men now out of work and traveling about from city to city and state to state be invited to attend military training courses until the depression lifts. He would have the army provide food and shelter for some 200,000 young men, many of whom are now living in welfare lodges or are eking out a bare existance by odd jobs here and there. The senator believes the young men would benefit by the training course and he is of the opinion that such a plan would be of benefit to cities now called on to give financial aid to unmarried men.

The suggestion has merit. The army has plenty of tents and bunks and has the personnel to give the young men their training. Young men now living in idleness and on short rations would be given something to do. and good wholesome food to eat. They would be taught clearliness and would have a chance to torm good health habits. They would be taken away from the influence of communist agitators now working among the unemployed young men of the cities.

Probably the plan would be to offer the young men training similar to that of the citizen military training camps held during the summer. The youths would have but an hour or so of military instruction. The balance of the day would be taken up with athletics, games, studies, lectures and reading. The discipline would not be of that spartan nature used in some training camps during the war. The men would be given special routine different than that expected by enlisted men of the regular forces.

Senator Couzens has broached a plan that is practical, comparatively inexpensive and one that would prove of benefit to the young men in training and to the nation which may some day have need of trained men.

per cent.

Sup. Carven and certain other members of the board of supervisors believed it peculiar that money worth two per cent in Eaton and two and one-half per cent in Jackson county would lose 75 to 80 per cent of its value when deposited in Ingham county. So the half of one per cent bid offered by Ingham banks was rejected and new bids will be received January 9.

The board of supervisors suggested that a bid of one per cent would be acceptable. The supervisors had no right to make the suggestion. The statutes provide that the bids shall be sealed and that banks shall bid as much or as little as they desire.

The matter of the rate of interest will make a difference of several thousand dollars to the county. However, that is not the point. The point we wish to make is that the board of supervisors and every other public body has need of a few objectors. Objectors are often attacked but after all they are needed. Sup, Carven and other members of the board did their duty by objecting. If one-half of one per cent is all that the deposits are worth then the county money should be placed in Ingham banks at that rate. If the money is worth more, then the supervisors should object to taking less.

Banks are business establishments. Bankers are only human. Neither banks nor bankers are sacred. But too often public officials seem to look upon banks and bankers as creations of the Almighty. Too many public officials seem willing to bow down and accept as gospel the words that a banker deigns to bestow upon them. Bankers are not always right. We should realize that by now. Few bankers ever assert that they are always right. Our objections are not primarily that the bankers offered but one-half of one per cent. That is a business matter easily taken care of by the statutes. We do object when banking business is discussed in bated breath. We object to the fact that at the first special meeting the public business was transacted behind closed doors. We object to the theory that a banker's edict is gospel just because it is uttered by a banker. We object to the belief apparently held by some public officials that a banker must always be allowed to have his own way without question.

Oaths of Office

The papers have been filled with accounts of governors, state senators and representatives and county officials taking their oaths of office. The oaths taken were they carried out would be a guarantee of good government. But alas they are of little importance. Mayor Walker of New York probably took an oath. Other officials have also flagrantly violated their oaths. Perhaps at one time they meant something. With many mon they still have meaning. But an oath is no guarantee of honesty nor of good judgment.

Athens fell and every young man of Athens gave his oath. Had they carried them out Athens would still be the greatest city in the greatest nation in the world. The oath of the Ephebi provided that the youth in question swear never to disgrace their arms or to desert their comrades; to fight to the last in the defense of their country, its altars and its hearths; to leave their country not in a worse, but in a better state than they found It; to obey the magistrates and the laws; to resist the attempts to subvert the institutions of Attica; and to respect the religion of their forefathers.

If oaths were lived up to we would like to see that clause about leaving the country in a better state than it was found added to those in common use. But oaths failed to save Athens. They have failed to save us.

When that boy of yours grows up, will he follow a path of conservative investment or will he endanger the safety and security of his family by taking "flyers" in speculation?

If taught the sound principles of thrift during his growing years he will form the habit of depositing small sums of his spending money in this bank, forming a habit that will carry him over many rough spots in later life. The acquiring of this thrift habit while young will prove to be the step most certain to assure the boy of future success.

MR. WILLIAMS GIVES EXPERT OPINION

Working in overalls in factory, field and mine, Mr. Williams knows the problems of the working man from firsthand experience. He says:

"First among the worker's tools is his telephone. By its help he is able to learn easily, and at slight expense, of any opportunities for jobs which may be open in factories or shops within a radius of many miles."

Michigan Makes a Major Part of the World's Air Rifles.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.-WNU Service, GREAT company of Michigan pioneers were recently honored when the Lumbermen's Memorial, overlooking the Au Sable river, was dedicated.

Little did Monsieur Jean Nicolet, the first white man to set foot on Michlgan in 1634, or the hardy pioneers who later laid a firm foundation upon which the state was built suspect that today their crude camps would be sites of great American cities joined by a splendid network of fine highways and rallroads.

In its infancy Michigan was a huge lumber camp; today its industries are legion. Detroit industries alone normally employ some 350,000 workers who are massed in units attaining to 55,000 or 65,000 in a single establishment. It is, of course, her automobile industry, which predominates in this mass employment.

When the future state was surrendered by the British in 1796, nobody attached undue importance to a village named Detroit with its 500 inhabitants and an area less than a square mile. Skip 136 years and Detroit reappears as the nation's fourth largest city with an area of more than 140 square miles, a population of more than one and a quarter million and an industrial product value of $2,000,000,-000 a year.

Approaching the city by lake steamer one beholds a striking panorama. The Canadian side shows many miles of green meadows, while the American side reveals a gradually intensifying spectacle of mammoth cranes, towering stacks, vast factories-all of industry's bewildering panoply.

Lest the motorcar bulk disproportionately on Detroit's skyline, it should be remembered that the city's 3,000 major manufacturing plants include 35 lines that fall into the million-dollars-a-year class of productivity. In fact, ever since the days when Detroit made the first gold pens, ran the first | rially enlarged by filling in the shallow refrigerator cars and built among the lagoons with incalculable tons of sawearliest of sleeping cars-and, tradi-playing regularly spaced maples along foliage-roofed streets, Michigan's towns thus preserve a souvenir of the great logging area of their state. Michigan's "forest primeval" lay with pine and softwoods mainly to the north of 43rd parallel of latitude, and with the hardwoods mainly to the south of it. A century ago her area was still 97 per cent timbered. In the expansion period that followed the Civil war the state loomed up as the great pine producer. Eastern farmers turned pioneer and trekked Michiganward for their fractional investment in the 125,000,000.-000 feet of timber that rose north of Saginaw. The prairie states were calling for timber, and Michigan's was massed in big stands with easy river access to the Great Lakes.

Up sprang 800 camps employing 25,000 loggers. Plank roads were laid through the wilderness. In 1875 there were 30 solid miles of logs in the Au Gres. For more than 30 years men chopped and saws screamed, until in 1890 Michigan's pine lumbering reached its peak with 4,250,000,000 feet

Transition to Manufacturing. But the young states transition period from lumbering to manufacturing was not accomplished without growing pains, Her forests shorn, a host of lumber towns—Ludington, Cheboygan, Bay City, Manistee, Alpena, Muskegon, Saginaw-relapsed temporarily into stagnation or ruin.

The story of Muskegon is typical. Her glories fled, her people trekked, and grass grew in her streets. Then slowly she rebuilt herself on the deserts left by vanished sawmills. How, the woodworking, autometive and other industries have lifted the once-ruined town to her present prosperity is one of the most striking stories in Michigan annals. Saginaw, once such a "Sawmill City" that her shore area was matedust, represents a similar rise, fall,

Detroit's Remarkable Growth.

Her growth, measured in terms of nopulation, has increased more than 360 per cent during this century, Indeed, her present roll of industrial operatives surpasses by more than 60,-000 her total population of 1900. Within the past ten years the office cloudtoucher has taken its place in Detroit's skyline, and apartment hotels and hotel skyscrapers cannot be reared fast enough to keep pace with her growth. In fact, Detroit's rapid changes in physiognomy justify the English writer who remarked of American cities, "Wrecked buildings spring up like mushrooms."

One turns gratefully from Detroit's traffic-choked thoroughfares into that loveliest retreat of all her 3,000 acres of park space-Belle Isle. In trading eight barrels of rum, three rolls of tobacco and six pounds of warpaint for the Indian-owned Belle Isle, the city's forefathers achieved something These two sections produce, for pharnot to be expressed by its present valnation of many millions of dollars; for Belle Isle park is at once the worker's restful Avalon, treasure-hunting childhood's pirate lair, and every one's enchanted island, with song-birds as Ariels and caged bears as Calibans. What more intriguing than a wooded Island park, canalized for canoeing, dotted with plenickers' stoves, and visited by a symphony orchestra-this on the edge of a great industrial city? Pontiac, a town founded in the early boom period, leaped into the general expansion frenzy by taking out the state's first railroad charter in 1830. Six years later work was begun on the Detroit & Pontiac railroad. Presently many a pioneer, upon hearing the first locomotive's distant shriek, was seizing his gun to "git the b'ar" with the strident voice.

Great State for Lumber. The original track of wooden, Ironsheated rails was soon discharging ripped-off fragments of sheathing through the car bottoms. These "snake-heads," as the flying fragments were called, caused many a casualty among the passengers until the D. & P. came handsomely to the rescue with "a new and elegant car" whose metaled flooring smothered the snake-head offensive, Michigan's through-rall connection with the East was established by the completion of the Great Western railroad in 1854. Nowadays the state's transportation is served by steam lines operating 8,700 miles, motor coaches 7,000 miles, and electric lines 1,090 miles. Michigan's every city, it seems, must make something, and her very capital is not content to make only laws. Lansing normally has 15,000 hands engaged in industries, mainly the automotive or auxiliary thereto, producing an annual output valued at $185,000,-000. Though Lansing's forests have long since yielded to the spacious avenues radiating from her lawn-surrounded state house, and though the cry for reforesting the state is widespread, the capital and her sister cities rank among the country's most beautifully tree-shaded communities.

ANOTHER COMMISSION RELEAS ES ITS REPORT.

Drastle Changes In School Code, Abolishment Of Sheriff's Office, Cor-oner, Surveyor, Recommended.

Hope that 20,000 public officials will be weeded out of local government in Michigan is expressed by the state commission of inquiry into the cost of county, township and school district governments in its report re-Pts leased to the press last week. It is believed that the report on local government which recommends sweeping changes in laws governing local municipalities would if adcpted, result in material savings in the cost of local government and school management. 25 Some estimates are placed as high as Pts $10,000,000 annually although no definite figures are available.

Virtual abolition of the office of county sheriff, making that official merely a county jailer and placing the serving of papers in law suits in the hands of court bailiffs appointed by circuit judges, is a part of the report. Appointment of county surveyor instead of electing him as at present, 19 combining the offices of county clerk and register of deeds in one official, and doing away with the office of coroner altogether are among the new ideas advanced.

It is also proposed to offer counties the alleged advantages of home rule with the choice of three plans, namely, county manager, county commission and a one-man or mayor plan. This change would require an amended constitution.

Keesler and Hammond were the State Would Assess The present system of assessing for taxes by local assessing officers elected by the people is condemned and a state-controlled system of assessing is proposed.
