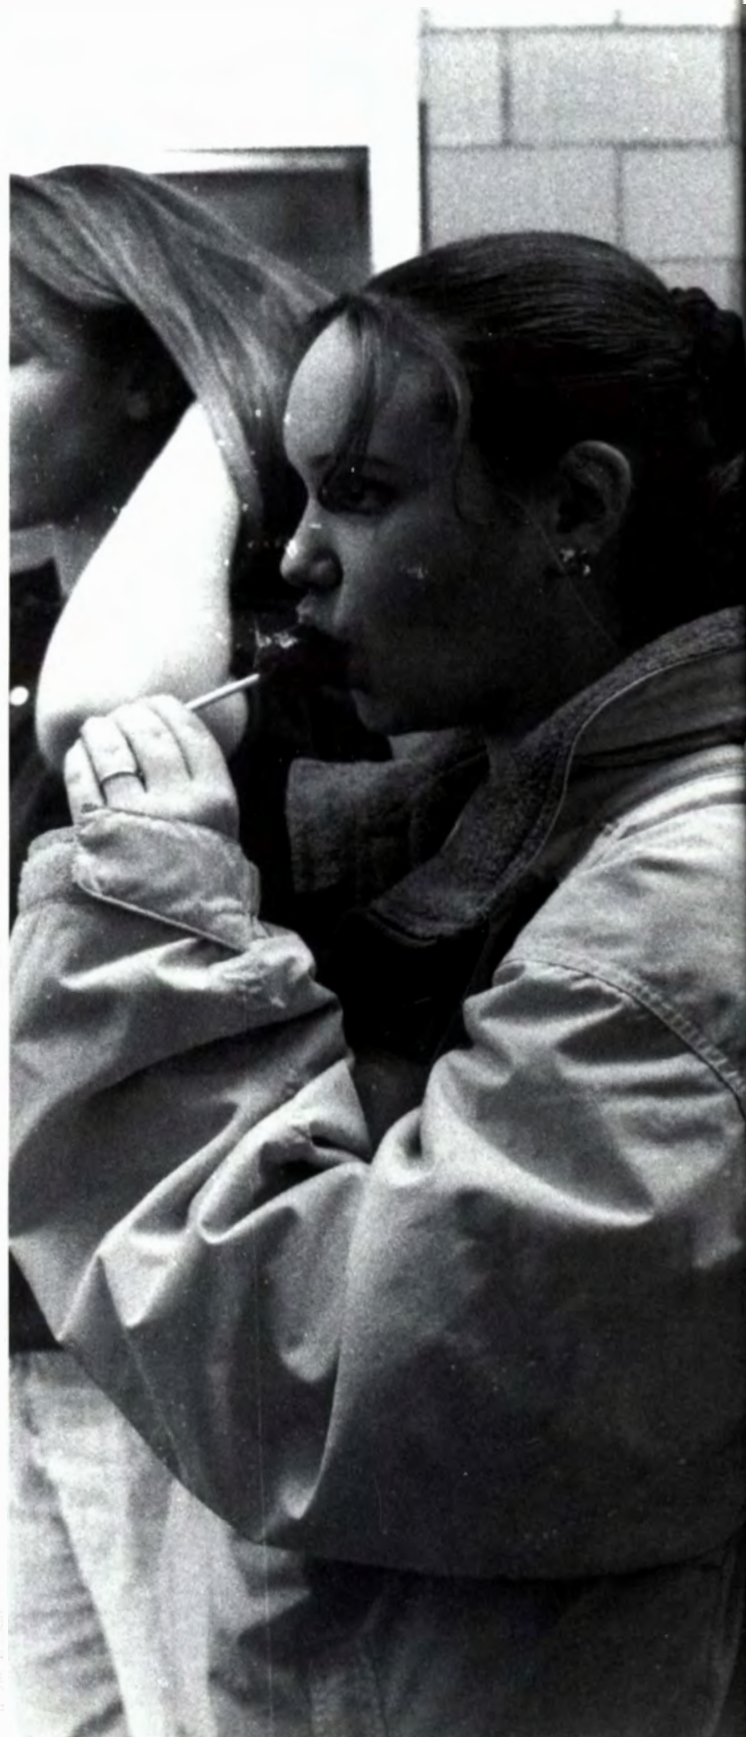

The freshmen who agreed with Deard tried to forget about the past. Instead, they looked to the future to see what was yet to come after this year. Some of these students weren't too enthusiastic about what was to come, and tried to enjoy what they had.

"This year is going to be the best because later there will be less freedom," said freshman TeShawna Robinson.

Whether or not they enjoyed it, or dreaded it, the freshmen made it through the year. Despite their opposing views on their journey, the important thing is that they did it together. That's what unites them as a class, and as a class they took this memorable step, here, only @ Everett.

"We're strong for Everett
Everett we sing"

This is what filled the air of the school's surrounding neighborhoods as the parade marched, showing off

school spirit
The annual parade is an important tradition in homecoming, adding student talent to school spirit

"What I liked best about the parade was being in it representing my class," said Freshman Autumn Morris

The band lead the way through the streets, and following close behind were the cheerleaders throwing assortments of candies at the spectators. The homecoming court members were piled in convertibles, showing their prince and princess waves to the crowd. And of course the court members were followed by the class floats. The floats showed off the hard work and dedication the students put forth to create spirit for the parade.

"I liked the floats because they showed off the creativity the school has," said junior Jon Dubois

Many felt that this was a great way to connect with the community, while others also felt it was a wonderful way to kick off the Homecoming game against the Eastern Quakers.

"When I heard the band coming into the stadium, I got an overwhelming feeling of hope for the game," said Junior Allen Soderberg.

We realize that only @ Everett can students find this kind of togetherness, to build spirit and motivation for the school.
In the back of our heads, we know that no matter what happens, we are "strong for Everett."

It's hard to believe that the four years of high school are coming to an end. All the time shared with friends and memories made will remain in our hearts and minds. All the amazing things that happened in high school and everything you learned are ready to be taken into the world and applied to your life.

"I'm really looking forward to being on my own and taking on responsibility," said Senior Brandon Dail.

A feeling of relief comes over the seniors and a sense of what this last year means causes anticipation and excitement. The year looks completely different knowing that this is all that's left.

"This last year is like having your hand stuck in a door and you're in pain," said Senior Gregory Deckner. "But then someone opens the door and you're relieved."

Many aspects of high school will inevitably be missed. All the friends that will be left behind and all the good times will soon be something of the past. Whether it was a special teacher pep rallies, football games or an awesome friend, the time is now winding down.

"I'm definitely happy to leave," said Senior Michelle Thompson. "I'm going to miss all the class downs, though."

The different directions we go will lead each one of us in the path of our life. The decisions we make will affect our future. It's scary sometimes thinking that the senior year is such a milestone in life. Keeping the memories forever in your mind and cherishing each moment we have left is a vital part of this last year. Farewell seniors, remember always that so many experiences have occurred. Only@Everett

Picture it The end of third hour, you're waiting for the bell to ring so that you can have a whole hour to do whatever you want You could spend it eating or studying for the next class But many students like spending that hour with their significant other If you walk through the halls during lunch or between class times you will find many couples holding hands or exchanging kisses

"My girlfriend and I have been dating for over a year and nine months," said senior Orlando Figueroa

Despite all the happy times shared between couples, being young, they were sometimes faced with tough decisions concerning their relationship

"As long as we talk and communicate, we always solve any problem that we run across," said senior Jeremy Case

Some students were found to be very sensitive when they see their loved one talking to another girl or boy However many feel very secure in their relationships so that they don't have to worry

"I think that I could trust Sean (Hettich)," said sophomore Jacqueline LeVeque "It doesn't bother me at all"

While some feel comfortable with the time they spend with their boyfriends or girlfriends, most feel overwhelmed with having to divide their time with their friends also

"Sometimes it's hard to decide if I want to see a movie with my boyfriend or my friends," said senior Crystal Cruz

Talented

Teens

Every day, over seventeen hundred students come to Everett from different homes, different neighborhoods, and different backgrounds. Most students hang around their own small clique of friends a lot of the time. At the end of the day, these same students turn their own way back to their houses in their neighborhoods. Yet in the face of this seemingly constant disconnection from each other, a group of students with different backgrounds, and different friends, joined together on a winter night in the name of something that they all shared: talent.

The Annual Everett talent show was held on Thursday December 18, in the large auditorium. As usual, there were all different kinds of acts: from a symphonic/concert band, to a one-man karate demonstration. The groups practiced for weeks and had to make it through tough try-outs conducted by Mr. Hicks, who coordinated the entire evening. Both the wide variety, and the level of the performances, got students excited about the show. "It's gonna be hype," said Drumline member Ryan Shaffer while warming up before the show.

While most attendees really enjoyed the performances of all the different acts, some seemed a little confused.

"Talent show?" asked junior Dusty Deam. "I thought it was a Glee Club concert."

The Talent Show displayed the gifts that the school possessed within its students, and what could be accomplished with both hard, and team work. In all with so many people who never come out of their own world, the Talent show encouraged all the stop and see the talent in everyone.

The Snowflake Ball. From doing your hair to ironing your suit, the process took a lot of preparation.

"The best part of the ball was getting dressed up and being with my friends," said Junior Derrick Reece.

Many students felt that it was a great way to do something different and still have a lot of fun. It is a four year tradition that many students look forward to.

"I went because we go every year and it's a lot of fun," said Senior Amanda Keyworth.

The activities room was decorated with snowflakes, crepe paper and candles, making it a great atmosphere for dancing and socializing. It was also a great way to get together with your friends before Winter break.

"I'll be really busy during Christmas break," said Sophomore Sean Dinkley. "So it was fun hanging out with my friends."

Many students would agree that the whole night was filled with memories that will last each one a lifetime. The majority said that they would definitely attend future Snowflake Balls.

"I can't wait 'till next year" said Freshman Lucy Finkel.

As most love to just stay in on a Saturday night and order pizza and maybe play cards, they definitely enjoyed their night out of the house. If only every Saturday could be a ball.

Trevor Dooth

All students should be aware that there's a way to make money in school legally! That's right, making money in school has been a part of the Applied Economics, JA class, for years. Basically, it presents the opportunity to earn that required Economics credit and make some cold hard cash at the same time.

about buying stock in the JA business. It's not a get-rich-quick class, but it can provide some of that very elusive pocket money. "It was fun, but I'm still broke," said Senior Matt Dyer.

The profits made by the business aren't always divided directly to the shareholders. The students usually decide to choose to donate some of the profit to a local charity, such as last year's donation to Crossroads, a haven for run-away youth.

"The class is designed to give the students a realistic and hands-on business experience, emphasizing real life and current applications," said Applied Econ teacher Greg

Making It Simple

Alisha Blanchard

Requirements for graduation include eight English credits. That's four dreaded years of English. Which, to most, doesn't sound appealing. But luckily for students there are many alternative English courses available to take that might make getting through high school a little easier.

Courses such as literature, newspaper drama and writers' workshop give students a wider variety of classes to take as English credits.

"I like having so many classes available for me to take," said Freshman Jacqueline Keyes.

Some students feel that high school is preparing you for college. If you don't plan on studying English in college, why focus on it so much in high school?

"The alternative English classes are a good thing," said Junior Donald Dunn. "Especially if you aren't going into the English field in college."

The majority of students think that having other classes to choose from for English opens up more opportunities. Many teachers feel that students should take additional English classes as electives.

"I think that out of the eight English credits needed, at least six of them should have to be literature courses," said American Literature teacher Helen Sarvis.

Whether you spend your high school years challenging yourself with AP classes or taking the easy route, we are there to learn. By being provided with a wide variety of English classes, having to take four years of it makes things not so bad after all.

Oodles of Art

Brenda Harrison

Students who didn't take an art class at Everett this year missed out for an environment in which a student is allowed to develop skills at their own pace, art class was the place to be. This year the art department offered a lunch hour independent study program and, new this year, a jewelry and crafting class. There were more opportunities to express their artistic passions here than anywhere else.

"Everett is a wonderful place and space to be in," said art instructor Pam Collins. "There are oodles of things going on here all the time."

The workmanship of Everett's artists could be seen everywhere. Displays in the library, main office, and small auditorium gave everyone a chance to show off his or her creations at school.

"We've had a display at the administration building three times in the past and the Wharton Center twice," said Collins.

Classes were available at every level of capability. Advanced students could take Art Studio, and for beginners, Art Survey offered an intro to various forms of art.

"Ms. Collins lets us grow in our own styles," said Kellie

Derry, third year art student. "You never see the same picture"

From Stick figures to masterpieces, the art program offers many opportunities for a variety of talent

Even if your greatest masterpiece is mainly stick figures scrawled in crayon, art class is still a worthwhile adventure. Some may have scoffed at the idea of having 'Jewelry & Crafts' on their schedule but, taking art at Everett was an important step in broadening one's cultural horizons.

Only @ Everett is a Jewelry and Crafts class offered to students

A Laughing Matter: Junior Kellie Berry shows that Jewelry class is an enjoyable and worthwhile experience as an art class. Berry, as well as many other students, took advantage this semester of the first time that a Jewelry and Crafts class has been available at Everett.

Flying Over Seas

Zenika Gibson

A koosh ball flies across the room for a student to catch and answer a question. This is a common activity in some foreign language classes. It demonstrates martial arts with a sword in front of the class or the teacher is cooking food for the first time. "Students learn by seeing and hearing things first," said Spanish teacher Pamela Schaefer Brown. "I teach a lot with pictures or toys."

Teachers use creative activities to keep students involved and interested in learning different cultures

Teachers see the outcome of their work when students participate and like going to class to learn. Teaching the culture is key for teachers and if playing catch with a koosh ball having cookouts, or having swords swung in the front of the class is what will get their attention, then that is what teachers will do.

It seems teachers will do anything to keep a student interested. In foreign language classes, teachers go out of their way to teach students a language and a culture. "In French class, we celebrate French holidays to make the students aware of the activities French would participate in," said French teacher Renee Lyons. "Culture is the way people live and the things they do. Some students can't relate with the culture by just being told."

"Once students are interested in their class they don't try for just a good grade, students soon grow on their whole new culture and enjoy."

"Japanese is a hard language," said Junior Kristin Reed. "But it will help in the future."

Surfin' USA: Senior Geoffrey Ellis cruises the internet in the Technology Resource Center. Ellis uses the time he spends in the resource center to his advantage, as a time to get on one of the 24 new computers and get on-line or just get some work done.

Check It Out

Tarah Collins

The Library For many it means a chance to socialize and get on-line. Although it may be a nice break from the classroom and the work that goes with it, in actuality the library is a room specifically designed for students to get work done, research topics or find a book.

"I don't believe most students use their time in the library to their advantage," said freshman Amanda Cooke.

Knowing that students don't take their library time seriously, teachers are hesitant to take the time out of class for a mini recess. Many students do complain, however, that they do not receive enough library time.

"I give my students time in the library when they need it," said History teacher Roger Small. "I'm not going to let them sit in the library and talk."

Librarians Pat Pochert and Ms. Rochek both do extensive reading each month to decide which books would make good additions to the over 20,000 books in the library already. Most of their book ordering is done on-line.

"I think the library does a good job of keeping students connected to the internet," said Junior Dan Sikounnavong.

Pochert and Roche also have workshops to help students and teachers find well documented research

Students vs. Teachers in a war of how time should be spent when given a chance to go to the library from the internet.

"Anyone can put phony documents on line," said Roche.

The librarians are doing a great job keeping the library up to date and resourceful. Students should use the time that they receive to their advantage.

Sleeping On The Job: Junior Jerome White takes a little nap while working on his Physics homework. New math books cause controversy between students and teachers due to the amount of work

Some say math is "boring" and "hard." Many students have different opinions about how hard math is. Some say it's easy, while others say it's difficult. Although the new books are thought to be more difficult, many students think they improve their understanding of the subject. The math department consists of ten math teachers with many different teaching styles. Since math is a crucial subject, teachers are very concerned with students' success and they try to help in many ways.

This year the math department got a whole new set of books. Many students thought they were "okay," but some said they contained too much work. "I love the new books," said math teacher Sonia Marali. "They help the teacher see each student's comprehension of concepts at different points throughout the chapter."

"The new books are a lot harder," said freshman Gabe Davis. "There's just too much work."

Dorenda Harmon

Change is inevitable, and this year, change came to the performing arts department. The guitar and choir courses taught in the past by Dr. M.J. Montague were cut in the event of her departure from the school. In their place, many new classes were developed. For instance, band director Josh Hicks turned his men's glee club into a men and women's ensemble, a class that was offered fifth hour. Students were required to audition for placement.

Trish Howey returned to direct orchestra full-time. She also started a beginning strings class for students who had no previous experience in orchestra, a type of class not usually available at the high school level.

There also was a freshman orchestra and an after-school bell choir added. The Greenbush High School Symphony Orchestra started a mentoring program with the string students, which allowed them to learn and play with the professional musicians at a higher level of learning.

"The new classes provided more opportunities for students to become familiar with music," said Junior Ben Cornell, a concert master for the advanced orchestra.

In addition to all the new classes, the performing arts department maintained its traditional roster: beginning, jazz, concert, symphonic and marching band, chamber orchestra, advanced

Sweatin' It Out

High school prepares students for the real world. If students must take English, math, science and gym? For the past couple of years there has been a debate on whether or not gym classes should be required or just an elective credit. "What is gym going to do to help me with my future?" is a question for many students.

Many students say that physical education should just be for fun, not a mandatory class, as it is currently.

"I like gym because my friends are in my class," said sophomore Samantha Sims. "It also gives me time to get in a good workout."

Others think that gym is more than just running around and performing stunts. It prepares students for the real world. Being in shape is a very important part of many students' lives.

"I should be required to learn how to deal with every day activities and become more familiar with exercising," said Athletic Director Denny Hill.

Many students have taken another route. Classes such as marching band, dance, and health classes also include a gym class and have their PE credit waived.

"Gym class is really fun," said Freshman Travis Gordon. "It's a time to relax and have fun while earning your credit at the same time."

The question remains whether gym should be a required class or just another elective

Although there are many reasons for taking gym classes, gym really what people need to prepare for their future? The debate continues, but most agree gym isn't too bad. You get to hang with your friends and get in a little exercise.

Stepping Into History

Brenda Harrison

When 55 remarkable men gathered together in Philadelphia in the summer of 1787 they could hardly foresee how much of an impact their convention would have on students in future American schools.

The United States constitution is still the first thing students become familiar with when they start to study subjects like government and history. To have a complete understanding of our social culture we study our past.

"The first thing we did in government class was interpret the Declaration of Independence," said Junior Magen Stewart.

Magen, along with many other students in Mr. Dilling's government class did many projects to further their knowledge of how our country works. The hands-on experience really helped with history lessons.

"We had done it every day in All European History," said Junior Amanda Nikulits. "They helped us understand what we were reading."

Psychology also has a lot of history involved. Students studied the discoveries and theories of scientists like Sigmund Freud. Researching was important to the class.

"I had to write an eight page report on schizophrenia," said Junior Jessica Stephen. "I researched for six weeks."

Social studies made us

When Opportunity Knocks

Elizabeth Linke

There are a lot of students involved in that program. Many students who are very interested in that day when some of them are taking a break from their advantage. "I don't get more help in a smaller classroom," said Maria Dizon. "I get more one-on-one time with my teacher when I'm not even noticed. But these students are all very smart and they taught many skills such as cleaning, cooking, and typing, all of which are very valuable lessons for the real world."

Smaller classroom sizes give students more one on one time with their teachers

Special Education students are not different than the rest of us. We both come to school to learn skills that will prepare us for our futures. Their classes are unique because they learn differently by various techniques. "I enjoy teaching students who are ready and willing to learn," said Special Education teacher Carrie DeBarn. "I find teaching both challenging and frustrating but it is all worth it."

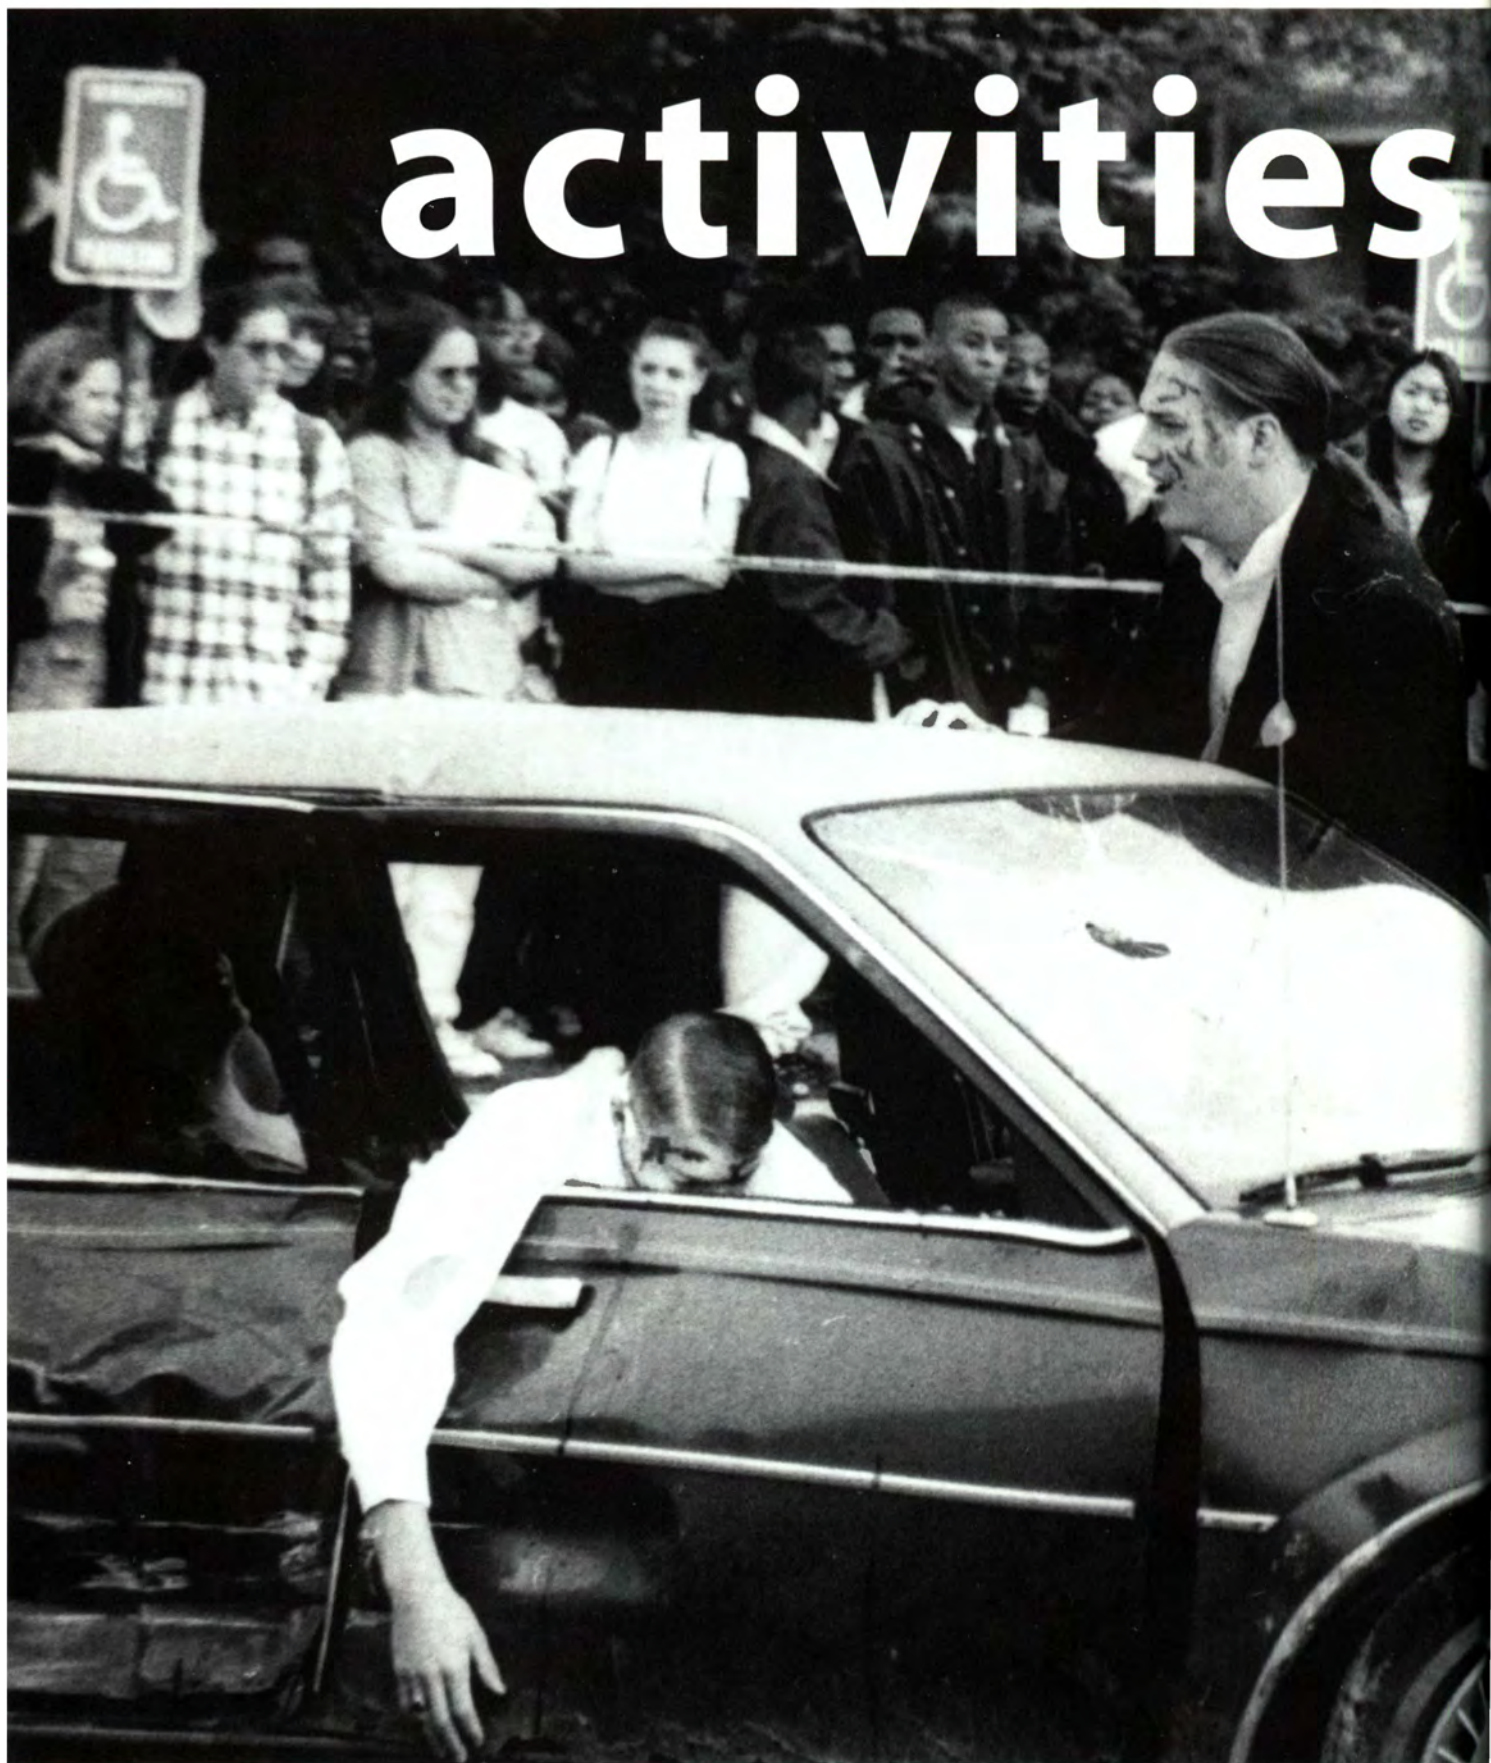

Special Education students have a lot in common with the average student. They come to school, hang out with their friends on the weekends, get homework from teachers and are going to school to prepare for their future.

Classroom sizes are much smaller for special education students. Which is only what you would expect since every individual is different.

STUDENT POWER

by Amanda Mikulski

It's 11:30. That will be lunch time, and Everett students pour out of the building. Debating whether to go to Wendy's, Jack's or Boston Market, packed cars drive off on a quest for a good lunch. Inside, lunch takes on a whole new meaning for student council members and class officers who faithfully spend time eating their way through meetings.

"Spending one lunch hour a week in a meeting can get tiring, sometimes it's still worth it though," said Junior Onna Lauritzen, a member for four years.

Some saw student council as just another club, but for active members like Junior Crystal Cruz, it was more than that.

"We are an organized body of students that form a government," said Cruz, a first year member.

Student council had many ways for its members to display leadership. Included in those ways was the Leadership Development course in which students identified problems within the school and worked in groups to remedy them. Also, the students created community service projects to benefit others.

"We were in a unique position," said advisor Luan Land. "We had our own office, we offered a leadership development course, we were included in the decision making process of our building, and we had tremendous support from administration."

First year members had something to show for all their dedication and hard work.

"If members earned designated amounts of points from participating in student council activities, then they could wear a special student council cord at graduation," said President Jenny Grace.

Often, officers found themselves having lunch meetings, staying after school to meet with advisors and listening to ideas and concerns of their fellow classmates.

"I really liked to plan activities and fund raisers for my class," said Junior Class Vice President Tavarra Jones. "It did take a large amount of time and sometimes I missed work because of it."

Some saw being a class officer as a hands-on experience for the future.

"I liked being president because it gave me leadership skills," said Junior Class President Thai Lee. "I also got to represent my class."

There was a high position, but it was not all fun and game. At times, it could be very demanding. "Motivating people to get involved and being organized was really tough," said Lee.

BLAZING BUZZERS

By Christopher Mingus

Albert Einstein, George Washington Carver, Charles Ben Franklin, Martin Luther King, Jr., Thomas Edison, and Mother Teresa all great people in their own right. We will add a few more people to this list from our very own school. Namely the members of Quiz Bowl and Academic Decathlon. Not because they won the Nobel Prize, designed a world changing invention, or freed a country, but because in the face of hardship they never gave up.

Quiz Bowl and Academic Decathlon were groups of students who got together and expanded their minds in the name of competition. They studied everything from chemistry to pop culture. Adding all of this to a heavy school load was a bit stressful at times.

"When I have a lot of homework, and things to do for Quiz Bowl it gets frustrating," said Sophomore Hugh McMichael.

Juggling their schedules wasn't the only challenge they faced. They also had to find a way to stay positive in the midst of a disappointing season.

"It's a lot of fun," said Sophomore Corey Wheaton. "But it's hard when we lose."

Despite the hardships they faced, the team were never short players. There were always people there to fill positions and help out the team.

"Despite our record we just keep coming back, and we are always able to field a team," said Junior Maggie West.

Piles of homework, annoying losses, and unfortunate circumstances plagued the Quiz Bowl and Academic Decathlon members throughout the year. Yet in the midst of all of these hardships they never gave up, and stayed strong in their quest for knowledge. Who knows, maybe one day they will win a Pulitzer, discover the cure for cancer, or end world hunger. Even if they don't, they have every reason to be proud.

PROBLEM SOLVING

By Trevor Dooch

Most high schools have students from all around Michigan going to other schools for a day, a week, or a weekend trip, usually designed as conferences. These are just a few things that students who were involved in either PAL or SADD were familiar with:

What are PAL?

"We're Peer Assistant Leaders," said Senior China Lauritzen.

"We try to solve people's problems without violence," said Senior PAL Tony Knapp. "in order to keep peace among our fellow students."

To be more effective at accomplishing this goal, the members undergo much training. This training involves attending conferences where they share ideas with fellow members about how to handle different situations. In addition to just solving problems involving violence, PAL are available for any problem.

"Anyone can feel free to talk to us, because we always have a listening ear that also remains confidential," added Knapp.

Another group always ready to listen and help students out is SADD. The Students Against Driving Drunk. They are involved in taking a lead among students in order to create awareness of the effects of driving impaired. They cover not only driving under the influence of alcohol but also the influence of drugs.

A large part of SADD is the fund raising. With these funds, the members make trips such as the yearly conference in Shanty Creek. The conference includes guest speakers who tell experiences of the effects of driving drunk. With all this new found information, they can help everyone learn about the effects of driving impaired.

"SADD is a great organization to participate in because you're educating fellow students," said Senior Assistant Treasurer, Mike

CIRCLE

By Elizabeth Finkel

Your heart starts racing, butterflies fill your stomach, and all of a sudden you can't remember any of your lines. Then you take a look around at your crew and the team is gone as you begin to relax. Before you know it, you're out on stage holding a trophy and realize everything is going smoothly now ..... you're acting.

Many students have found a love in theater over the past year. Combining forensic drama and the National Thespian Society, you have a team which is larger than the girls' and boys' track team put together. Whatever your reason for joining some aspect of theater it would be rewarding.

"I plan on majoring in theater when I get into college," said senior Michelle McCarty who has been involved in drama for 4 years. "After all the hard work, hearing the applause makes it all worth it."

The theater department has been one of the most successful groups at Everett. In one year they've made it all the way to the state competition in theater and in forensics. Students involved in forensics, which is a different kind of dramatic interpretation made it to the regional level last year. Team members said that the feeling you get from winning is indescribable.

"Last year I was in a mixture for forensics when we found out that we made it to state, we all just jumped around and got all crazy," said sophomore Michael Bowlin. "That was the best moment of my life."

To make all this possible many hard working students and devoted directors come into play. In the end, when the crowd roars and awards are won and you're all out there with your butterflies and fears disappear and a huge grin comes across your face because you know that's as good as it gets.

"Making it to state's in forensics was the best moment of my life."

HELPING HANDS

By Jerome White

With the media focus on the violence in schools, it's easy for many to get a biased view of the student body. However the Honor Society and Earth Response team were out to show that there's more going on than stabbings and fights. By

..... volunteering for school and community activities, these two organizations gave endless effort to giving teens a refreshing appearance.

"I like to take advantage of a chance to help make a difference in my school and community," said Senior Jennifer Giller, president of the Honor Society.

Motivation to volunteer seems to be all but absent for these young people. For them, helping out is something that is necessary. They have a sense of compassion unique to their organizations.

"By recycling, we are essentially saving trees and preventing animal extinction," said freshman Lauren Riddle. She continued, "the way I see it, if you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

The Earth Response Team and the National Honor Society shed new light on the art of lending a helping hand, something they've practiced, mastered and philosophized.

"One who digs in trash finds lost wisdom," said Junior Hajji Muhammed, a member of Earth Response. He added, "we're simply trying to make the Earth a better place for our children."

..... From the looks of it, these two groups are making our country a better place one day at a time. Although they have different names, essentially they have the same goal. If the trends keep up, high schoolers will change a whole lot for the better.

FUTURE FAME

By Mindy Ruble

Of all the clubs and organizations at Everett YES and Everett Excellers are two that focus specifically on the future. Students' futures take on a new meaning.

Young Educators Society is focused on future teachers. Students involved in the program get to see the school staff in a different light. ....

"YES program is good for students because we learn to appreciate the teachers and their tolerance," said junior YES club member Erin McLain.

Most students agree that the club's after school activities are great, something to be able to look forward to. Being in an extra-curricular activity is a great way to be involved in school realtions, and have something to do after school other than homework.

"I look forward to YES and enjoy it because I am the president," said Senior YES Club member Jessica Stephens.

Everett Excellers is also very powerful for the school and the community. It's an organization mainly for minorities that help out in the community. Making the future a great opportunity is one of their main goals. The Excellers are donating their time to help out the future generations, and make it a better world for everyone.

"We are giving a good name to young students and helping them to find their place in the world," said Senior Everett Exceller Jennifer Jones.

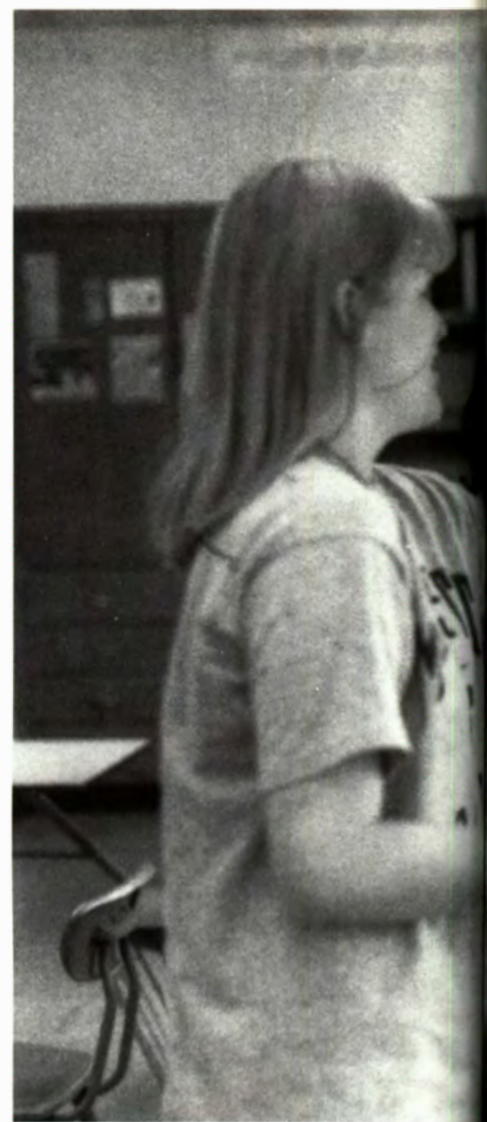

It is true, YES and Everett Excellers are two very important clubs that make a difference in the student body and build self-esteem for many. They give students one more reason to be proud of their school while preparing them for their future after they leave. ....

CULTURES CONNECT

By Trevor Dooch

Of all the clubs to be involved with, the foreign language clubs could be the easiest. In order to be in the French club, you don't even have to be in the French class, and if you are in the class, you're automatically in the club! Many may feel that since they don't ..... speak any other languages, they can't join a foreign language club. Not true.

French club is not even about the French language. It's all about the cultures of the French-speaking "francophone" lands. One activity is the annual holiday luncheon, when many cultural groups have a lunch where many different groups represent themselves through food and talk about their cultures.

Other people come in and talk to the clubs about these cultures as well. Guest speakers talk not only about culture, but some even talk about their personal experiences. Teacher Pierre Dalmazar has spoken about what Christmas is like in his birth country of Haiti. With this opportunity, students learn some interesting things about their teachers.

"I enjoy working with students outside the classroom, it presents the opportunity to learn more about their interests and talents beyond academics," said French Teacher Renee Lyons.

The French club's activities are also presented to the classes themselves.

"French club was incorporated into the class time to enable a better understanding of the French heritage," said two-year member Pamela Green.

..... Some of the opportunities presented to the club members are trips. Green also participated in a club trip to French speaking lands. The trip spent two days in London and seven in Paris. Get on board now for your fun-filled foreign language club while it's still available.

TECHNO SAVVY

By Christopher Mingus

Your days are filled with hard drives, word counts and references. (How will I fill dates, right?) Nope, you're in yearbook or newspaper.

Only at Everett could you find a journalism room as technologically advanced. Their computerized layout and on-line capabilities put them leaps and bounds above many others.

"Everything we do is on computer and it allows us to make even last minute things just how we want them," said Senior Trin Lopez, editor of the Viking Voice.

The technology available to these students not only helped them to produce better products, it also brought the school some positive attention. The classes have received media attention throughout the year.

"It demonstrates how good Everett really can be, and it really makes us stand out from other schools," said Yearbook Editor Anne Cummings.

One of the advantages for the students was the number of computers. There were fourteen in the room and the students never had a problem finding one open for their use.

"The convenience of being able to use a computer whenever I need one greatly helps in producing a quality story and meeting deadlines," said Archives reporter Trevor Dooch.

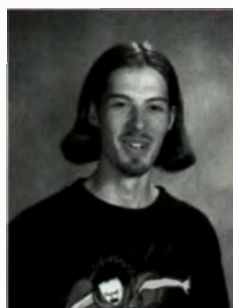

They were also one of the first journalism classes to get on-line. By now most have at least heard of the Internet, but may not have seen how the net could be beneficial to journalism students.

"Unlike other schools, if we need a picture we can get on-line and find one there," said online and photo editor of the paper Alan Pierce.

The next time you flip through your yearbook or newspaper, remember that only at Everett was there the technology to make these products the way they are.

Leaving the millenium behind, students

Stuff It! Junior Jon Dubois puts his world history book in his locker between classes.

@everett

We remember our childhood as a time where Nintendo's were a luxury and home computers were a common dream. Hand in hand, we have grown with technology.

When we were young, high school seemed light years away. We remember fighting over tether ball and waiting in line for the tire swing. Now, tomorrow is here and the future is the present. We look back on the past and realize what we once wished would fly by has flashed right before our eyes.

As the last class of the millennium, (OK, so some people say 2000 is the end of the millennium, but who's counting?) we have grown and matured together. Approaching our last year of high school we become aware of the responsibilities and changes we have come to see that we are not just a part of history - we are the future.

Float building, selling candygrams, and serving breadsticks at Fazio's are just three activities that brought the class of '99 together this year.

could you have been a part of that

-Amanda Milkulski
& Mindy Ruble

It's 10:53 the bell rings in two minutes for lunch. Your stomach is growling. If you have a car you can cruise over to a fast food restaurant and make it back before the bell rings for 5th hour. For those who don't have a driver's license, let alone a car you will probably spend your lunch hour in a crowded cafeteria line.

"Having both a car and license makes life easier," said Junior Hugo Coleman.

Turning 16 is a big step to freedom for most juniors. With a car you do not have to depend on somebody else for a ride.

"I like having both because I can finally depend on myself," said junior Tawny Sipe.

As for juniors who only have a license, most agree it is just like not having a license, because they do not experience the same freedom as those who have cars.

"I hate having my license without a car. I can't go anywhere I want," said Junior Tami Verplank.

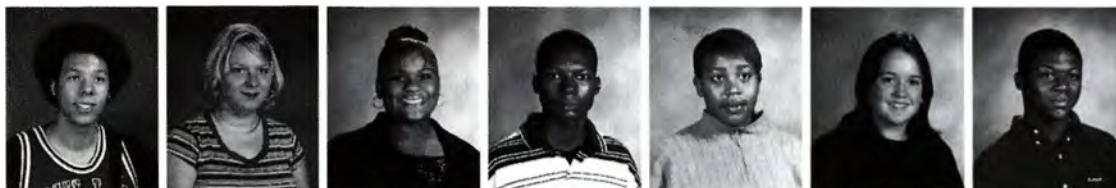

Having both a license and a car makes juniors feel grown-up.

"You have freedom, you can also charge people gas money," said Junior Jon Ferguson.

With a car you do not have to ride a packed bus to and from school. Life is much easier you no longer find yourself depending on your parents.

FINDING FUNDS

By Mindy Ruble

Show me the money? That is what the Junior class had running through their heads starting off this year. Starting with less than one hundred dollars, the class of 1999 had a dilemma. Quick plans of fundraising needed to be made if they wanted a Senior prom.

"Getting cooperation from the student body was difficult at first," said Junior class President Thai Lee.

After having a class meeting the junior class agreed on many different ways to make money from selling sweetie grams for Sweetest Day to sponsoring the Valentine's Day Sweetheart dance, the junior class worked hard to raise money.

"The candy sales was also a big success," said active Junior class member Danielle Keyes.

Another fundraiser the candy sales brought in big bucks from Reese's peanut butter cups to Gobstoppers, candy is a popular item to students and a fundraiser that you do not hear many complaints from.

For two weeks many members of the Junior class sold in between classes, at lunch, or after school.

"It's nice that so many people are getting involved to make everyone's prom better," said Junior Amanda Mikulic.

After working hard together to raise money the junior class made enough to reserve the Michigan Athletic Club for their Senior prom. Many will be relieved the night of their prom when they see that all of their hard work has paid off to make everyone's night a night to remember.

"The candy bars were easy to sell."
Sarah Vankuiken

"I'm just trying to help out my class."
Cindy Chang

Yum Yum Yum! Candy was the largest fundraiser for the Juniors. It's what the class of '99 can thank for their Senior prom.

Break me off a piece of that. Junior Dusty Beam takes a break from picking up attendance 5th hour to munch for the camera. Beam is also on the Varsity soccer team.

Fifty cents please. Little by little, this is how the Junior class made their money to reserve their space for prom. Paying fifty cents for a candy bar is actually a deal compared to the fifty-five cents stores charge.

Two for me, none for you. Junior Tarah Collins sharing the candy bar she bought to support her class with fellow classmate Dusty Beam.

Band members. Cheerleaders. Athletes. All different races. Males. Females. These words could describe any class pursuing knowledge at Everett. What makes the sophomore class unique from the others are two words: Spirit and potential.

The sophomore class showed school pride all during Spirit Week this year. We participated willingly and did it with pride. We showed the other classes just how much spirit we had inside at the homecoming Pep Rally. This showing of spirit won us the title of "The Class With the Most Spirit." We topped this off by going on to place first that night with our Homecoming float. We know that spirit comes from inside.

The sophomore class is also unique because of the potential we possess. We are the first class graduating into the new century and millennium. We have to go out into the world and show people that we are the leaders of the future. We have to prove that the class of 2000 is up to it. We know we can do it. We believe in ourselves.

We aren't upperclassmen yet, but we will be one day. Our class is ready to meet the challenges that lay ahead of us. We can do anything.

TAZ- MANIACS

By Tarah Collins

Fall homecoming might bring to mind the big game, court, the parade, and Taz. Taz? Yes, the Tazmanian Devil. The cartoon that won the class of 2000 first place in the float contest.

The Sophomore class first had their award winning idea at a class meeting following the announcement of this year's float theme, cartoons. With the help of their advisors those who attended the meeting made a final decision, the Tazmanian Devil.

"It was a good idea that everyone agreed on," said advisor Mr. Dubois.

The next day the hard work started. Building the vision of how they pictured their float was not as easy as many class members anticipated.

"We wanted to get the work done as soon as we could," said Sophomore Katie Boyer.

Finally the finished product. Ready to be transferred to the annual pre-parade meeting spot, the Kroger parking lot along with the other class floats. Everyone wanting their work to be the best, there was tension in the air.

"I thought the Seniors had first," said Sophomore Saron Kolaskey.

Third quarter of the game everyone was listening intently for the announcement of who's hard work won this year. With the Junior class as runners up with their Snoopy float, the sophomore class went home with the victory.

Making the transition from middle school to high school can be tough for freshmen. Some hear rumors about seniors torturing them. The fear of getting lost or being in the wrong class is always on the mind of the young students.

An advantage the freshman class has Only Everett is the way classes are set up. The entire freshman class is broken up into teams with 120 students in every group. Each team sets itself apart with names like "The Viking House." The teams give each student a sense of connectedness to the school and to their team members.

Competition between the teams builds spirit. When one team succeeds, others are supportive, while working harder to attain that level of excellence.

While senior year seems an eternity away, we know that it will be here in no time. Getting started on the right foot is very important, and beginning your final stage in your journey towards graduation as a part of a closeknit family is something that could happen Only Everett.

Making Adjustments

By: Elizabeth Finkel

The doors open on that first day of school and everyone anticipates the new year ahead of them. For some it means a final year to accomplish your high school goals, while others are just starting out in this big new school. Fear is in the eyes of most freshmen on the first day, but as the days go on, they begin to fit in to the fast moving crowd.

"I feel a little scared," said freshman Takeyla Armstrong.

People are always looking at you, and the tardy bells are rather confusing."

Most

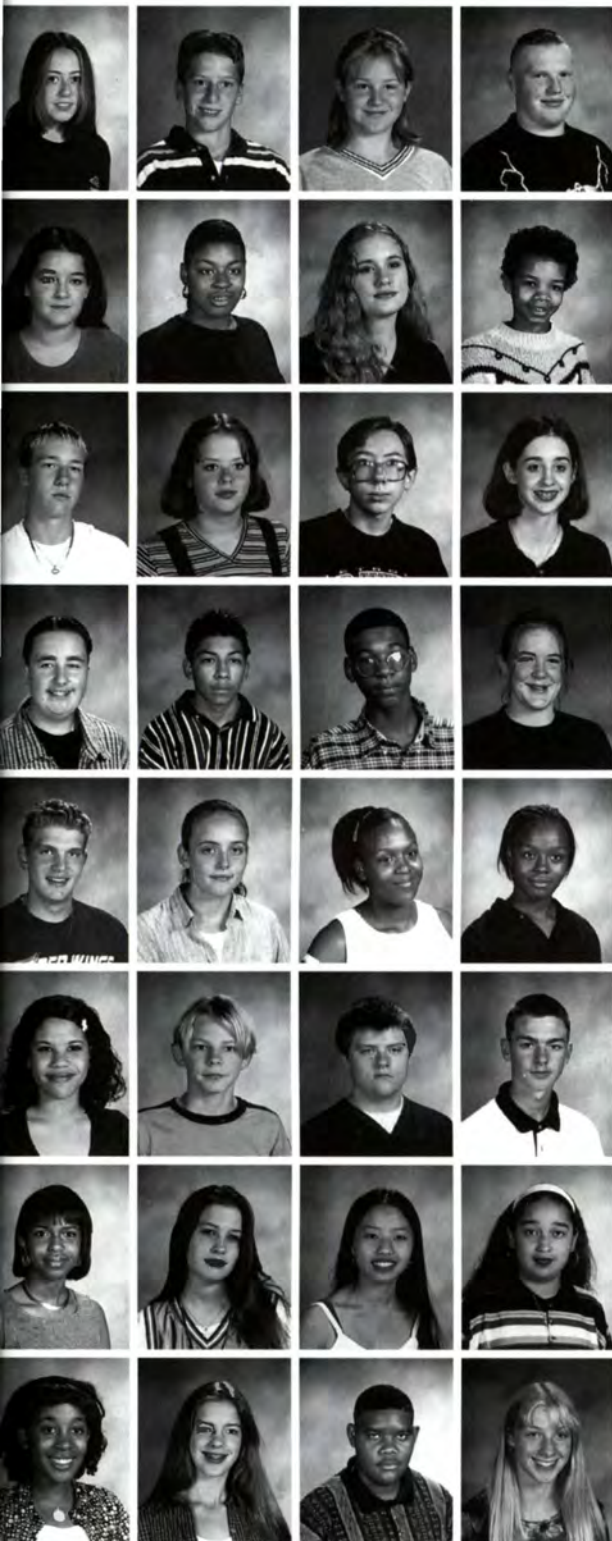

freshmen feel the same way, worried and a little confused. The block scheduling just adds one more thing for them to get used to.

"I don't like the hour and a half classes," said freshman

Howard Brown. "It's too long to listen to the same teacher."

All the changes take a little get used to, but most agree that high school is more fun. This is supposed to be the best time of our lives so have fun, enjoy all the football games, treasure your friendships and make the most out of your next few years. Challenges await you so go out and seize them.

There's something that makes every school unique. That special thing that gives everyone associated with the program a sense of pride and excitement about being a part of something so special. Only Everett are there a number of features that make the sports program unique. For starters, there are teams that focus on work ethic more than the final score. There is a sense of unrivaled camaraderie amongst the student body that allows every team to participate not only as individuals, but as units of diverse young people that represent the student body as well as our variant society. And although the students at Everett know not the feeling of winning a state title, they do know what it means to support a team. Only Everett can one find a struggling team that still manages to pack the stands every home game. Even the pep rallies of the losing team are as pumped as that of the winning ones. Yes, at Everett there is a varsity program built on pride rather than talent. Like every school, there are the good teams and bad ones, but Only Everett will you find a school that stands behind its teams, no matter what.

A black and white photograph of a young man in mid-swing on a golf course. He is wearing a dark jacket, light-colored jeans, and dark shoes with white socks. The background shows a grassy field, trees, and a house.

Golf, to those who play, has various meanings. Some play for the relaxation of the surroundings. But to others, golf is more than a game, it's a way of life.

"We have quite a range of girls on the team, everywhere from beginners to the more experienced," said Coach Pat Holland. He added, "but that's the beauty of the game, you can have fun regardless how you view it."

Because this team was fairly inexperienced, many of the girls played to fulfill a curiosity they had for the sport and began to learn the pastime

"I played largely because my parents encouraged me to, but I also had some interest for the sport," said freshman Shawn Dullock.

Whatever their reason for playing, these girls shared a common interest in the game itself, bringing them together as a unit.

"The overall morale is high and the girls look forward to each match," said Holland.

Although they might not have agreed on why they played, these ladies did share a common interest in the game, an

SOFTBALL'S WORK ETHIC BUILDS SOLID REPUTATION

Over the past few years, the varsity softball team has put together one of the best CAC records of any Everett sport. Since 1991, they've had a conference winning percentage of almost 94 percent. Yet after all these victories parents make up a large majority of their fans.

"I don't think many of us care that much if we don't get much credit because it doesn't matter what everyone else thinks as long as we know we work hard and know that we accomplish our goals," said '97 Graduate Stephanie Dixler.

To many of these ladies working wasn't an option. It's something they expected of themselves and teammates. Good work ethic is something the coaches instill in their players early on.

"Even when we played freshman and JV, the coaches had us working our butts off every practice," said Senior Shanna Flynn, who's played softball since she was a sophomore.

Despite the lack of recognition, these girls keep their eye on the prize. It's not only their skill that keeps them on top, but their attitudes.

Seeing Success

WITH PRACTICE, GIRLS' TRACK GOES AFTER ITS GOALS

When a crowd goes crazy as a track star crosses the finish line, many only see the 15 or so seconds that showcase something that took years to produce.

The girls on the track team have a unique respect for what it takes to reach the top.

"Sometimes, coach ('Draze') will make us do these running drills in the pool, or routines on the track. man, are they tough," said Sophomore distance runner Richetta Coehlo.

Yet all these measures don't bring instant success, which is a hard lesson for most to learn. It takes years for the body to reach it's peak and fully mature. For some, high school isn't just a place to perform, but a place to learn and begin a career.

"In the past four years that I have been on the track team I have not yet perfected my running to what I wanted it to be," said '97 Graduate Annette Hall.

However with time and relentless effort peak performance will no doubt be reached, and when that day comes the competition will decrease. Habits and attitudes like those of the girls' track team are what create stars.

BASEBALL PLAYERS LOOK SOUTH TO PREPARE FOR THEIR SEASON

Hot sun, beaches, and baseball. What more could you ask for? That's what the baseball team had to contemplate during spring break. For a week, they played baseball and enjoyed break in Clearwater, Florida.

"It was good to get out of Michigan, but the bus ride was way too long," said Senior Eric Britton.

Each day consisted of practice, along with a few scrimmages. Afterwards, the players found time to do a little shopping.

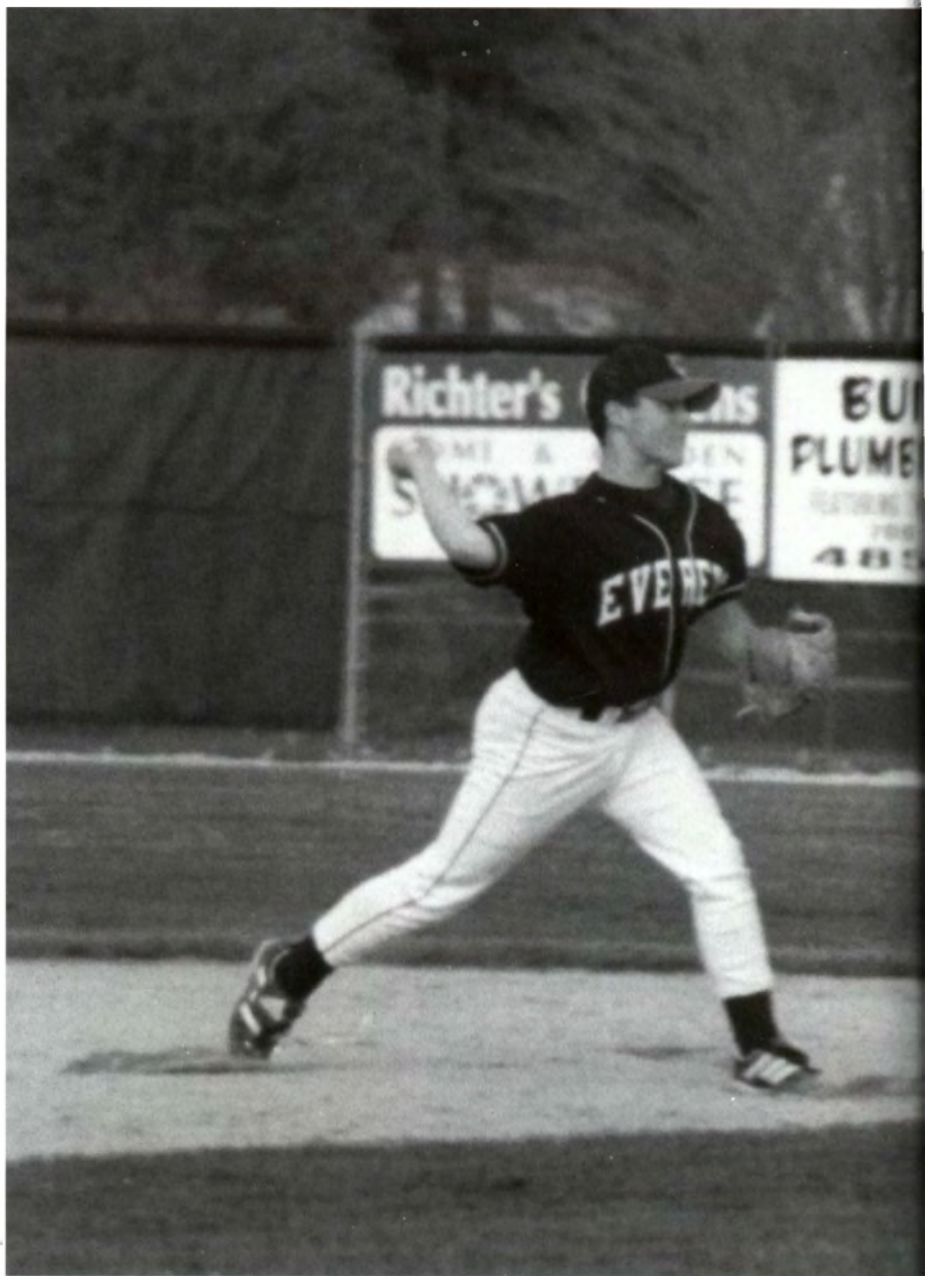

"It was kind of boring, we all had to leave in big groups. It just wasn't as fun as I thought it would be," said Senior Steve Horn.

Between shopping and practicing, the players made a little time for sight seeing. Aside from the national monuments, there were a few personal landmarks that went far from unnoticed.

"On the way to the park
we saw Flooters the bar" said
'97 Graduate Kyle Dinkley.

The trip to Florida was considered worthwhile for the coaches and players alike. It provided them with a chance to get a step ahead on the competition, while simultaneously improving their tan.

GIRLS' CROSS COUNTRY RUNS THROUGH OBSTACLES

In a sport where ten ladies make a team, three may seem at a disadvantage. However, the girls on the cross country team saw it as something else. For them, the season was an opportunity to participate in a pastime they love.

"I didn't really mind being short-handed, I just wanted to run," said Junior Naomi Yip.

Without a sufficient number of members, these ladies were forced to forfeit every match. But their optimistic attitudes allowed them to stay on top.

"A record is really just a number," said Sophomore Richetta Coelho. "It doesn't represent the real competition which is the individual one."

For this reason, the girls continued to work hard and give their all. For Senior Tracey Downs, though, there were bigger goals in mind. Her eyes were set on breaking a school record.

"Tracey was the first lady Viking to earn her four year varsity award in this sport," said Coach Gerald Drazee.

BOYS' CROSS COUNTRY RUNS FOR THE FINISH

The hope for any coach is to take their team to the top. Every year is an exciting, new experience with new kids that are, hopefully, ready to work hard. Taking students with the motivation to do well and turn it into talent is what high school sports are about. For the boys' cross country coach, it is no different.

"It is my goal to make my team the best they can be. If I do this, winning will come," said Coach Drazee.

It is not easy to coach any team. Having to be a role model, leader, friend, and teacher in one is a hard combination to conquer. The time coaches put into coaching is a true sign of dedication. And dedication is just one aspect that is reinforced in boys' cross country.

"Coming to practice every day and giving your all are the basic necessities to a good program," said Sophomore Joel Launtzen.

Which is evident in the fact that only five guys were on this team. Coach Drazee somehow found a way to keep these runners motivated for that extra mile. Through his hard work, and his team's dedication, a positive unit was created.

Only at Everett is there a soccer coach like Michelle Hoffman. Over the time she's been here, her no-nonsense style has definitely made an impression.

"Michelle is the best coach I've ever had," said Sophomore Aaron Westby "It's because of her that we play at the level we do"

Even with Hoffman's tough influence and the support of her players, the team's record has only reached mediocre levels. But Hoffman always keeps in mind that there's life beyond the field.

"The most important thing Michelle's taught me over the years is that winning isn't everything," said Senior Steven Horn.

In any sport it's always comforting to know that there's someone on the sidelines watching out for you. The soccer players had just that in Hoffman.

VARSITY FOOTBALL LOOKS PAST THE NON-BELIEVERS

With all the press coverage of the losing streak and hard times with the Varsity Football team, one might think it was no fun to be a part of this team. However, a look inside the huddle, revealed a totally opposite view.

"With all that negative press coverage, a lot of people get a biased view of this squad," said Junior Derrick Reece.

As one observes a practice, they see a bunch of guys working their butts off, and having fun.

"Practices are really intense, but at the same time enjoyable," said Junior Mike Woodward.

These concentrated practices were due in part to new head coach Fred Ford. Ford's background provided him with the experience necessary to train boys into men.

"The primary difference between us and other teams is the motivation factor," said Ford. "With every practice we better that part of our game."

Although their record might not show it, these fellas gave their all every time they stepped on the field. When faced with criticism of their peers as well as the press, they found that winning was secondary to finding their lost motivation.

LADIES TENNIS HAS AN INTERESTING SEASON

When it comes to tennis, the girls' tennis team was certainly not lacking in attitude. Despite dropping many of their games, they realized there was more to the sport than winning

"I learned everything I know about tennis at Everett," said Senior Anne Cummings. "Our team was EBOLA."

They played many games, ran on many courts, and hit many balls. Their racquets were exhausted, their shoes worn, and their wills challenged. But they never gave up. They fought all the way to regionals. And that's where they stopped.

"We got tired of riding the bus," said Senior Elizabeth Finkel.

There were many difficulties throughout the season. There were few girls who played. It was the smallest team in years. The tennis courts were deteriorating, and that made practice difficult.

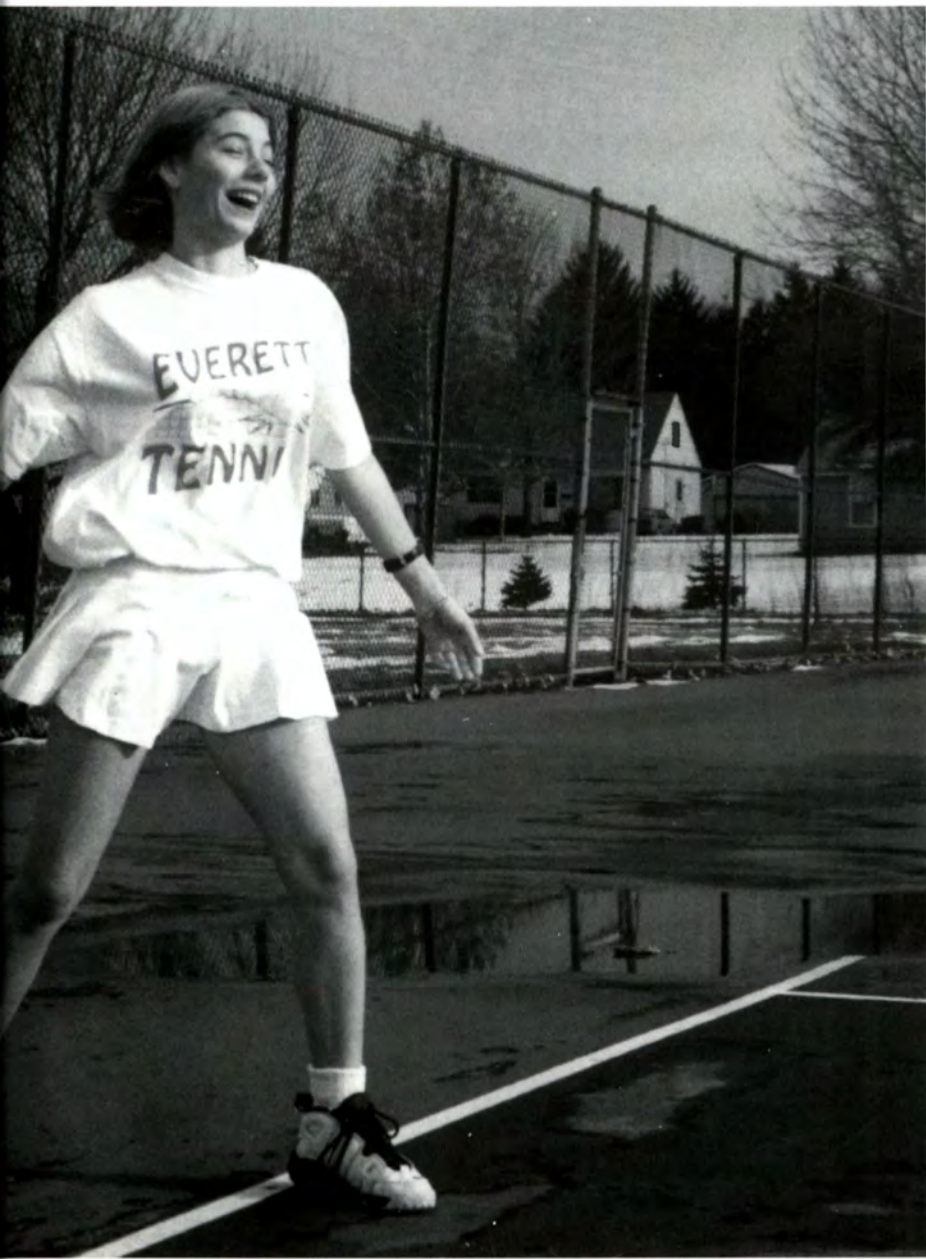

"Our facilities weren't the best, but we had to look past that," said Cummings.

LADIES' BASKETBALL LEARNS THE MEANING OF 'FAMILY'

It's June while most students are looking to a summer of freedom, the Girls' Varsity Basketball team starts it's training for September. Every hot sunny summer day, the girls are practicing three to four hours in the gym, running or doing drills for their intense training. They attend basketball camps and play in various leagues around the state.

"The reason I think we have stuck together this season is how close we became during basketball camp at Ferris State in July," said Junior Jennifer Donham. "I love them all like sisters."

Learning off the court benefited the team on the court. A lot of what these girls learned they learned from themselves.

"The practicing helped the whole team come together this season," said Sophomore Shakira McReynolds. "We performed well after our dedicated summer of practicing and playing basketball."

The practicing made them perform better, but the time made them closer and their relationship changed, from teammates to close friends to family, a key ingredient to winning.

CHEERLEADERS RALLY IN THE MIDST OF DEFEAT

Assume the position- you're a Varsity Football Cheerleader; it's a Friday night, and you are on the sidelines cheering on the Vikings. The intensity builds as the team gets closer, then... touchdown! They score. The crowd goes wild and the cheerleaders' spirits rise.

A touchdown-filled game was not too familiar to fans. With a win-less season, one is left to wonder: what is there for the cheerleaders to cheer about?

"We are there to cheer on the guys and let them know that we believe in them," said Sophomore Jamie Cronkright. "Even though they didn't win, they made touchdowns and tackles and we were proud of the way they played."

The cheerleaders went into each game with an optimistic attitude towards victory and a determined mind set on cheering.

"It is easy to go out and cheer for a team that's up by twenty, but one that's losing is a different story," said Junior football player Derrick Reece.

Regardless of the outcome, the cheerleaders believed in their

BOYS' SWIMMING REBUILDS AND COMES OUT ON TOP

A team is like a chain, it is only as strong as its weakest link. This may seem cliché, but was the first commandment for the boys swim team. In the midst of competition, both the coaching and the team stayed focused on teaching the newer guys, and building a strong team for the future.

"From the start, we knew this was going to be a rebuilding year," said Junior Doug Huff. "Since we have no seniors we just have to take the rookies and shape them up."

A "rebuilding" year may sound like a year off, but it is much the opposite.

"We practice early in the morning, then again that afternoon," said Sophomore Scott Purdy. "I can hurt pretty bad at the end of the day."

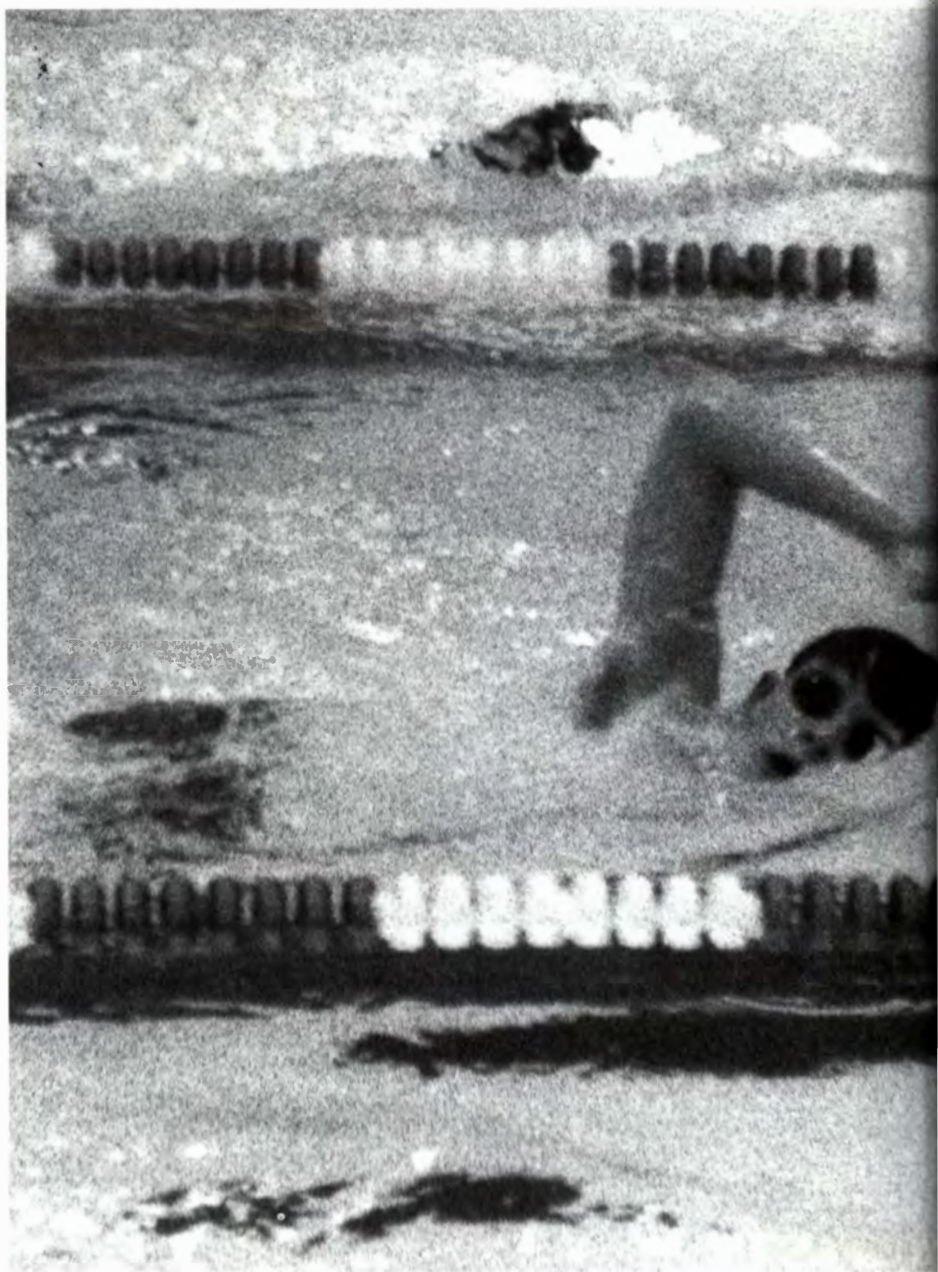

With all of this hard work, these guys never lost face in the midst of their strain.

"Swimming is always rewarding at the end," said Junior Ryan Morrissey. "When we get to CAC competition and see how far we've come, that's when it's fun."

They fought through the long hours of practice not only to get better as individuals, but to build as a team.

WRESTLERS STAY FOCUSED ON THE WEEKENDS

Saturday mornings are usually for rest and relaxation. Most students sleep in, watching cartoons all morning. It was a different story for the wrestling team, though. They started their weekends with physically draining tournaments. Events that take endurance to win.

"It depends on how many people you win against to determine what place you come in during our Saturday competitions," said Junior Jesse Ellena. The third year wrestler continued, "that takes a lot of practice and even more skill."

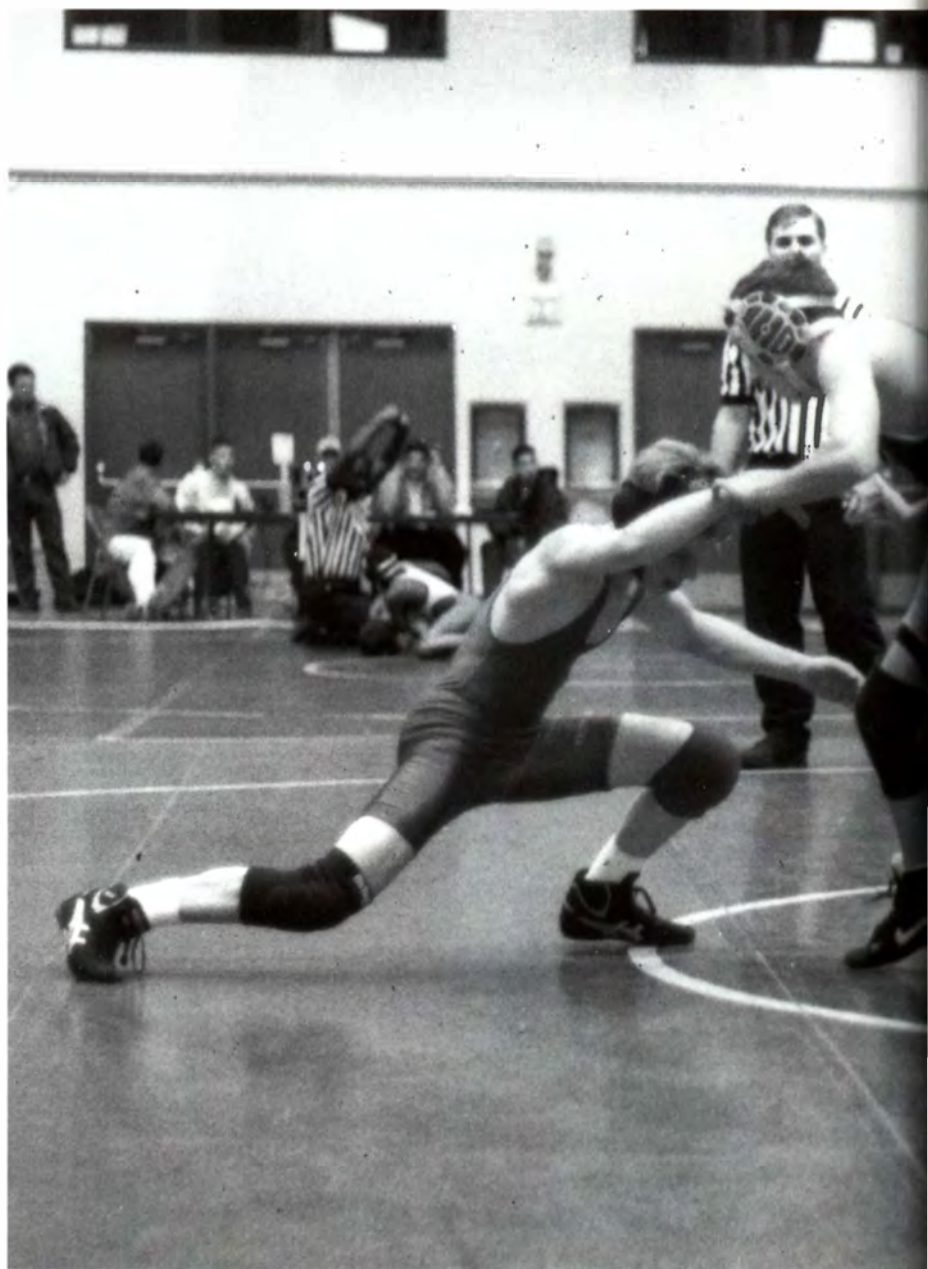

The placing is always important to the wrestlers and that is what the others see. What most don't see is the culmination of sweat and tears the wrestlers go through to get that place.

"I like wrestling because I put my heart and soul into it," said Sophomore Jake Juhas. "You have to be dedicated."

Dedication has to be a key to make the wrestlers play their sport, practice everyday, and attend all their meets. The team disrupts their Saturday mornings to wake up at eight a.m. every weekend. For them, Sooby Doo can wait until the season is over.

"I never really took to our last coach. But it's easy to relate to LeVeque, that's why she's cool," said former gymnast Gwen Wilde.

Naturally some people doubted LeVeque's capabilities as a coach, because of her youth. However, the team looked past these views and saw LeVeque for who she really was.

WINTER CHEERLEADERS GET A NEW STYLE TO FLAUNT

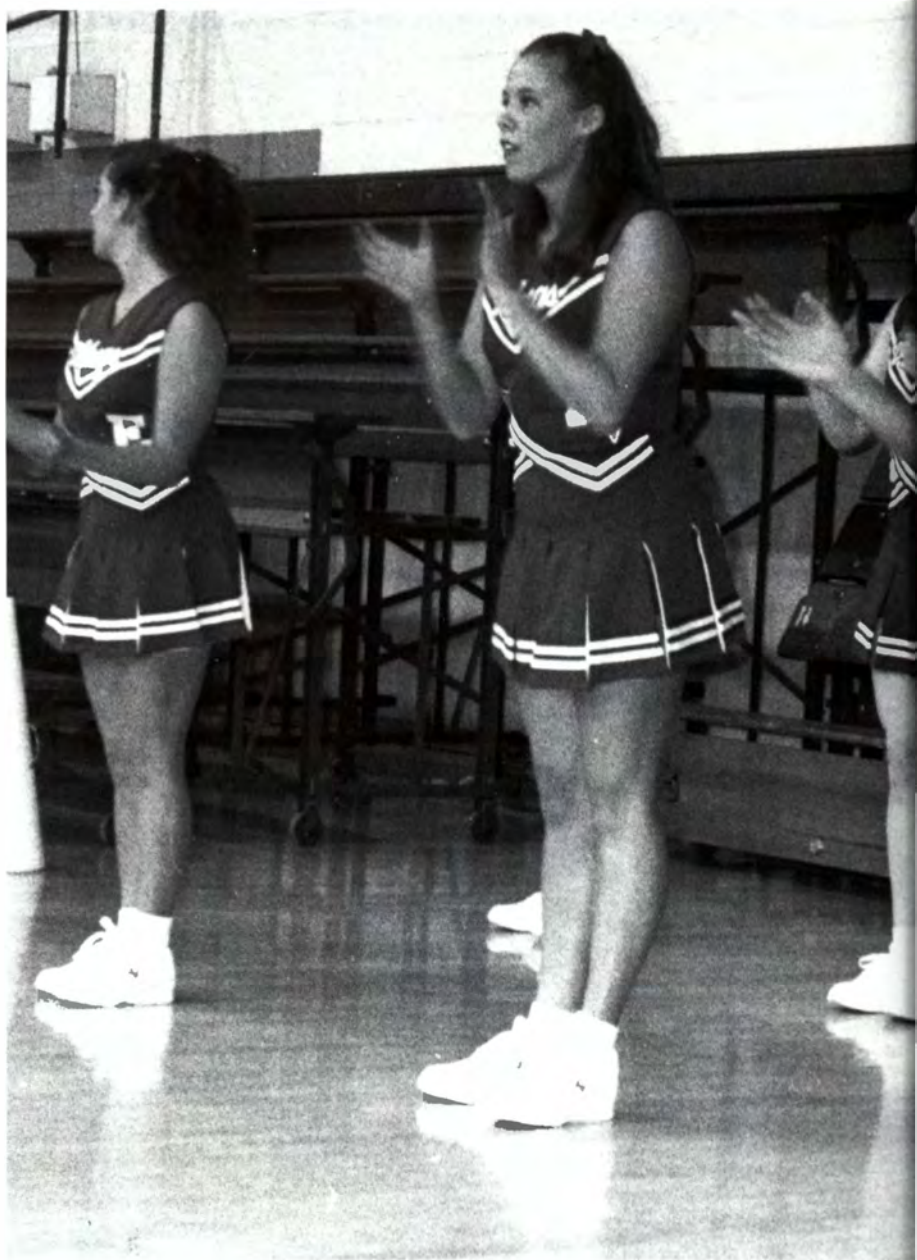

"Vikings Won't Stop." That's the echo you hear down the hall as the Winter Varsity Cheerleaders are practiced their routine for the CAC competition. With a '97 conference championship under their belt, along with a new mounting and cheering style, the girls are looking better than ever.

"It was really hard to get used to the style," said Junior Jennifer Jones. "We've been so used to collegiate cheer, rather than non-collegiate."

Though the girls had a rough time adapting to the new style and mounting, they always gave their best, leaving the crowd in awe. But the cheering doesn't come over night, rather over time.

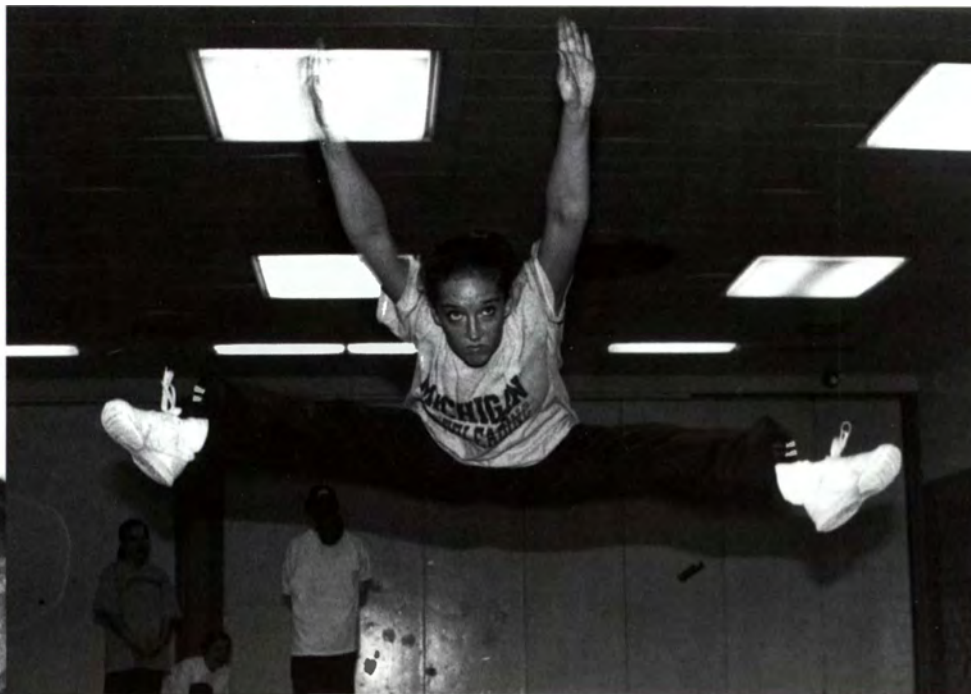

"We don't spend every day after school practicing how to smile," said Freshman Amanda Cooke. "We work really hard, and it shows."

While the girls prepared to take home the trophy again this year, they still gave it their all. For every mount that fell and every jump that wasn't high enough, there were ten perfect ones to make up for it. Only at Everett will you find a great squad like this.

BOYS' BASKETBALL FINDS THE KEYS TO SUCCESS

The buzzer sounds and it's tip off time. The crowd is rooting the varsity team on, as they grab the ball and go for a fast break to the hoop. This is a typical beginning to one of the many Friday night basketball games. The spirit for the team is thick in the air.

"I feel more confident knowing the crowd is there for us," said Junior Devon Woods.

The players have a lot of weight on their shoulders, pleasing the crowd, pleasing their coach and doing well in the conference just to name a few.

"We practice and work very hard to place in the CAC," said Coach Johnny Jones.

To be able to be successful as a team, the players must realize the meaning of teamwork. That it's not all about individuals, but the unit they make up.

"If we don't work together, winning is impossible. There's no such thing as a one man team," said Junior Paul VanDyke.

Knowing this, the team keeps the gym lively and provides smiles to all that put pressure on them. They work hard and it

Student-athletes learn what it takes to

freshman s@everett

For many schools, varsity sports are the only sports. However at Everett, varsity marks only the end of a sports program that pays just as much attention to its underclassmen. In the early years at Everett, the coaches tap into those athletes who want to participate and learn just what it means to be a Viking. Only Everett are there JV and Freshman teams that are just as competitive and respected as their varsity counterparts. There is a minor skill divider between each level but to the players it doesn't matter. These players are out to win and make a name for not only themselves, but for the sports program at Everett. A program that has flourished in underclassmen participation. The varsity sports owe a debt of gratitude to the JV as well as Freshman sports programs, for preparing the players for that next level. The next level isn't always on the mind of these youngsters, but doing their best is. The above-average work ethic is evident in the performance of each and every one of these teams, a performance that is documented on these pages. The junior varsity program reflects the hard work put into the sport, which so well represents what it means to be a viking.

compete in the big leagues.

CHEERIFFIC

A new beginning for the JV cheerleaders, this fall was a rebuilding season. With eight cheerleaders, seven of them being their first time ever cheering, the season was quite an experience.

The hard work began in the summer the JV cheerleaders along with the varsity squad, went to UCA cheer camp. Not only did the squad gain new cheers and stunts, but also confidence.

"We worked really hard at camp and it paid off with the awards that we received," said freshman cheerleader Lindsay Payton.

The JV squad received Most Improved out of over 30 squads, along with many Superior ribbons.

The cheerleaders carried their confidence on to the field, and helped cheer the JV football team on to two victories.

"I am proud of our JV team, I know they tried their hardest!" said Sophomore cheerleader Joanne Tyes.

Even though the cheerleaders had a fresh start, by the end of the season they accomplished a lot of their goals.

"My goal was to improve my jumps and I have accomplished that," said freshman Amanda Cooke.

The team strived to improve in every way and succeed in all that they did. Many agree that the season was a success.

CHEERLEADERS STRIVE TO SUCCEED IN ALL THAT THEY DO

Gimme a V: Junior Freda Briley, and sophomores Ambrosia Walls and Aretha Carter stomp to the beat of the well known E-H-S cheer. The girls always pleased the crowd with their sideline chants. This is the first year cheering for all three JV members.

Up or Down: Freshman Melissa Peterson, Junior Cindy Chang and Sophomores Katharine Harr and Nikki Robison cheer the basketball team on during their first home game against Flint Central. The girls did such a great job, the team won by a landslide.

Leaning Tower: Sophomores Joanne Tyes and Ambrosia Walls show off their pyramid skills at a home football game against Waverly. The girls learned many new mounts at cheer camp this summer in Saginaw Valley, where they earned superior ribbons.

CHEERING UP

NEW SQUAD SHOWS THEY HAVE SPIRIT

It's rare that a JV Cheerleading squad has more new girls than experienced, but this year was an exception. Considered a rebuilding year, it was present in their performance. They hyped up each game as if they'd been cheering for years. Many of the ladies credit it to the fun they had during the games.

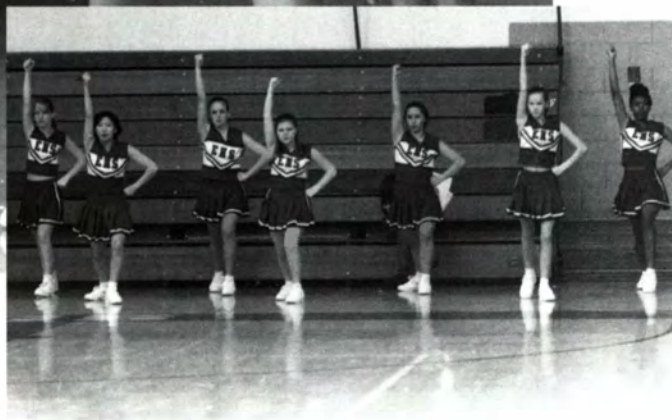

"I really liked cheering because of all the friends I made, and all the fun I had," said Sophomore Nikki Robinson.

Although new to the sport, Robinson and the rest of the team took to the moves quickly, picking up steps in no time at all. "It took a lot of work and a lot of time, but in the end, it pays off," said Freshman Melissa Peterson.

Despite their inexperience, JV Cheer put on a show.

A New Game

A new team, a new school, new friends, and new goals for the girls' freshmen basketball team, that's what this season was all about. They walked in the new school with high hopes of being the best team around. But with discouragement, they only won one game. To only win one game would be a disappointment for most athletes. Depending on which game that is, it may have been worth it.

"Winning our only game against Sexton was worth all of the hard work," says Freshman Sarae Coddington.

This year's team was different from any other in the past. They were closer not just on the court, but off it too.

"We were all friends and had the ability to communicate well," said Freshman Akua Brooks.

While some see sports as just another extra curricular activity, the actual athletes see it as a separate life or a family tradition.

"My role model is my dad because he played basketball in college," says Freshman Tanisha Wilson.

With only one win, the team felt more satisfied with their results than if they had won two games. This year's team learned a valuable lesson: hard work really does pay off in the end.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL TEAM SATISFIED WITH VICTORIES

Dribble, pass, shoot: Kalita Smith dribbles down the court as she attempts a shoot, while her Waverly opponent tries to block her. It seems as though she's gotten past her though. Brooks also utilizes her speed on the track team. She has been a member of the varsity track club for her entire high school career.

I'm really tired, Coach: Freshmen Deborah Bragg, Tanisha Wilson, Shanika Miller, and Tamika Malone use their time out time very wisely going over their next play with Coach Scott. These time outs were also used as a good time to catch their breaths.

Can't Catch Me: Akua Brooks dribbles down the court during their game against Eastern. The girls put in extra time off court to make their wins. Without a doubt, these girls practiced hard.

GETTING READY

JV GIRLS IMPROVE THEIR SKILLS

Down by 2, Sophomore Kaleda Smith gets fouled with no time left on the clock. All she's got to do is make her free throws and the game against Sexton, will go into overtime. All eyes were on Smith. After a time out from the opponents, she gathered her nerves, stepped to the line and.. and threw up two bricks.

"I was nervous," said Smith. "I knew they called the time out to do that, and it worked. It was one of those situations you dream of, but never think you're really going to be in."

Although the outcome wasn't favorable, the teams' reaction showed the kind of character the girls were made of.

"They still supported and daigned me when it was all done," said Smith.

BIG TIME

When you were younger and could play Tee-Ball all you worried about was getting to first base. Now, the first year of high school you have to be serious about your softball career. As freshmen in high school, these young girls athletes have walked into a whole new world. The girls on the freshman softball team have shown that they are committed to their team.

"Softball is what I love to do," said Sophomore Selena Rubio. "I like to get involved in sports and I can do that here."

It is easy to get involved, but you have to work for your spot on the team. Though it is only one grade for the freshman team there is a competition to show off skill.

"I thought I wasn't going to make it on the team," said Sophomore Kelly Page. "But when I did, I was glad I did and I know I worked for it."

Players have to practice what they're going to do on game days.

"We work so well together as a team," said team member Angela Motz. "All the practice has added up and we know we're in the big leagues now."

These freshmen have big shoes to fill when it comes to the future. But they way things are going they should have no problems.

FRESHMAN TEAM PREPARES FOR HIGH SCHOOL BALL

She slides right in

Step up to the plate

Sophomore Angela Motz stares down an oncoming pitch. The concentration in her eyes only emphasizes her focus on the game. Aside from starting right field, Motz lead the team in hits.

ONE TO REMEMBER

JV SOFTBALL HAS AN ALL-AROUND SQUAD

This is one of the most dedicated group of ladies you'll find on the field. The JV Softball team puts in hours of grueling practices consisting of running, batting, and fielding.

Many times these dedicated players don't receive the credit they deserve, even though they spend much of their time on the field battling for a win. The team usually finishes at the top of the conference, an outstanding accomplishment, which was expected for this year's team as well.

These girls deserve a pat on the back for all they manage, even though not many recognize them for it.

"One of the best things about this year's team is their work ethic," said Coach Cindy Short. "They work really hard to be our best and we have."

Jennifer Grace

Hiding it in there
Junior Rebecca Reichle tosses a pitch to home plate. Reichle was starting pitcher for the Junior Varsity team.

HOOP'N

It doesn't take a magician to see the future of the JV Basketball team. With a squad consisting of Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors, they are well on their way to being on varsity level.

"I enjoy playing on JV, but my goal is to be on varsity," said Sophomore John Connor.

And the only way to make it to that level is to play as a team. Teamwork is considered by many to be an essential skill in the sport.

"The JV team has a lot of team working skills. They've shown a lot of improvement," said Assistant Coach Troy Springer.

Not only does the JV team have to work out physically, to play well they must also be mentally focused on the game.

"I just have to stay relaxed and keep my mind on what I'm doing," said Sophomore Henry Jones.

Many players agree that it is better to play with a lot of crowd motivation.

"It's easier when we know the crowd is there supporting us," said Junior Brian Windham.

However, each of the players get ready and stay focused for a game is different in many ways, but one thing is for sure. The JV team is unstoppable to reach their goal to varsity.

Danielle Dibeau

Shake and bake: Sophomore Ronald Robinson goes to dribble past his Okemos defender. Although they dropped this game to the Chieftans, Robinson gave his all throughout.

JUNIOR VARSITY BOYS BASKETBALL GOES FOR THE WIN.

Dribble Pass Shoot: Junior Brian Windham looks to pass over a defending opponent. Passing is a key to winning at any team sport. It is a skill that is a necessity to be successful not only on the Junior Varsity level, but all levels of play.

Can't Catch Me: Sophomore John Connor challenges a Flint Central opponent at this season opening home game. Connor's defense was one of his fortes. Even when he had an off night on the offensive end, he made up for it on the defensive side.

I want that: Junior Brian Windham follows through on a free throw. Basketball was the only JV sport Windham played. However, he was also a member of the Varsity Football and Track squads.

SHOOTING TO WIN

FRESHMEN TEAM AIMS FOR VICTORY

Set it up: Sophomore Robert Patterson runs a play at the start of an offensive formation. This is one of the unique jobs of the point guard.

To anyone who wants to be good at a sport, a four week season isn't what they want to improve their play. Something a little longer might suit their taste level and make them better players. This is the state of middle school sports which lead some believe the skill level of incoming freshman suffer. Without a serious pre-high school arena to practice their talents, it would seem that freshman level basketball would be a sort of novice league. However, it's quite the contrary. Many freshman ball games are just as intense as their Junior Varsity counterparts.

"Summer leagues and stuff really helped me before I got to high school," said freshman Don Jovi.

These leagues are inevitably keeping the skill in freshman basketball to a prime.

Jerome White

PUMPED JV SOCCER

He shoots, he sco, no wait he saves! Everett's goalie jumps high to save yet another possible goal by the opposing team. Although the JV Soccer team didn't exactly have a winning season the effort and heart they put into every game made each player a winner. Through the demanding work outs and new players by the end of the season a team had been developed that everyone could be proud of.

"The first few practices were the most challenging aspect of the year" said first year player Dusty Deam "I didn't know what the heck I was doing."

Practice drained the players' energy, after hours of laps around the field, drills, and playing. But when game time came around, the practice showed, with a little help from their adrenaline.

"It was hard trying to score being one of the smallest players on the team," said Freshman Jay Stowell "But it is the best feeling having everyone cheer you on when you score."

From the young men just starting soccer this year to the freshmen who have seven years of experience under their belt, all players did a tremendous job coming together to create a team. Next year can only get better.

WORKING TOGETHER

JV BASEBALL BUILDS TEAMWORK

Incoming
Junior Ricardo Villereal steps up to the plate concentrating on the oncoming pitch. The Varsity level that Villereal is on is what many JV players shoot for.

For all sports teams it is essential to work together. The Junior Varsity baseball team has shown it goes beyond the game. They came to realize that team is more than one person.

"Since we've been a team all the players have become friends," said Junior Jon DuBois. "We think it is important to take it beyond the field."

During the season the players understand that when game time comes, their relationship goes from friends to athletes. Knowing that teamwork is extremely important, they set goals for themselves.

"We try to be a better team and work together with each game," said Junior Jeremiah Palmer.

Being a unit instead of a bunch of individuals was essential in creating success for this squad.

Jessie Gibson

LACES OUT

One stereotype of fresh men is that they are constantly trying to win the approval and acceptance of the other classes. This was particularly true about the freshman football team. Through hard competition and rough weather, they strived to win, and to impress their older counterparts. In the process, they developed tough attitudes and a drive that they never had before.

This newly acquired motivation lead to a lot of good things for the freshmen. Such as pulling out a few wins, and learning a lot in long practices. Yet some people did not like the attitudes that some players developed as a result.

"The freshmen are arrogant, cocky, and over their heads," said upperclassman player Joshua Shepard.

Needless to say, most of the freshmen football players were offended by those who thought them conceited. Some of the freshmen found the older players' attitudes surprising. To them, a positive attitude was just the thing they needed to pull together and prepare for the years ahead.

Get'em: Freshmen Rashad Muhammad runs toward the touchdown zone while team mate Ronald Robertson preps to tackle his opponent from the Easter team. The boys gave all they could at every game.

TOUCH DOWN

J. V. FOOTBALL GIVES THEIR ALL

It was a whole new season with a whole new coach. With long, hard, and hot practices during the summer of running and tackling. The Junior Varsity football players strove their hardest to achieve the one thing that was not last year. To win.

"I felt satisfied because we won more than one game," said Sophomore Mark Deottcher.

Even though they lost the majority of the games, their fans never gave up. The stands were always filled with a hearty amount of fans.

"It was all about belief," said Junior Jason Sleight. "They just believed in us, that's why we never gave up."

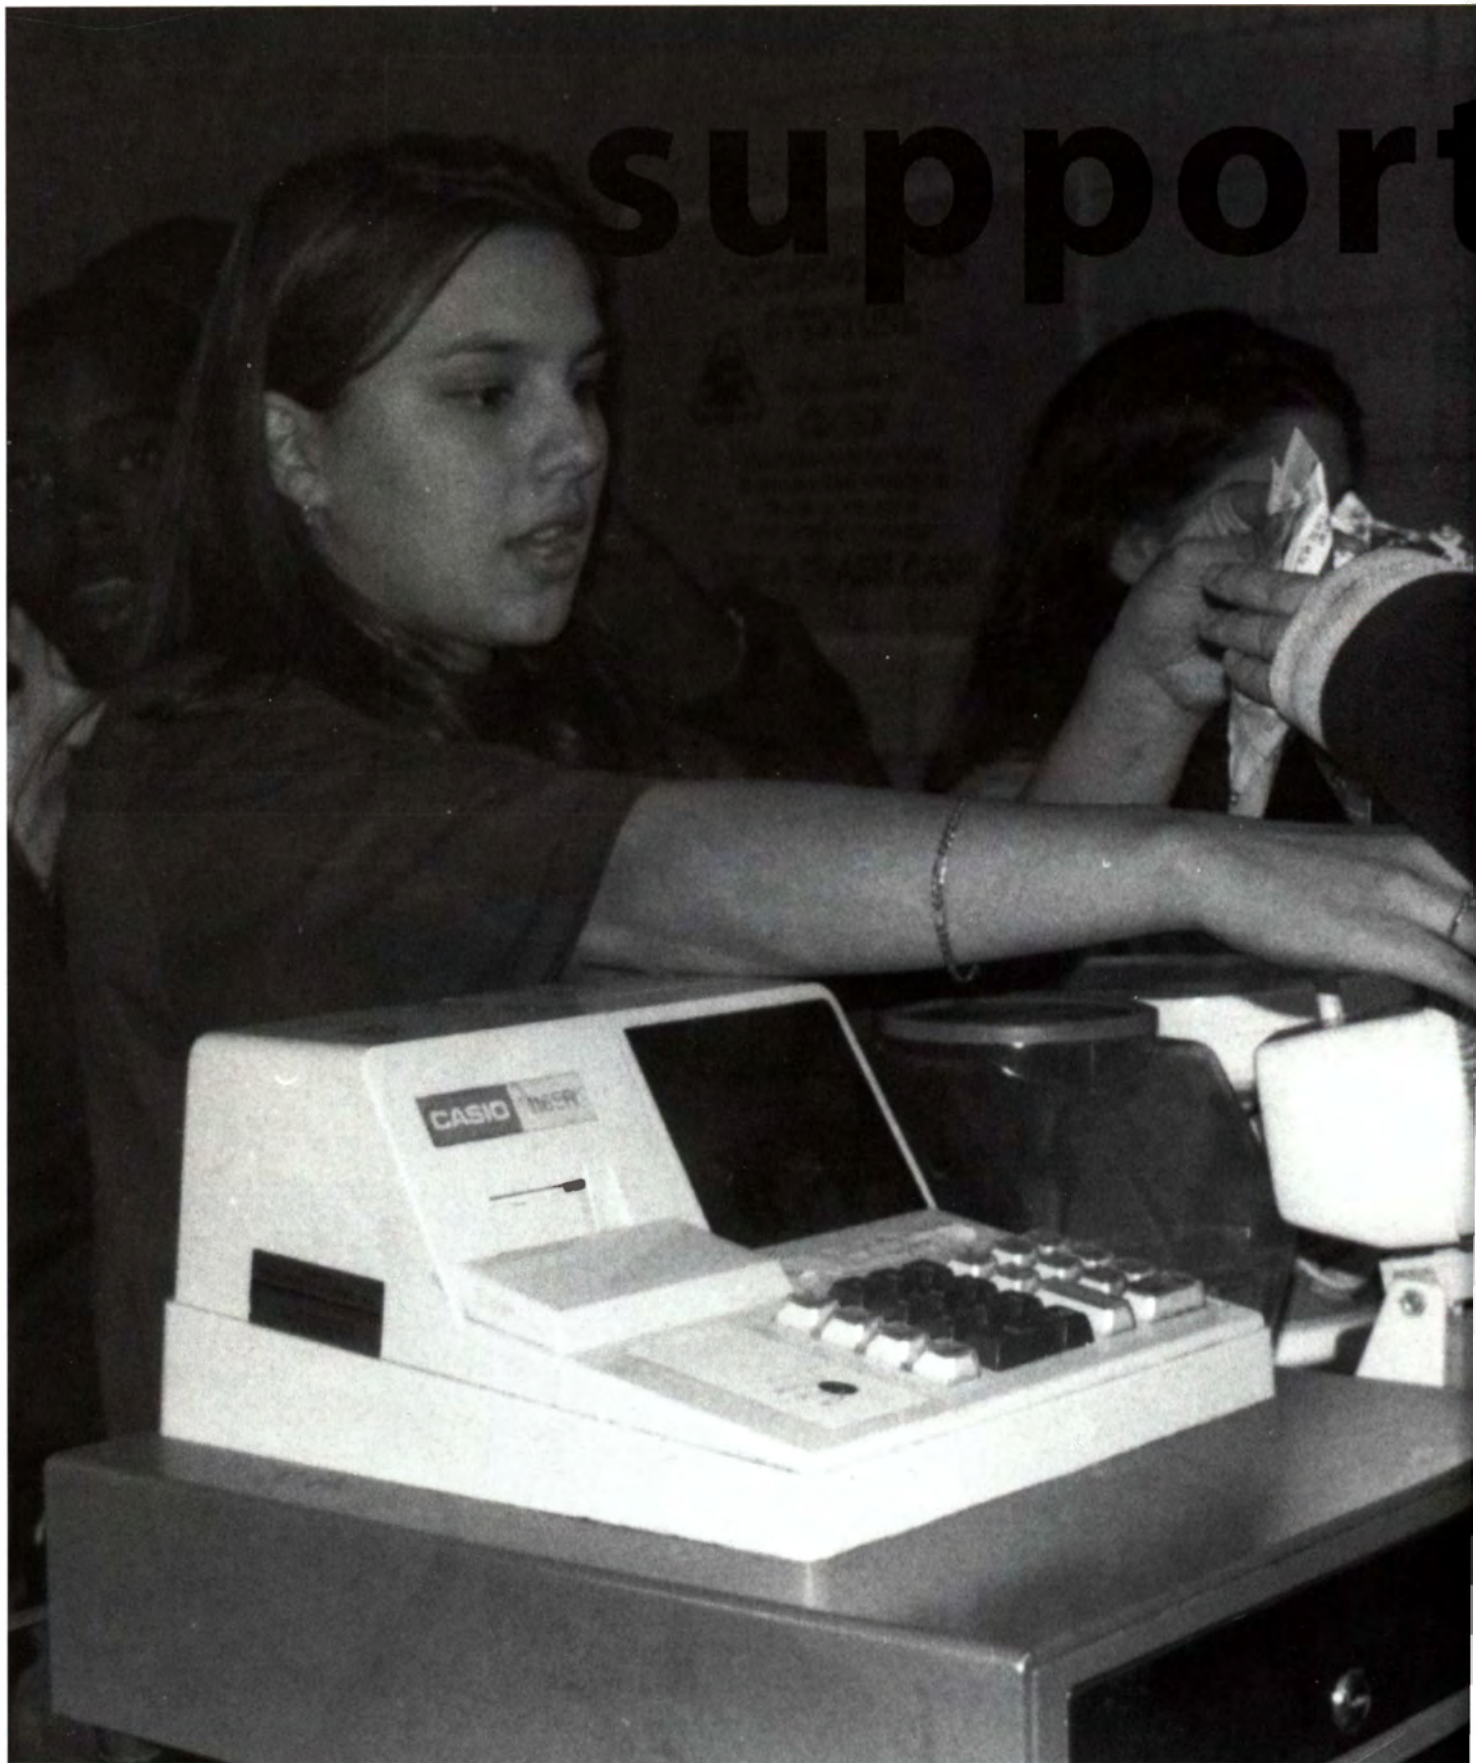

While some may argue that it was the belief, the coaches, or the persistence that kept them going, most say it was dedication.

Students, yearbook get support from man

Sugar, sugar. Crystal Diaz stops at the school store during lunch for the candy rush that will get her through the rest of the day.

@everett

For students to be successful it takes a lot of support. Whether it's an extra hour of after-school tutoring or an extra quarter for a pop. Teachers are the most important part of a student's education. They are the leaders and role models for many students. Only Everett are there so many teachers doing outstanding things. Librarian Patricia Pochert, Assistant Principal David Arvizu and Special Needs Counselor Cleveland Henry all have pilot's licences. Only Everett is there a father and son both teaching in the same building. Government teacher James Tobysky dives and Chemistry teacher Brenda Cinther grows and arranges flowers and herbs into wreaths to sell.

Similar to support needed by students, the yearbook requires support as well. Producing a yearbook takes a lot of time, work and funding. There are many sources of support for the yearbook. Local businesses buy advertisements to show their support. Parents and students show support to their children and friends by purchasing parent and senior goodbyes. The memories that happened Only Everett are put into print to last forever.

Whether it's ad sales for the yearbook or help from teachers after school, support at Everett is appreciated.

Heffer

Congratulations, you made it! High school's over, no more alarm clock (Heather, get up!) Now, on with your future Reach for the stars. We love you, Mom and Dad

Pamela Green

Just yesterday you were our baby girl and now you've become an accomplished, beautiful young woman ready to start your college career. We're so proud! Love, Mom and Dad

Nicole

You have grown to be a very beautiful, talented and sensitive daughter. Your family is very proud of you. We wish you good luck and happiness in your future. Love, Mom and Dad

Annie

You are strong and smart. We are so proud of you! Love, Mom, Dad and Erin

Anne Cummings

The book you're holding is the culmination of over a year's worth of sweat and determination. Love the theme, and the dividers are awesome. You made this an easy year for me. Thanks for that, I needed it. It's been a great time... I'll miss your organization and extreme seriousness. Psyche. Take care, and remember that the time you spent in room 146 could have happened only @... sorry, you're probably as sick of that phrase as I am...

We were going to write something real sentimental but then we realized we didn't have anything nice to say about each other. So as our mother's always told us: "If you don't have anything nice to say don't say anything at all." But then again, when did we ever listen to our mothers?

Peace out Brat

Looking back upon our years @ Everett as students and athletes we've realized the friendships we've made will last a life time. The endless hours of practice, the long gossip hours in Florida not only brought us closer together as a team, but as friends. We've seen our young childish, but innocent ways disappear as we matured and grown into the you ng women we are today. We'll always cherish the laughs, the cries, the wins and the loses as we all move on to another piece of the puzzle knowing our high school years have been complete, but never forgetting the good times.

DEFINE

Team n. 1 A group of players on the same side in a game
2 Any group organized to work together. Teamwork n. Cooperative effort by the members of a team to achieve a common goal

The JV Volleyball team this year had some difficulties with the concept of "team." The struggle was to balance playing as a group with every individual's capability, in turn letting the girls win games - together

"We each had the capability to win," said Sophomore Katheryn Doyer "but we needed more teamwork."

Winning adj. Successful, victorious. The act of one that wins. The real question here is, how important was winning? Was "winning" a matter of points, or was it something victorious in the heart? Does a perfect record always reflect the quality of a team's work?

"It wasn't about winning," said Sophomore Angela Motts, "it was about playing as a team."

So what is it that makes a great team? Togetherness? Hard work and concentration? Skill? Sometimes it really isn't whether you win or lose. It's how you play the game. "We had a new coach and learned a lot," said Doyer. "That was one of the most important things we accomplished this season."

Brenda Harrison

THE LADIES JV VOLLEYBALL TEAM LOOKS TO DEFINE A SEASON

Grand slam

Sophomore Nicole Rennaker slams the ball over the net in practice. Rennaker played a vital role in the JV offense as middle hitter. She took what she did in practice (pictured) and applied it the game situations.

Send it back

Freshman Rachel Stanton returns a volley to the opposing team as fellow Freshman Amanda Smith (10) watches on.

You're goin' down

Sophomore Monica Velasquez uses all of her strength to serve the ball over the net. This was apart of an after practice game in which the ladies challenged each other to a serving contest.

COURT SOUNDS

FRESHMAN VOLLEY- BALL HEARS THE CALL

Communication is the key to the success and unification of any team. Both on and off the court, it's vital to maintain some sort of interaction between teammates. At first glance, it would seem that there is a sort of obstacle in the way of this necessity. With the coach being legally deaf, one is left to wonder how the girls' manage.

It doesn't really bother me that she's [Coach that one lady] like that, because she's so cool and she knows what she's doing when it comes to the sport," said freshman Soand So. She continued, "she reads lips, and signs, so it's not really noticeable. She's just like everyone else."

This clearly shows that volleyball is a universal language. The sport that knows no boundaries unites this group of girls both on and off the court.

@everett

Recognizing every club, sport and person at Everett is impossible. Every person has something they are involved with that could be considered an alternative. Like the non-varsity sport they play outside of school or the community service project they participate in with their church. No matter what students spend their free time doing, they would want it to have its moment in the spotlight. Only Everett do you find students taking their lunch time to skateboard outside of the school. Maybe it was the vision of it being an Olympic sport, or just being able to compete at the high school level. Or perhaps, it was just for fun. Students pursuing fun also started a roller hockey team at the Apple Sports Plex. Because Haskett, Holt, Eastern and Sexton participate, we can't say it's something Only Everett. We can say it's an alternative to the sports teams at Everett and one of the very few winning teams we have. Besides sports there are also clubs students can get involved in. These clubs bring people together to build friendships and bonds between peers. Only Everett is there such a broad spectrum of activities and interests covered to satisfy every student's needs.

Class Acts

Sports officials are often ridiculed for the calls they make in a game. The dumb calls they make which might change a whole game can really set you off, right? For some students this year the unique job of sports officiator was very real. New classes offered at Everett, such as sports officiating, give students some enjoyable opportunities for class time. Besides the sports officiating class, there were three other new classes, include Forensic Science, Tae Kwon Do, and Current Events.

Physics teacher Barbara Dal tried out a new class this year called Forensic Science. This class was filled with investigations and criminalistics. Students had the chance to study different aspects of a crime scene, from fingerprints to a small piece of hair.

"Forensic Science is a really fun class," said Junior Kellie Derry. "Some days we get to look at hair or study crime scene stuff."

Another exciting new class this year was Tae-Kwon-Do. This class is both a challenge and a fun experience for everyone involved in the class.

"I like kicking a__!" said Senior Nicholas Vankovering. "It's something I've wanted to take for a long time, and now I can - for free!"

The Current Events class change to a Writing and Social Sciences class second semester. Students use current issues in the news to write about. This class was offered in order to have more electives in the Social Studies departments. Both the students and the teacher Denton Billings enjoy the class.

"We have fun because there are a lot of bright, juniors and seniors who are interested," said Billings. "They all have great opinions and are easy to work with."

-Elizabeth Finkel

Learning to Work

Lights, camera, action! Sound like something you would hear on a TV or a movie set? TV production is one of the many alternative classes you may take through Hill Vocational Center. Students who want to get out of the regular classes at Everett are given the opportunity to take classes at Hill, work co-op at a job, be a legislative intern downtown or perhaps even dual-enroll at Lansing Community College or Michigan State University. These classes allow students to get up close and personal experience with a particular profession.

"I file papers and answer phones at the mayor's office downtown," said senior Deshaunda Denson. "The best part is being able to see all of the behind the scene stuff in politics."

Thinking about future jobs isn't the only reason for students to participate in these programs. Many students are working for the near future.

"I work at North School in the afternoon to pay my car payment and so I can go to Cancun," said senior Carolyn Dosheff.

Many believe the key to being successful is having real life work experience. Senior Jeremy Allward has taken both Construction and Architectural Drafting.

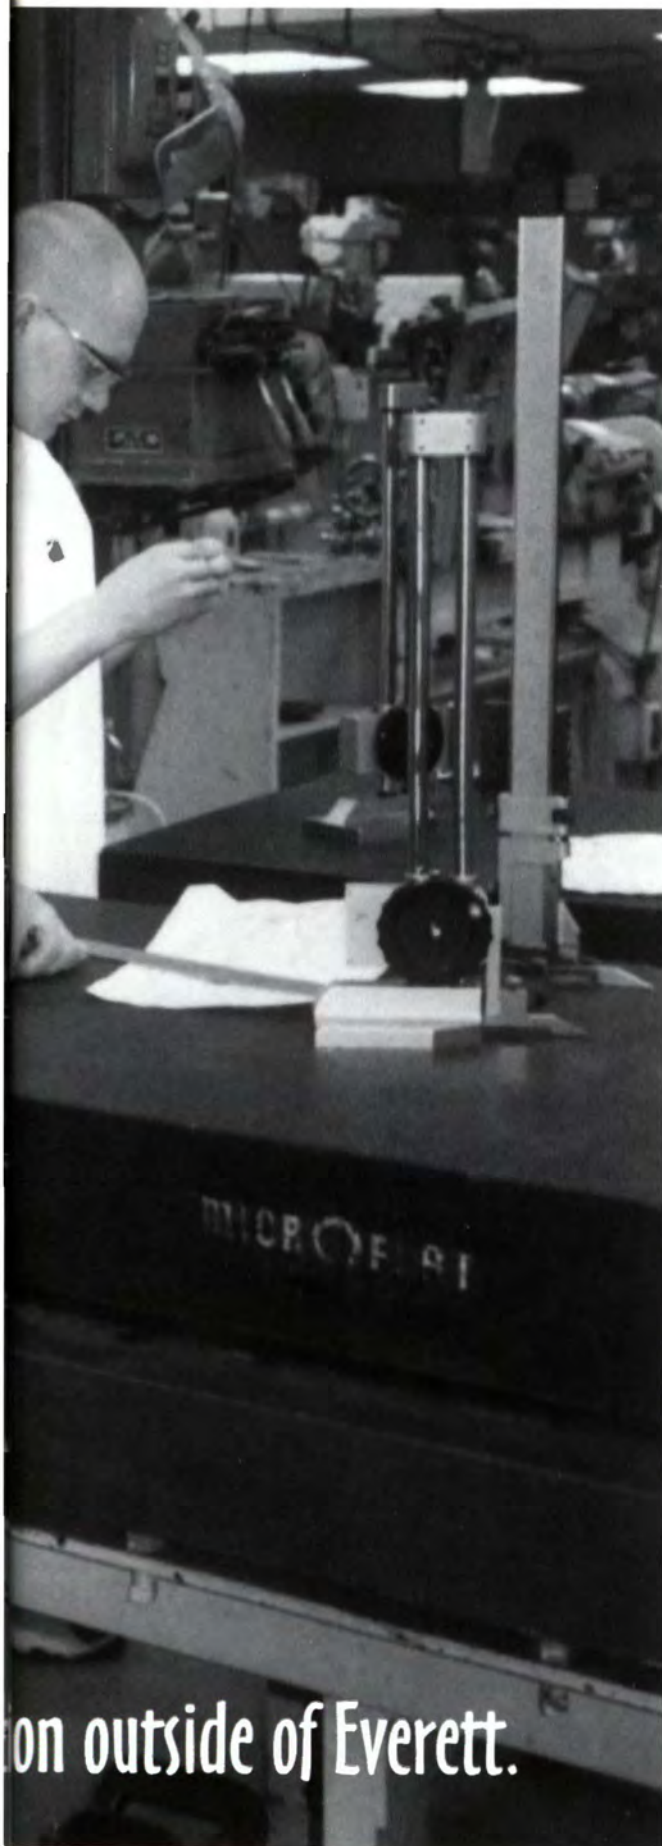

"I will definitely use the skills we learn at Hill," said Allward. "From roofing to framing a house, it's all practical."

There are many programs that allow students to focus their education into one particular field. These included classes offered at Hill, legislative internships and work co-op jobs. Students receive a more focused education. Many students are attracted to the program by all of the unique opportunities they receive.

-Elizabeth Linkel

Brothers & Sisters

There are all types of clubs: international club, French club, Spanish club, and the list goes on and on. While many are geared toward the education of a culture, or preparing for some kind of competition, two clubs are seeking something a little different. The Sisterhood and Brotherhood Networks are organizations that try to make Everett a better place.

"The Sisterhood Network brings not just black females together but tries to unify all ladies of Everett High through leadership and confidence," said Sophomore Ashley Watson.

The same idea applies to the brothers as well. Members are all for the ideas the clubs stand for.

"The Brotherhood Network is a great and exciting chance for young blacks to show leadership by coming together and working as a group rather than individuals like we did in the past," said Junior Derrick Reece.

Prior to the clubs' existence, violence and hatred within the black community as well as Everett as a whole was on the rise. Fights and problems amongst teens were frequent.

"Within those in the group there is a sense of unity. When conflicts arise those in the network are better prepared to work it out," said Senior Charles Whitby.

Lately, the school's atmosphere has been a pleasant one. The clubs have made the jobs of the administration a little easier.

"Although we'll always have problems in the school, there has definitely been a decline as the networks mature and grow," said Assistant Principal Diana McMillan.

It would seem the mission of the Sisterhood and Brotherhood Network is complete. However Sonya Marsalis, leader of the ladies' organization, sees it in another light.

"The job of the network is never done. I plan to have the older girls act as mentors for those younger first year members in the future," said Marsalis.

Volume 52 of the Archives was created using a variety of Macintosh computers, including one Power mac. The layouts were created using PageMaker software, as well as FreeHand and PhotoShop. Copy is 14 pt, captions are set in Schmutz Cleaned 10pt, and folios are set in glorious Monaco.

This beautiful volume was printed by Walsworth Publishing Company. Our Sales Representative was Nora Guiney, our Customer Service Representative was Cheryl Finney. Thanks are due to them and everyone at Walsworth for all their hard work.

Our official photographer was Prestige Portraits in Okemos, Michigan. Many of the senior pictures in the book were taken by them, as were some of the Homecoming photos.

Thank you to Mr. Dale Glynn and all of Everett's administration for their support of our program, and thanks as well to the staff and student body. You truly are a group that can be found only @everett.

It was the most traumatic time of your life. You felt love, joy, and the inevitable low and heartbreak. By the time graduation is done, when all the bustle of prom has faded, you have endured a cavalcade of experiences to rival that of television's most melodramatic soap opera: High school.

Rumors have down reputations, and new relationships have repaired old wounds. Your greatest comfort could have come from the face of an enemy, and you may have learned amazing things about someone you thought you would have never known. In high school, nothing ever turned out the way you expected, or even the way you wanted it to. Anticipation became abstract, and sometimes procrastination crept up on you when you least expected it.

The stress of missed due dates and deadlines, all the pressure to succeed, it all becomes a thing of the past. It will slide away slowly, memories fading into the background, as college or work, and finally - adulthood - become the present.

Those who still have a ways to go in their high school journey may at this and worry about their future. But in the pain and triumphs of high school are times you will enjoy forever, times that could be found

 my sweetie,
 the time has gone
 by so fast, I remember being in Mrs. Mallen's class sitting in front of you always made me smile, everytime
 I looked back at your Kool-Aid grin.
 you know you were my ass in her class.
 I busted my ass for laughing at me when I truly are that special person who has touched your life in so many ways. Not only do you treat me with love, you are my best friend, I share everything with real, and will always be real. What we have is honest say that you are my future. Remember to sleep
 I will always love you for the person that you are. I cannot forget the times you; my love, my dreams, and my future. I share everything with your priorities straight and never let anybody hold you back from the things you want in life. Next year is gonna be hype, we're gonna be Semino! I won't have in the times we had this year, and the ones we will have in the future!
 P.S. Don't forget about our Black
 Jan business!

I love you, Ricardo (candy muscle)

you can count on me through the good & bad times, I'll be here to listen to your worries & your joys.
 I'll make you smile
 when you're down & most important I'll always make you happy!

P.S.
 I'm so hungry!
 HA HA!

TROJANS
