Drain News.

Wm. Keller, Wm. A. Diamond and D. D. Hurlburt, the three special commissioners appointed by the probate court to determine the necessity for the construction of the McKeon drain in Williamston township and to award the damages, made their return to County Drain Commissioner W. R. Carven last Thursday, giving the G. T. R. R. Co. the sum of $392.02 and Wm. E. Seelye the sum of six cents. The railway company and Mr. Seelye refused to release the right of way for the drain and the drain commissioner made application to the probate court for the appointment of the commissioners to condemn the right of way. The railway company claimed damages to the amount of $532.31, but the special commissioners, after viewing the premises and hearing the evidence, would give them but $392.02. The railway company had changed the course of the water from above by cutting through a large hill and letting water down from above in such quantities that the land required deeper and more drainage, but the commissioners were not allowed to take this matter into consideration in awarding their damages, because a separate action must be commenced by the property owners against the company to alleviate that condition. The company was represented by O. J. Hood and O. H. Sessions of Detroit as counsel and the drain commissioner by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Brown of Lansing.

At a joint meeting of the township boards of White Oak, Ingham county, and Isoco and Unadilla, Livingston county, last Friday, the joint county West Cedar Extension drain was decided necessary and a return to that effect was made to the county drain commissioners of the respective counties. This drain will be an extension of about four miles of the large West Cedar drain, contracts for the construction of which were recently let. This will not be a dredge job, but will be done by team work. Surveys for the proposed work will be commenced soon.

At a session of the probate court for the county of Ingham, held in the probate office Thursday, in the matter of the application of Walter R. Carven, county drain commissioner, for the appointment of three disinterested men to act as special commissioners to determine the necessity for the straightening, deepening, widening and reconstructing the Wise drain in Alaledon township, the application of the drain commissioner was granted. The court appointed J. M. Collier of Vevay, Ernest Collins of Lansing township, and O. M. Robertson of Aurelius as special commissioners. These men will meet with the drain commissioner at the probate office on Friday, Feb. 24, at 9:30, from where they will proceed to look over the premises of the drain.

Birthday Surprise.

Mrs. Harriet Carn, residing one mile west of Mason on a Columbia road, was very pleasantly surprised Saturday evening, Feb. 11, in honor of her 74th birthday. About 25 friends and relatives from Burr Oak, Lansing, Mason and North Aurelius were present. The evening was spent with music, and at 10 o'clock refreshments were served, and all departed for their homes, leaving to fill their absence a fine kitchen cabinet and many little presents and cards to remind her of their love and esteem, hoping she would live to enjoy many more returns of the day.

Those present from away were Jacob Carns and wife of Burr Oak, Ora Carn and wife, Frank Osborn and wife of Lansing, Robert Osborn and wife, John Collins and wife, Elmer Myer and daughter Berntha, James Herrick and wife, Wm. Herrick and wife of North Aurelius.

Claude M. Wyman of Grand Rapids has been in this city this week endeavoring to find some trace of his mother. During the 70's Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Wyman lived near Eden. Several years later they parted and it is thought by her son that she remained in this vicinity and afterward married a Mason man. The father, now an old man, and the son live in Grand Rapids, where the young man heard in some way that his mother was in Mason, but in a very critical condition from the effects of a cancer. The county records do not show that any Jennie Wyman ever procured a marriage license here, and not knowing his mother's maiden name nor the name of the man she married, Mr. Wyman is badly handicapped in his search.

Ex-Treas. Harvey Wilson's farm home in Delhi was consumed by fire last Thursday. The flames were first noticed in the attic. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, with their son Oscar and family, occupied the house. An alarm brought about 40 neighbors to the scene and by their efforts most of the contents were saved, but the house was a total loss. The Wilson homestead was settled over 70 years ago, and his house was built during the city war. Insured in the Farmers' Mutual for $800.

Dorris E. Upton, a farmer of Wheatfield township, ended his life last Thursday evening by hanging himself in the granary at his home. He was found by his son Ernest, who was searching for him, as he did not appear at the supper-hour. Sheriff Barnes was notified and in company with Justice Frost, who lives near the Upton home, visited the scene. Deceased was past 60 years of age, and no reason is known for the rash act. He had lived on the farm for 36 years and was highly respected. He leaves a widow, one son and three brothers.

For a short time it is offered for $6,000. This is an ideal farm home.

Ingham County News

Published at Mason every Thursday morning by A. L. ROSE.

Republican County Convention.

A county convention of the republicans of Ingham county will be held at the court house in the city of Mason, on Thursday, Feb. 23, 1911, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for the office of county commissioner of schools, and to elect 26 delegates to the republican state convention, to be held in the city of Saginaw, on Thursday, March 2, 1911, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said convention.

Table listing delegates from various townships: Alameda, Bunkerhill, Delhi, Ingham, Lansing, Leroy, Leslie, Locke, Meridian, Onondaga, Stockbridge, Vevay, Wheatfield, White Oak, Williamson, East Lansing, Mason, 1st Ward, 2nd Ward, Lansing, 1st Ward, 2nd Ward, 3rd Ward, 4th Ward, 5th Ward, 6th Ward, Paul H. King, Chairman, Secretary, Dated, Lansing, Mich., Jan 14, 1911.

The arguments pro and con regarding reciprocity with Canada, show plainly the difficulty in arranging a tariff bill. All are looking for advantages to their own particular locality. Taking a broad view of the situation, it would seem to be the wise solution to have reciprocity with Canada.

Washington Letter.

(From our regular correspondent.) Washington, D. C., Feb. 10, 1911. With a scant three weeks of the congressional session remaining, not one of the important measures before congress when the session began has been disposed of. Reciprocity with Canada marked a new line of cleavage among the republicans and democrats in Washington. Early in the present week senators were hopeful that they might solve the problem by letting the reciprocity agreement severally alone, but it was later brought sharply to their attention that unless there shall be a vote on this reciprocity agreement they will be called back to Washington promptly after March 4 and compelled to remain until there is an expression in the senate either for or against it.

The fact that the English papers and the leader of the opposition in the English parliament are opposed to the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States will doubtless have some influence in favor of its approval by congress in this country. It will be many years, perhaps centuries, before the United States and British America become one country, but the dividing line must sometime fade just as the Mason and Dixon line has faded. There are a hundred reasons for the commercial and political solidarity of North America. There is not one valid reason in opposition. There is no possibility of the absorption of Canada by the United States or the absorption of the United States by Canada. Absorption is not to be thought of, but commerce between the two countries ought to be as free and unrestricted as between Ohio and Indiana.

There is no opposing vote in the senate to Senator Cullom's project authorizing a Lincoln memorial worthy of the great president, and in keeping with high ideals of architectural grandeur. The form of the memorial has not been decided upon. It is left to the judgment and taste of a commission who it is hoped will make a wise and appropriate selection. There have been suggestions of a boulevard connecting Washington and Gettysburg, also a project for a triumphal arch like the Arch of Triumph in Paris or its prototype in Rome. There is also a project to have the memorial occupy the center of the great plaza stretching from the capitol to the union station. The appropriation for this monument is two millions, but it is possible that this sum will be added to before the memorial is completed.

The appropriation by the lower house of congress for diplomatic residences in a number of European and also in some Asiatic capitals is a new but needed departure in our foreign diplomatic policy. The amount for the building of or purchase of consular ambassadorial or ministerial residences is not to exceed $150,000, but this amount will go much farther in the building of suitable residences for our representatives in foreign countries than it would in any American city now having appropriately prepared for the lodging of our diplomatic representatives, perhaps congress can be persuaded to consider in an unfrenzied way a proper uniform for our ministers, consuls and ambassadors, and something different from the evening dress worn by butlers and waiters all over the world. Careful analysts know that there is just as much vanity and affectation and ostentation in the Quaker-like plainness as there is in gorgeous attire, and since an overwhelming majority of the world at home and abroad get their first impressions from clothes, it is not improper that we give them through our foreign representatives a correct impression of the wealth and strength of the United States. Our affected plainness is not less ostentatious than it is deceiving.

Fifty years ago the writer of a book called "Beyond the Mississippi" expressed the popular feeling in behalf of the express companies, when he told how the Wells Fargo Express Co. carried over two million letters within a single year at the cost of 12-20 a letter, which he said clearly "illustrates the superiority of private enterprise, and," he argued, "abolish the postoffice department and leave this like other carrying trade, to private competition, and the mail service of the United States will be performed 50 per cent cheaper and 100 per cent better than it is today." This is very much like the anti-parcels post argument we are having now.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Many Catholics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels. If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexal Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless and colorless. Combined with other well known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people as well as for the most hearty person.

TOURIST CLUB.

Feb. 8th a large number of Tourists met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Beebe, and enjoyed an exceedingly interesting session under the leadership of Mr. Beebe. Master Harold Beebe sang a pathetic song that was greatly enjoyed by all present. John Knox and the Reformation was the subject of a paper by Mrs. Bristol. This was one of the papers that should have a wider publicity than the limits of the Tourist Club, both because of the subject, and the exceptionally interesting manner in which it was treated. Little was said by way of discussion, although Knox was probably the most able of all the founders of a religious denomination whose form of government was taken as the model, and is perpetuated by the greatest republic on earth.

In his paper, "The author of the Bonnie Briar Bush," Mr. Searl gave a full and intensely interesting story of the life of the great preacher, Dr. John Watson, known to literary fame as Ian MacLaren. Apparently, Mr. Searl said in his paper all there was to say about Dr. Watson, as no one cared to add any enlightening remarks, except in relation to the difficulty experienced by some tourists in adapting United States organs of speech to Scottish methods of spelling and pronunciation. After the usual recess and partaking of nourishment, the club was called to order by Mrs. Kerns and the roll was called. In response to this, quotations were to have been given from Dr. Watson, and 21 of the 25 members in attendance answered "present" without an instant's hesitation. The meeting then adjourned to meet with Mrs. Casterlin.

FARMERS CLUB.

A pleasant day greeted the members of the Farmers Club last Saturday so they could attend the regular meeting at Lone Oak farm with W. H. Taylor and family. While the weather was good, sickness among members was quite prevalent and only half a hundred gathered around the festive board and listened to a program of more than usual excellence.

President Ives called the meeting to order and in his usual happy way kept things moving, and Master Harold Beebe, with Mrs. Watts as accompanist, sang a solo.

Alfred Allen offered a resolution favoring reciprocity with Canada, saying it was President Taft's policy and Congressman Smith was sending out letters wishing to know what the people wanted. This led to quite a discussion. W. H. Taylor said, reciprocity in the abstract is all right; you help me and I will help you. H. M. Young favored the resolution, though on the whole protection is a good policy. Trade relations with Canada would soon adjust themselves. J. W. Chapin thought if there was any loss it would be to the farmer, any gain to the manufacturer. R. J. Robb, H. O. Call, S. Shaw and others had their say and Rev. Beebe was glad to see the farmers take such a liberal view of the matter. He thought this agitation came from the consumer instead of the producers and following the Golden Rule would help to adjust things. Julius Chapin thought the price of live stock would be effected more than anything else, but our interests are varied and the consumer in the city is the one who favors reciprocity.

Time was passing and Pres. Ives called for a vote and the resolution was adopted. A letter had been received from R. J. Bullen, which the president did not take time to read, but will be printed in full, and Mrs. Taylor read a letter from Mrs. Green descriptive of New Orleans and Galveston. She spoke of the appearance of cotton to the north and described quite fully the cemeteries at New Orleans. Galveston is built upon an island and she not only described the greater causeway and the sea wall but sent post cards illustrating them.

After instrumental music by Miss Burgess, Mrs. C. L. Beebe read a fine paper upon "Household economies." A few brief notes cannot do justice to so great a subject and to fully appreciate the paper it ought to have been heard. In part she said—domestic science and domestic economy, household science and household economy are but other names for cooking, sewing and general housework. The first cooking school was established in 1874 in New York City. Miss Parloa has the honor of being one of the first teachers of cooking, a school being established in Boston in 1877. Philadelphia and Washington soon followed. Cooking as an art has been a backward industry. The men have been slow to provide and the women slow to use modern inventions. To place one in a kitchen of two centuries ago with the fireplace and brick oven and today with the range, cream separator and bread mixer, and there has been some improvement. Domestic science should be a factor in our education and the time is not far distant when a girl will know how to make a loaf of bread, cook a steak and brew a cup of coffee before she leaves school. Mrs. Young opened the discussion referring to the work done at the M. A. C. and said when good wholesome food is prepared the men will not dig their heels with their teeth, as has recently been expressed regarding food not properly cooked.

Julius W. Chapin, a teacher of agriculture in the public school of North Adams, was present and gave us an interesting talk upon agricultural education. The first college to teach agriculture was founded in 1820, but, being maintained by private gifts, did not live long. Our own M. A. C. was the first college to receive state aid, and through the efforts of Prof. French North Adams was one of the first high schools in the state to make agriculture a part of the regular course. In the 10th grade they study farm crops, judge soils, conservation of moisture, tile drainage. In the 11th grade, live stock, various breeds; ideal types, and why thoroughbreds are better than scrubs. In the 12th grade, feeds and feeding, farm management, landscape gardening, farm barns, horticulture, propagation of the strawberry, and home sanitation.

The discussion was quite general and naturally included both subjects—agriculture for the boy and domestic science for the girl. Rev. Beebe said liking to do anything takes away all drudgery, and the more one knows about farming and raising the easier it will be. The question arose whether these subjects could be taught in the grades instead of waiting for the high school and Miss Taylor said she had two and one-half years of domestic science in the city schools of Toledo in the grades, and that of 42 who completed the 8th grade, only six went on with the high school work; thus emphasizing if you want to reach the masses it must be done in the grades. H. M. Young thought we were depending too much upon schools. They do not make men and women; they help. You wanted to arouse the curiosity of the child and teach them many things at home. Mr. Chapin is the third generation of a farmer to belong to our own Ingham County Farmers club and was made an honorary member. After music by Miss Taylor, the club adjourned to meet in Mason the second Saturday of March with Judge and Mrs. Gardner and Mrs. Norris. The year books were ready for distribution and it is hoped every member will receive one early in the year. Mr. Taylor has made many improvements since we were there two years ago and as he and his family are all interested, we expect to see more and surely it is a royal place to go.

LETTER TO FARMERS' CLUB

Written by R. J. Bullen Nowlin California.

HIS IMPRESSIONS OF THE WEST

Description of the Country where He is Spending the Winter.

National City, Cal., Feb. 3, 1911. Dear Friend Ives:—Your letter of the 18th was received in due time, and to say that I was glad to hear from you and the club would be putting it lightly.

I hardly know what to write that would be of interest to you unless I should undertake to give you a little description of the surrounding country. San Diego, a thriving city of about 40,000 inhabitants, is situated on San Diego Bay, cut off from the main waters of the Pacific by Point Loma, a narrow strip of land extending into the ocean from the north several miles and rising above the level of the sea over 400 feet. On this point is located the ruins of the old Spanish lighthouse, long since abandoned and replaced by a more modern one, the old one being so high up it was hard for mariners to distinguish the light from a star. The new one is a tower about 100 feet high, built down near the water's edge, and equipped with a machine in the top that turns a set of lens which reflect a red, white and blue light alternately, a very ingenious piece of machinery. And by the way, what I visited it two years ago I was agreeably surprised to find a man by the name of Beeman having charge of it, belonging to our Ingham county family of Beemans in Williamstown.

Then as we go south several miles there is another narrow neck of land leaving the main land and terminating in a peninsula on which is located a little city named Carando. This land from the south comes very near to the terminus of Point Loma, having a channel wide and deep enough for the largest ocean vessels to pass in and out. On Point Loma and overlooking the channel is located Fort Rosecrans and one of the best government wireless stations in the country. San Diego Bay is about 16 miles long, extreme length, with an average width of three miles. Taking the natural surroundings all together, it is one of the best, if not the best, natural harbors in the world.

The first start of civilization in San Diego was when Father Junipero Serra in 1769 planted the cross at San Diego Bay at what is now called Old Town, about three miles north of the present site of the city, and built a mission to educate and convert to Christianity the Indians. It is still marked by the ruins of the adobe house, which of course was the only building material obtainable at that time. Old Town is marked also by a big granite boulder where John C. Freemont planted the U. S. flag in 1846. Here you will also see the old chapel and the bells brought from Spain in 1802. The city's site was changed to the present location years ago through the influence of a man by the name of Horton, who lived to see a thriving city built up, he having died less than two years ago.

Among the varied industries carried on in San Diego is the manufacture of lumber by the Benson Lumber Co., who built a large sawmill on the bay about four years ago. A queer place for a sawmill you will say, hundreds of miles from a tree that will make lumber. But they bring the logs in rafts seven to eight hundred miles or more up the coast, a million feet or more in a raft, and tow them down with tugs and take them from the water right into the mill. All of the waste from the mill is valuable here.

National City is located just over the south line of San Diego and was incorporated by the Kimball Bros., who owned a large tract of land here when the Santa Fe railroad was built in 1885. The corporation covers over 40 square miles. But through the failure of the above mentioned railroad company to live up to their agreement, the anticipations and expectations of the incorporators did not materialize. But there are better things in store for National City, for there is a new railroad being built from San Diego to Yuma, in Arizona, which will shorten the distance from the east at least 100 miles, and the high altitudes of other lines will be largely cut out, and the railroad shops and roundhouse will be located on the line between San Diego and National City. The prospect is that the road will be completed in about two years.

The products of the country around National City are lemons, oranges, barley, oats and alfalfa hay, lemons being the leading fruit in this section. The water supply for this district comes from the Sweetwater river. The reservoir is about eight miles out in the San Magill mountains. The first dam which was built a number of years ago created a basin with an impounding capacity of 7,000,000,000. The dam is now being raised 15 feet higher, which will make the entire structure over 100 feet high. The dam is built entirely of concrete, reinforced with steel, and when completed will hold 12,000,000,000 gallons. The material for the cement is taken from the gorge below the dam, the rock being blasted from the side of the mountain and broken up and run through a crusher. The sand is taken from the bed of the river. This is conveyed by horse cars to the base of the dam, where it is dumped into a mixer, from where it is hoisted in large buckets to the top of dam. The dam is anchored by digging trenches into the side of the mountain and putting in steel bars and imbedding them in concrete, so there is no chance for it ever to give way. The entire cost of the dam when finished will be around $500,000. I understand it is owned by Boston capitalists.

There is a new industry just started here. It is called the Durostone Works. The Durostone is not common in this country, this being the only factory in America, the company bringing their stone from Mexican territory, where I understand they have options on an inexhaustible supply. It is a queer stone of volcanic origin, very hard. It is first put through crushers and reduced to small pebbles and then conveyed to a large, long revolving cylinder, set on a slight incline, and kept filled with a very hot fire. It takes the pebbles several hours to pass through this fire, from whence it is conveyed to bins to cool. Then it is conveyed to the grinding mills and is reduced to a very fine powder, and then it goes through a bolt and comes out looking very much like wheat flour, but very light. Then it is mixed with water and molded into all kinds of building material, and is very strong and light. If a polished surface is desired a plate glass is put into the molds and a perfect polish is secured. I saw some steps that were made there and they had every appearance of the finest marble and much stronger and lighter.

est marble and much stronger and lighter.

Maybe I have already wearied your patience, but I must tell you a little about the Curtis aviation meet, which we attended at Carando. The exhibition was held at the race track. The three machines were housed on North Island, a short distance from the track. First Mr. Curtis started from the island, flew out over the bay and out near the fort on Point Loma, and then around and over the track several times, and alighted close by the grandstand as gracefully as a bird. Then Mr. Ely left the island and went in the same course as Mr. Curtis, only higher up, and at times it was announced that he was 1,000 feet up. He also alighted near the grandstand. He maneuvered in the air very much like a bird, diving downward, and then rising and circling around in a wonderful fashion. Mr. Ely used the same machine which Mr. Curtis the day before flew from the water and alighted on the water, using pontoons to support the machine when starting and alighting. It is remarkable. I never could have believed that a machine would be invented that would navigate the air without something lighter than air to hold it up. Mr. Curtis says that he feels just as safe in his airship as he would in an automobile going at the same rate of speed.

In hope of soon being back to my Michigan with you, I am, Very truly yours, R. J. Bullen.

Another Pioneer Gone.

Seventy years is a long time to look back upon, also to note the changes which have taken place, as well as to live at the same place for that period of time.
Isabelle Jane Heath came to Aurelius with her parents from Carlton, N. Y., where she was born August 15, 1839. Her early life and experience were like all those who were here at that time. On the 4th day of May, 1858, she was united in marriage to J. W. Freeman. To this union there came one daughter and four sons: Nettie A. James, who died in infancy, Leroy D., who died in January, 1890, at the age of 23, John C. and J. J., of Los Angeles, California. Mrs. Freeman was the daughter of Linden A. and Lydia Heath. In addition to the three living children above mentioned, she is survived by her husband and one sister, Mrs. Mary Ann Austin, of Clare, Mich.
Mrs. Freeman united with the Baptist church of Aurelius about forty-five years ago at the time of a great revival held by Rev. John Gunderman, when about 100 were converted, most of whom joined the church. Her consistent Christian faith may be judged by the last words she uttered, repeating "Jesus, lover of my soul, let me to Thy bosom fly."
Although afflicted with rheumatism for some years past, she was in usually good health and spirits when she retired Monday night, Feb. 6, but about two hours afterwards her husband was awakened by hearing her moving about. He arose and called the daughter, Mrs. Hyatt, but before other help arrived she expired while sitting in her chair.
May 4, 1908, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at the home in Aurelius at which time a large number of relatives and friends were present to help them observe the memorable occasion.
Funeral services were held at the home on Thursday, Feb. 9, conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Davis.

INGHAM COUNTY INSTITUTE

Farmers Enjoy A Successful Meeting This Week.

Neither the day nor the weather were propitious for a large attendance at the opening of the Farmers' Institute, at the Methodist church at 9:45 a. m. Monday. Although a little tardy in getting together at the first session, the program as given was carried out. The first state speaker was A. L. Hopkins of Bear Lake. Mr. Hopkins is a practical farmer and his manner of handling his subject, "How shall we feed our crops?" gave evidence of close observation and careful study. Space will not admit of a synopsis of any of the addresses.
"Getting more for the corn crop" was the first subject assigned N. P. Hull of Dimondale. Mr. Hull is Master of the State Grange and one of the foremost farmers of the state. He is an earnest, forceful speaker and follows the line of personal experience, backing up his statements of what may be done by experience of his own along similar lines. Probably no one is receiving more attention just now than the corn crop. All discussion tends to betterment. Mr. Hull awakened new interest and a helpful discussion followed.
At the opening of the afternoon session a chorus of a dozen faced young bells from the high school came in and rendered very nicely Tennyson's poem, "When I Shall Cross the Bar." Dr. T. C. Blaisdell, commenting on the singing and the poem, pronounced it the most beautiful poem in the English language. Dr. Blaisdell's talk on the "Farm and the School" was replete with interest. He has a most fascinating way of putting things together and clearing of his propositions and statements.
Supt. W. D. Riggs followed in the discussion, taking the country boys and girls for his crop, which he characterized the most important of all crops. He favored the compulsory law for school attendance. Messrs. Taylor and Ives made a few criticisms on some phases of the law as carried out. Supt. Scarl followed and ironed out the wrinkles.
Mr. Hopkins gave a short talk on cement and its uses on the farm. Almost all farmers use cement these days and it is being put to new uses continually as timber becomes scarce and the price advanced.
At 3:30 Miss Badenock, instructor in music, came in with an entire class of young ladies and gentlemen to the number of 40 and rendered two selections and retired amidst applause.
No subject on the program today caused the farmers to sit up and take notice equal to that of "Dairying as a Business" as presented by Mr. Hull. If intelligently conducted he believed it the safest and most profitable of any one branch of the farming industry, and gave his own experience to establish his position.
The evening session convened at 7:30 with a fair attendance, despite the disagreeable weather which prevailed. The high school orchestra rendered two pleasing selections at the opening.
N. P. Hull gave an address on "Success and How to Achieve It." This was both interesting and inspiring and it is to be regretted that every boy and girl in the county could not have heard it.
Miss Daisy Call gave a pleasing recitation and Miss Katharine Elliott gave an entertaining piano solo.
T. C. Blaisdell followed with a talk on "That Boy." It was a timely discussion of a parent's duty regarding the development of the boys.
W. H. Raven gave a talk Tuesday morning on "Bean Culture" and after giving some suggestions regarding the preparation of the soil he said the best planting time was from May 20 to June 20 and the best method was using the edge tool corn planter, for uniform work. He stated that Michigan lead in quantity and quality of beans raised. Advised farmers to make it a general crop, not a "catch" one, merely to utilize the spare ground.
Prof. C. P. Allegan from the M. A. C. then took the floor and added a word to Mr. Raven's warning in regard to choosing seed beans, and that was of no less importance than good culture.
Prof. Allegan's subject was, "Small Fruits," of which he considered the strawberry the most important, calling it the king of small fruits. As a mortgage raiser he said it stood next to the apple. Quick results was a strong argument in its favor. Nothing is planted here pays so largely for water alone as does the strawberry. A moist, cool soil with copious watering will pay big dividends to any one who goes into the work heartily.
The afternoon session opened with an address by Dr. R. P. Lyman of M. A. C. Subject, Feeds and Feeding, and Their Relations to Disease." Many diseases are traceable to feeding. Colic is one of them. Bulky food better be fed at the end of the day's labor. Careful feeding prevents disease. A horse recovering from disease must be fed with great care. A horse should not be fed immediately when tired. The cause of worms in horses is chargeable to heavy feed. The Dr. said a lot of things worth remembering.
"Wheat and Oats as a money crop" was given fifteen minutes' attention by Mr. Raven, a strong advocate of rotation, a great friend of the disc harrow. He believed the farmers of Michigan would again grow wheat. Varieties of wheat are found to be adapted to certain soils.

VIII.—The Country Girl's Career.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

OUR most appreciated blessings are seldom the ones that are closest at hand. Just as the country bred boy sometimes gets an idea that he has a genius too broad to be confined between the boundaries of his father's farm, so the girl who has grown up in the country sometimes gets a longing for a glimpse of the unknown world within the city's walls. The imaginative girl often feels that her talents will be more appreciated in the city than in the little home town. She imagines herself burning with a genius for acting, perhaps, and longs for the glare of the footlights and the plaudits of the crowd, or perhaps it is art in one of its many disguises that is calling her to the artificial life of paved streets and brick walls.

Occasionally it is the lights, the music and the pleasures of a swiftly flowing city life that attract the girl from the country, but not often. The girl who is a true daughter of the country is seldom deceived by the glare of a light whose shadow covers tears and sorrow or the pleasure that is but a mask for pain. We are told that the "glamour" of the city life is the force that draws the country girls to town. Nothing of the sort. There is little glamour about the city for the healthy girl. The first thought of the country girl when she finds herself in the city is "how dirty" or "how awfully crowded." But notwithstanding the dirt and the crowds she often remains. She stays because she is ambitious to have a "career." There is a true hearted farmer boy back home probably who would be glad to take her into partnership. But in the past the girl has seldom been taught to look forward with pride to becoming a farmer's wife or to regard a life on the farm as being a career worthy of her ambition.

This is the natural outcome of the conditions for the quarter of a century when farmers were selling their produce below cost. The lot of the farmer's wife was one of almost unrelenting toil, as was that of the farmer himself. There was little to lighten the monotony of the ceaseless grind of housework. Her horizon was limited by the kitchen walls, and her highest ambition was to keep the boys out of the "best room." It is little wonder that she hoped for something better for her daughters. She saw unfolding in them her own girlhood, and she dreaded to see them spend their lives in the hopeless task of keeping body and soul together as she had done.

Her idea of city life was vague. Most of the city women she saw were well dressed, unwrinkled and seemingly happy. They were living the kind of life she would choose for her daughter. The toll of the wives of the poorer laborers she did not see. One of the main reasons that all through this period the country looked up to the city and the city looked down on the country was that country people saw only the best side of the city and the city people saw only the worst side of the country.

The change that has come about in country life in the past decade and a half is so great as to be almost unbelievable. Many of the country people themselves refuse to believe it. They read the reports of high prices skeptically, and not until the produce is sold and the money in their hands will they really believe their good fortune. Even then they will shake their heads and say that prices will surely go down before they have another crop ready for market. They have so long been content with a small return for their labor and no allowance at all for interest on their money or for the fertility which they are selling away from their land that they can hardly believe that the time has come when the farmer is getting enough for his produce to enable him to put farming on a business basis.

Probably this change has affected no one on the farm more than the women. The country girl has a different idea of a career now. She lives in a modern farm home, or if she doesn't she knows that such homes exist and are well within the range of possibility for her. She has had her longing to see the world satisfied by visits to city friends and relatives. She has seen that all the conveniences of city homes are duplicated in the country. She has admired the spacious lawns and beautiful grounds of some of the best of the city houses, but she has been observant enough to note that such houses belong only to the few. She has gone to the theater with her friends and enjoyed it, but no more than she enjoys the homemade theatricals in her home town or the plays and lectures she has attended in the larger country towns by trolley. She has been surprised to find that her friends in the city do not know their next door neighbor. The excuse that "they are not in our set" has puzzled her democratic little soul. It is different in the country, where every one sympathizes with every one else's sorrows and laughs with all in their joys.

The girl comes back from a trip to the city better satisfied than ever with her country home. Her father may not be worth more than $5,000 or $10,000 or $15,000 measured in money, but his house and grounds are equal in all essential respects to many of the millionaires' residences she saw in the city. Her girl friends in the city were coaxing their father to buy them an automobile so that they could "go somewhere." The country girl and her mother have a horse and buggy that are sacred to their use. The horse is so gentle that he will not even bat his eyelid at an automobile and the buggy so shiny that they are proud to be seen anywhere, in it. They can hitch up and go where and when they please. The laundry in the basement has taken away the terrors of wash day. The conveniences in the kitchen have greatly lessened the work of feeding the hungry men folks.

The farm reading table is strewn with the latest magazines, and the girl has a piano or at least an organ. A piano dealer in one of the middle western states recently told me that he sold fifteen pianos to the farmers in one township last year. If the farmer's daughter wants a piano he is going to get it for her. He may have to raise a few more hogs next year to pay for it, but that is easily done.

Taking everything together, any comparisons that the country girl may be able to draw are favorable to the farm. She has been raised in the open air. The pigs and the calves and the chickens are her playmates. The colts will come when she whistles, for who ever heard of a country girl who couldn't whistle? She can name all the trees in the wood lot, and she knows the note of every bird that sings in their branches. Every day is full of sunshine, and she sings for the very joy of living where air is free and room is not bought and sold.

She still longs for a career, but it is a career of a different sort. She wants to live the rest of her life on the farm, and she looks forward to the day when she will go into partnership with some ambitious, resourceful young farmer. To be a successful wife, to help make the most out of the old farm and to do her part to make her community the most progressive in the country—this is the career that appeals to the modern country girl. Schools have been provided to teach her the things she needs to know about her coming business. If she is in one of the most up to date communities, she begins to learn sewing and cooking in the rural school. If not given there, it comes in the high school or the preparatory school or the small college. All of these institutions are providing courses in domestic science. They do not dispute the fact that love is the basis of a successful marriage, but they realize that a good digestion is the basis of a loving disposition.

In awakening the community to the realization of its own duties and its possibilities the influence of the farmer's wife is even greater than that of the farmer himself. It is the women on whom the social life of the country communities must largely depend. The problem of rural life is largely a social one now that conditions have solved the financial problem.

Many Places Named For Washington

By ROBERT DONNELL.

DOES it ever occur to you that the surname of George Washington is permanently attached to more places in the United States than that of any other man? In fact, no name in human history plays so great a part in geographical nomenclature. Were it possible to blot out all historical record of Washington his name would survive to the end of time in the places which bear it.

One state in the Union is named for Washington. The capital of the United States is named for Washington. Counties in thirty-one of the forty-six states are named for Washington. Towns in thirty-three of the forty-six states are named for Washington. Several states have more than one town or village named Washington, the entire list numbering fifty-eight. Nearly every city of consequence and many smaller towns have Washington streets or avenues, Washington parks, Washington squares or other localities named for the Father of His Country.

The states having Washington counties are Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

The states having cities, towns or villages named for Washington are Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

In the city of New York is Washington square, a little park of historic and artistic memories, where on the one hundredth anniversary of Washington's accession to the presidency was dedicated the magnificent Washington arch, the gateway to Fifth avenue.

As new states are created new Washington counties and towns follow. In short, the people of the United States have the Washington habit.

And who is it said that republics are ungrateful?

The Fictitious Washington

By WILLIS BROOKS HAWKINS.

[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

BERIAH JENKS was tall and straight,
Though short and badly bent—
By which, if you kindly wait,
I'll tell you what is meant:
In mind and character he stood
The tallest man in town,
And in impartial hardihood
Was squarely up and down.

For these and other goodly traits
He held a lifelong lease
Upon the people's worldly fate
As justice of the peace
And so administered the laws
That everybody knew
'Twas useless, save with righteous cause,
For any one to sue.

One day the constable arraigned
Josiah Ladd as one
Who had defiantly maintained
That General Washington
Was not the saint that people said
As in his name they vied,
But being only human breed,
Had doubtless erred and lied.

The justice heard the charge and then Delivered his decree.
"This court believes all men are men
With human faults," said he.
"And like enough George Washington
Is being overpraised
Because of victories he won
When Freedom's flag was raised."

The culprit smiled and turned to go,
But stopped at a command.
"And yet," said Justice Jenks, "we know
That, on the other hand,
We must not let mere facts assail
The high ideals of youth.
I therefore send this man to jail
For telling too much truth."

The Washington Room

A Story For Washington's Birthday

By CLARISSA MACKIE

[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

"AND so you want to marry my niece?" said Jeremiah Parrish irritably.

"Yes, sir," said Peter Elmore, looking into the old man's black eyes with a clear, direct glance. "And you are a lawyer? Remember, please, that my niece has become engaged to you while on a visit to the city and, although she has known you for several years, you are a comparative stranger to me. Now, you are a lawyer! I hope you are a good one."

CLARISSA MACKIE

The young man winced under the cool arrogance in Mr. Parrish's harsh voice, but he merely smiled as he answered, "I hope to prove to you some day that I am, sir."

"Oh, you do, eh? Perhaps I will give you an opportunity now. You may be able to solve the mystery of our guest chamber!"

"Oh, Uncle Jerry, that is not fair!" cried Mildred reproachfully from her seat near the fire. "Peter is a lawyer—not a detective! No one ever solved it, and remember how many people have tried in the last hundred years." Mildred rose and leaned against the high back of her lover's chair.

Elmore had not spoken. His keen blue eyes were fixed on the forbidding countenance of Jeremiah Parrish, and he noted a cunning little smile lurking about the thin lips.

"Perhaps Mr. Parrish will give me an opportunity of proving myself," he said lightly. "Just now I do not recollect ever having heard of the Washington room in your house."

"Oh, George Washington slept there once—the winter the army suffered at Valley Forge. My great-grand-mother was sewing carpet rugs with her black servant when the two women heard the sound of horses' hoofs on the frozen ground. Always fearful of the coming of the British, my ancestor hastily gathered her store of silver tastefully and several hundred pound notes and told black Miranda to screech them, while she answered the thundering knock which reverberated through the house.

"To her relief, it was General Washington and several of his aids, who requested shelter for the night. In the temporary absence of her husband she bade them welcome, and, delighted at the honor, she hastened to set her best before them.

"She found black Miranda covering foolishly in a corner of the best room and half dead from fright. The woman could not recollect what she had done with the spoons or with the banknotes, and to this day their disappearance is a mystery.

"The great general slept in the best room that night, and ever since then the room, with its contents, has been regarded as a state apartment. Washington was much interested in the disappearance of the treasures, and it is said that on the night of the 22d of February he is often seen about the apartment searching hither and thither for the helms which Miranda hid away."

"Perhaps you will permit me to sleep in that room tonight," suggested Elmore carelessly.

"Certainly," responded his host grimly. "I will go at once and give instructions to have the bed aired and thoroughly warmed."

When he had departed Mildred resumed her low seat near the fire, and Elmore dropped on an ottoman beside her. The girl's sweet face was very grave as she slipped her hand in her lover's broad palm.

"I wish Uncle Jerry had not told you about the room," she said earnestly. "So many have tried to solve the mystery, and while none of them will tell their actual experience, there is always an estrangement with Uncle Jerry afterward. He hates lawyers—why I don't know—and if he can humiliate one he is delighted. Except on that one subject he is the dearest old man!

Sometimes I THE LIGHT FELL ON WISH GEORGE US STERN PROFILE. Washington had never slept in the house!"

Elmore laughed heartily, and he was reviving her drooping spirits when the door opened and Jeremiah Parrish appeared holding a lighted candle in a silver candlestick. The light fell on his stern profile for one instant, and in that brief interval Elmore's keen eyes sharpened into points of flame.

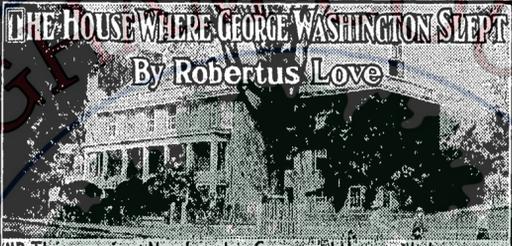

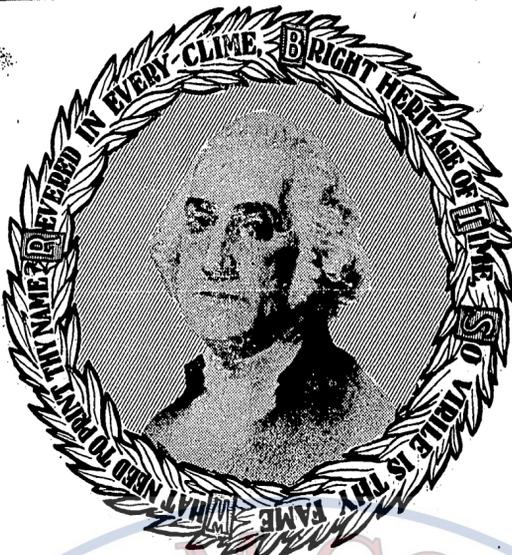

"In a hurry to go to bed?" he asked quizzically.

"Eager to solve the mystery and claim the reward," laughed Elmore. "Ah, yes! I have overlooked that. There must be a reward. If you find the treasure it is yours for a wedding gift. If you are unsuccessful you will win all Mildred's twenty-five. Oh! Four years is not long when one is young!"

[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

GEORGE WASHINGTON was a great man. But history does not give him full credit for his greatness. He was much greater than most of us suspect. So far as I know, George Washington was the only man in history who conquered a powerful nation while he was asleep. Napoleon Bonaparte was a great soldier, and his biographers tell us that he slept only five hours a day. Yet on that five hours' sleep he conquered Europe, and if he had got up a little earlier in the morning he might not have fallen down at Waterloo. But George Washington went to the other extreme. He slept all the time.

IN NEW LONDON THEY SHOWED ME—

He slept twenty-four hours a day. He never did anything but sleep. He never woke up. And yet he whipped the British to a stand and delivered peace.

It is true that it took him seven or eight years to do it, but even that was a most prodigious feat for a sleep-walker. If he could do that well as a somnambulist, just think what he might have done had he been gifted with chronic insomnia!

The first town I visited in search of sights in one of the thirteen original packages of our government was in New Jersey—Morristown. I believe it was—and I asked the depot agent if there were any historical relics in town. His face lighted up like the business side of a dark lantern in edition de luxe, and he replied, with warm enthusiasm and great town pride:

"Yes, indeed. There's the house where George Washington slept. Come right along and I'll show it to you."

I saw the man was anxious lest somebody else should be the first to show me the house where George Washington slept, and so I went along with him and saw the house where George Washington slept.

Not long after that I went down to Freehold, the town where the battle of Monmouth was fought and where Molly Pitcher fought her only pitched battle, and the first place they showed me was the house where George Washington slept.

Later I visited Trenton, where Washington crossed the Delaware—in his sleep—and I crossed the Delaware on a bridge and saw the house where George Washington slept.

I began to think that the entire state of New Jersey must have been George Washington's bedroom. I wondered if George hung his nightshirt on what bridge it was and showed me the house where George Washington slept.

By that time I was beginning to get a little sleepy and tired myself, so I concluded to go up into the Green Mountain country of Vermont and let the mountain air wake me up. For self protection I planned a large placard on my back reading:

Yes, I'm From Missouri, but DON'T Show Me—

But I stopped at Bennington, the town where General John Stark remarked that if he didn't whip the British before 7 p. m. Mary Stark would collect his life insurance, and they showed me—the house where George Washington slept.

I got out of Vermont as fast as I could and went to Portsmouth, N. H., to see if the port could keep its mouth shut about George Washington, but they got up and told me that if I didn't get out of town on the next train they would show me the house where George Washington slept.

I got out and went straight back to New York city without asking for any stop over privileges, and that night I slept, and the next morning I met a friend of mine who had lately returned to New York from Pike county, Mo., and was still seeing the sights. He invited me to go up into the Harlem neighborhood with him and see some sights, and I went, and he showed me the house where George Washington slept. He told me I was from Missouri and he had to show me.

After I got out of the hospital I received a letter from a friend of mine who lives at Valley Forge, Pa. He said I needed country air and the rural sights and scenes and invited me to come down and spend a month with him and recuperate. I was about to accept this kind invitation, but upon reflection I remembered that George Washington used to live at Valley Forge, and I knew that if I went out there I would see—the house—where—George—Washington—slept. So I wrote my friend that I had died the week before of Washington on the brain and was buried under the house where George Washington slept, and I stayed in New York.

Nobody has ever shown me a house where George Washington woke up.

I crossed over into Rhode Island and stopped at Providence, where the proud natives showed me the house where George Washington slept. I told them that his sleeping there must have been an act of providence. They made me leave town after that, and I went up to Newport and saw the house where George Washington slept.

Rhode Island is not much of a state for size. It's close to Plymouth rock, but it isn't any bigger than a banty hen in the shell compared to other states, and so it didn't take George very long to sleep all over that state, and after being shown the house where George Washington slept in two or three other Rhode Island towns I made a trip to Springfield, Mass., which is named after the Springfield rifle, and saw the house where George Washington slept.

In Cambridge I wanted to see the Washington elm, under which Washington took command of the army, but they showed me the house where George Washington slept.

The, I went out to Concord to see the home of Ralph Waldo Emerson, or where he ate breakfast, or smoked a cigarette, or used the telephone, or backed the cherry furniture with his little tommy back, or fought the British.

And that is why I say, All honor to George Washington! Though he slept everywhere and all the time and never woke up, except that time they put the Waterbury watch in his bedroom, he still found time to become the father of his country. He was first in war, first in sleep and first in the hearts of his countrymen! After life's fitful fever he sleeps well—as usual. Long may he sleep! And long may his grateful countrymen hold in reverence and keep the taxes paid and the roof on and the mortgage off—
