

Stranger Rules Mason While Mayor Fishes

While Mayor Curtis Murton of Harrison was busy running city affairs in Mason Monday, Mason's Mayor Paul Richards and Police Chief Harry Chandler went fishing.

Mayor Murton and Mayor Richards exchanged jobs Monday on mayor exchange day, a part of Michigan week.

Everyone in Mason is invited to stop over in Harrison in their travels through the north and sit a while. That's the invitation extended by Mayor Murton during his visit here.

Mayor Murton and his official party were guests of Mason. Included in the party were Mrs. Murton, Mr. and Mrs. David Ashcraft and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harper. Ashcraft is a Harrison grace and member of the city council. Harper is president of the Harrison school board.

The visitors were met at the north city limits and escorted to town by Captain Tim Stolz and Councilman Nels Ferryby, official Mason host. After a stop at city hall the group attended a luncheon at Mason golf course. After lunch Councilman Ferryby presented Mayor Murton with a gold key to Mason, and visiting women with flowers.

The rest of the afternoon Mayor Murton's party took a grand tour of Mason, including stops at Mason's schools, churches and a trip through Wyeth Laboratories Inc.

The visitors were especially interested in Mason's pay-as-you-go school building program.

While Mason's honored guests were seeing the sights, Mayor Richards, Mrs. Richards, Police Chief Harry Chandler and Mrs. Chandler went fishing.

The trout fishing was part of Mayor Richards' day as guest of the city of Harrison.

Harrison really put on a show for its guests. Mayor Richards headed a parade into town for luncheon at the Surrey House with the Kiwanis club.

After the official welcome Harrison merchants heaped gifts on the visitors and then sent them out on a tour through the resort area, the sprawling Cornwell ranch and Fowler orchards and a stop at a private trout pond where Mayor Richards and Chief Chandler hooked into some big ones, according to the mayor's report.

Millage Board Awaits Report

Ingham's tax allocation board is awaiting a report of the state board of equalization before setting Ingham tax rates.

The Ingham board met in Mason last Thursday. After checking county, township and school district budgets, adjournment was taken to May 28.

On May 27 the state board of equalization is scheduled to release its report. With those figures available the county, township and school district rates will be set in Ingham, explained County Treasurer Laurence Parker. He is a member of the board.

State appraisers made a spot check on Ingham valuations and came up with a total figure of $536,912,797. That was 47% more than supervisors assessed. The year before the state figure for Ingham was $449,906,552.

At the April 24 meeting of the board of supervisors, when the state figures were adopted, Supervisor James McClure of Meridian declared he intended to appeal. He protested acceptance of the state figures for his township.

Although the state figures were accepted by supervisors last month, those figures were not complete and did not include all new construction completed since the spot check was made.

Complete state figures should be available May 27, the Ingham tax allocation board has been informed.

Highway Work Proceeds Apace

County highway work is proceeding according to schedule despite a solid week of rain.

Before rains set in last week county crews had made the most of dry weather and were far ahead of normal spring schedule. They're still ahead but not quite so far.

On Monday and Tuesday blacktop surfacing was resumed on 2 miles of Zimmer road in Wheatfield township. Surfacing of 2 1/2 miles on Holt road from Meridian to Zimmer was completed last week.

The blacktop mixing plant is in the Frost pit.

A grading crew is working on Seales road. Grading is well along on the conversion of Mt. Hope road into a 4-lane highway from Aurelius road to Farm Lane.

There are sections which grading crews had to leap-frog because of water but they found other stretches on which they could work to advantage.

City Council Rejects Bills

Mason's city council said, "No," twice Monday night to claims for payment of bills.

Kessler Construction company presented 2 invoices totaling $3,050.20 for 29 sewer runs of 33 feet each and 29 water runs of 33 feet each in its Kathryn street subdivision.

Kessler submitted the low bid on the job and did the work. He contended that the sewer and water lead-ins were included in the estimates of City Engineer Walter Zimmer.

The council's stand is that the contract covered only the mains and the only payment called for is for work designated in the contract.

The other bill rejection came on the claim of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Robson of West Ash street. The Robsons submitted a bill of $750, claiming that was the amount paid Cady Plumbing and Heating for cleaning wire from the sewer main in front of their house.

In other council action the council asked for bids on scraping and painting the standpipe. Bids will be received at the city clerk's office up until 3 p. m. on June 3. They will be opened at that time.

Councilman Richard Morris, chairman of the street committee, informed the council of a couple of purchases which will be made. The city will buy curb forms appraised at $1,600, at $950. The street department is also dealing for a cement mixer. Both items are in the Ferris Co. liquidation sale.

Subdivision Gains Approval

Kessler Construction received the go-ahead signal Monday night on its Brookdale subdivision on South street just east of the by-pass. Plat plans for the 25-unit development gained council approval. Plans call for finishing the subdivision by next summer.

Salk Vaccine Crews Go Around Again

To give youngsters extra safeguards against polio before hot weather arrives, the Salk vaccine crews are now administering second shots.

The second shots at school clinics are for pre-school through high school boys and girls. There is not enough vaccine available for clinic immunization of adults.

Orphan Fawn Goes North

Strayed from its mother, an Onondaga fawn lost her forever Wednesday.

The fawn, 2 weeks old and as tame as a young lamb, is on his way to the Ogemaw state game refuge. Conservation officers hope to find a foster mother for the little fellow there.

Walter Mutchler, state conservation officer, took the fawn on as a passenger Thursday morning. He got it at the Henry Wilberding place on Catholic Church road in Bunker Hill. A Wilberding relative found the fawn.

Mutchler praised the Wilberdings for prompt notification about the finding of the fawn. The officer explained that it is against the law for anyone to attempt to keep or even to molest a fawn. Had the finders not picked up the lost fawn, Mutchler said, dogs might have killed it or it might have been hit by a car.

Ingham Justices of Peace Elect Mason Man As Chief

Justice Roy W. Adams of Mason is president of the Ingham County Association of the Justices of the Peace. The organization was launched at a meeting in Mason Monday night.

Other officers of the association elected Monday night are W. Robert Woods, Williamston, vice-president; and Raymond Totte, Delhi, secretary-treasurer.

Fifteen Ingham justices of the peace were present at the organization meeting, said County Clerk O. Ross Hilliard, in whose office it was conducted. He and County Treasurer Laurence Parker issued and explained new forms designed for use of justices in making their monthly reports to county officials.

The next meeting of the association has been scheduled for June 19 at Mason, Adams announced.

Bank Plans to Clear Site Occupied by 3 Buildings

Old buildings now occupying the site at Ash and Park are doomed.

Dart National bank owns the property and has made plans to clear it. Down will come the old Bell & Kelly monument plant, the dwelling used by the Boy Scouts and the former Oldsmobile garage.

The former garage, a frame structure, has been vacant for several months, since National Cement Industries, Inc., left Mason for Benton Harbor. The old monument works has been used for storage since Dart Manufacturing Co. moved to its new factory north of town. For the last 2 years it has been used by the Ingham County News for storing newspaper and by the Kiwanis club for storing rummage sale goods.

The city has developed a public parking lot on the site.

"Present buildings have become an eyesore," said D. C. Dart of Dart National bank, "and the income from rentals do not justify repairs. We are considering some long-range plans for the future but right now we're interested only in cleaning up the lot."

The bank acquired the property to take care of expansion needs. It is a block west of the bank. It comprises about a quarter of a block, with frontage on Park and Ash and on the alley paralleling Ash.

Plowing Contest Is Again Delayed

Called on account of wet grounds is the annual Ingham 4-H and FFA plowing contest. It is now scheduled for Saturday, June 8.

It was first set for May 11. Rain forced postponement to Saturday, May 25. When the rain stopped Monday, the ground chosen for the plowing was saturated and, whether or not more rain falls Thursday or Friday, it will be too wet to plow Saturday.

The contest site is the Ken Myers farm, 5 miles south of Williamston on Williamston road.

Class Switches Vote on Baccalaureate

Mason seniors have reversed themselves in 2 class elections to determine the site of this year's baccalaureate program. It's now scheduled for the school auditorium Sunday night, June 2.

Rev. Paul Arnold, Presbyterian pastor, will give the sermon. Other pastors will assist in the service.

A week ago a vote showed 91 seniors wanting to have it in a Mason church and 9 wanting it in the school auditorium. Tuesday, the vote was nearly reversed with the majority willing to have it in the auditorium. The first vote meant nothing to school board members in session last Thursday night. Some declared the baccalaureate location should not be a majority decision, but rather a decision in the interest of religious liberty.

The board instructed James Vander Ven, superintendent, to meet again with the class and urge its members to reconsider their vote based on the principle of religious freedom rather than on personal desire.

But even had the class not reconsidered, baccalaureate exercises would have been in the school auditorium anyway. The board agreed to permit the program to be at the athletic field as is the graduation ceremony, but flatly refused to have the school sanction a service in any church.

Until last year baccalaureate services were in Mason churches. Then following minority pressure, the board issued a "request" that baccalaureate be in the school auditorium. The decision, said Dr. R. R. DeMartin, president of the board, was in the best interests of the school.

At the Thursday night meeting, Vander Ven warned that the seniors had taken a vote overwhelmingly in favor of a church location. Vander Ven said he feared group action on the part of seniors should the board refuse them.

Board member Louis Stid said he has heard rumblings from seniors and their parents. He reported he knew of at least 3 seniors who have vowed not to attend should the services be in the auditorium again.

Lyle Thorburn, board secretary and also an administrator at Michigan State university, said he would hate to be a part of a group defying popular opinion. He pointed out that the board is on dangerous ground to demand

Doctor Finds New Patients

Two patients came flying almost into the lap of a young Lansing doctor in Mason Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Austin R. Sawvell, an intern at Sparrow hospital in Lansing, was driving west on Ash in his convertible when 2 boys on a bike came hurtling at him. They left their bike when it struck the car. On the bike were Frank Bergey, 14, and David Stevenson, 15.

U. S. marines also got into the act. Two marine recruiters were near the scene and they directed traffic until police arrived. Dr. Sawvell checked the condition of both boys and calmed them until an ambulance arrived for Bergey. Stevenson rode to Mason General hospital in a police car.

Dr. Sawvell also went to Mason General hospital to stand by while the boys were being examined and treated. There were no broken bones. Bergey came out of the crash with a cut knee. Stevenson was gashed about his head.

The Bergey boy actually felt worse about his new English-style bike than he did his own condition. He had the bike only a few days. It suffered considerable damage. The doctor's car was also dented.

The boys were headed north on Park. Bergey was pedaling fast. Stevenson was riding the crossbar. Cars, at least 4, were halted for the stop street crossing. The Bergey boy apparently forgot hand brakes on his bike. At high speed he threaded through an opening between moving and stopped cars on Park and right out into Ash. There was no opportunity for the doctor to swerve his car. The bike struck it at the left door panel and the boys flew through the air to the pavement.

Hospital Bulges

Mason General hospital is bulging at the seams.

Never in the history of the hospital has there been such a busy week—a week where patients have had to be so crowded in and shifted about and even shifted out.

On Tuesday the maternity ward was filled to capacity, 4 mothers and their babies were on the main floor and another mother was in the delivery room. But she was having to leave to make room for an expectant mother.

Another stork couldn't even find a roosting place. He had left a bundle at a Mason home and the mother and baby were enroute to the hospital by ambulance.

For a spell Monday night 2 women were in the delivery room, one on a cot and the other on the table, hospital attendants said. To make room for an incoming

Hospital Pledges Pass $300,000

Workers in the $500,000 Mason hospital campaign cheered Wednesday night when the scoreboard showed $301,215 pledged.

With several teams not reporting at the first general report meeting Wednesday night, and with another week to go, the $500,000 goal looked to leaders to be within reach.

Howard K. Seibert, general chairman of the campaign, pointed out that Wednesday night's total is at the 60% mark.

About 150 members of the 6 soliciting committees gathered at the Legion building Wednesday night to report. Seibert urged all workers to complete their canvass before the second report meeting next Wednesday night at the Legion building.

"If everyone will cooperate," Seibert said, there's a possibility that the $500,000 goal can be reached within the week."

Committees reporting Wednesday night and the amount of new pledges were:

Area, $29,897; public service, $17,722; teams, $5,586; special gifts, $6,670; business and industry, $50,180; and clubs and organizations, $2,100.

Among the pledges was one for $4,970 from employees of the hospital.

Another which brought cheers was $12,500 from Wyeth Laboratories Inc., plus $17,722 from employees of Wyeth. The Wyeth employees have not completed their solicitation, LeRoy Snelens of the company reported, and have set their goal at $20,000, which, he said, they expect to have next week.

In response to a question, Seibert said that while the campaign pledge card provides for "the expansion and modernization of Mason general hospital" this is because that is exactly what will be done, in building a new 36-bed hospital on the 5-acre Columbia street site. He emphasized patient Monday noon a Mason mother volunteered to leave for home 3 days early. She and her baby left for home without finishing their dinners, the need for room was that acute, nurses said.

Five doctors had surgical and maternity cases in the hospital Tuesday forenoon.

In the crowded alcove called a kitchen, the cook prepared 72 meals Monday, some of them for special diet cases. In the period from Saturday through Monday 206 meals were served.

In that same 3-day period 11 babies were delivered and 12 patients had to be moved about to make beds available. There were 4 surgery cases during the 3 days and on Monday night an emergency operation had to be performed.

Patients in Mason General hospital did not need to read pamphlets to be convinced of the urgent need for a new hospital.

Class Switches Vote on Baccalaureate something which the majority opposes.

"I thought we settled this last year," declared Dr. DeMartin. "We're just asking for trouble if we change last year's decision. We must stand for what we stood for last year."

When Stid told of the students' refusal to attend the school services, Dr. DeMartin countered, "If parents and students are so biased and selfish not to attend baccalaureate services when conducted in the school, then we can get along without them. I don't care if the vote was 99-1, I'll never vote to put baccalaureate back in a church."

Vander Ven said, "We could persuade children to attend services in the school, but not their parents."

Stid suggested the board not sanction any baccalaureate, but urge seniors to attend their own services in their own churches. "It's too bad, that Mason people can agree on most anything except religion," Stid said. "I'm sick of the whole business."

Vander Ven met with the senior class Tuesday afternoon and following his appeal for religious tolerance, the seniors switched the vote.

meeting, 32 to 8, to petition Leslie to annex the district. Leslie agreed and the state superintendent, Clair Taylor, sanctioned the move.

Three issues were voted on. They were: For Laberteaux to assume its proportionate share of the Leslie district's 1952 and 1955 debts which were incurred in building new units of the school and for annexation. The first 2 measures lost 23 to 21, and the third, ended in a tie.

Fire Destroys Scutt Home

Rives Junction and Leslie fire departments brought under control a fire which virtually destroyed the home of Mrs. Fred Scutt, last Thursday on Rives Junction road at Base Line road, with an estimated loss of over $5,000.

Fire Chief Glenn Mann attributed the fire to faulty wiring. He said the fire was discovered by Mrs. Scutt at approximately 5:30 when she heard an explosion near the rear of the house. She summoned the Rives and Leslie fire departments. Neighbors assisted in saving much of the furniture, said Mann, but only the uprisings of the house remained standing.

Are Our Country Schools Vanishing?

One-room country schools may be doomed, according to James Vander Ven, superintendent of schools. And not because of inferior teaching methods, poor buildings or poor students, either. Country schools can't survive, the superintendent said, because it's becoming increasingly more difficult to find teachers who will serve in the outpost schools.

Country schools are dying on the vine, according to Vander Ven, because fewer and fewer teachers are being graduated from county normals or with state college limited teaching certificates. Such teachers who have less than BA or BS degrees now fill the gap in country schools, not because they want to necessarily, but because teachers with degrees have been forced out of city schools. Teachers with degrees have grabbed off the city school plans, the superintendent lamented.

"Match this with the fact that county normals are dwindling and state colleges are turning out fewer and fewer non-degree teachers and you'll see what I mean," said the superintendent.

Teachers in country schools don't have 4-year college training. At most, they have a couple of years in a state college or are graduates from a county normal. With these 2 sources turning out fewer graduates, there are naturally fewer teachers available for the country schools, Vander Ven explained.

In the Mason school system, one-room country school teachers receive an extra $100 a year for extra responsibilities. These responsibilities include maintaining fires in the wintertime, noon-hour supervision and the other responsibilities of being in complete control of several grades at one time.

In contrast, teachers in the larger city schools have only one grade to worry about. They can get away from it all during noon lunch and they have no worries about opening up the school in the morning and closing down at night. They aren't concerned with how the building is heated or maintained.

Teachers possessing degrees are first to get the city school positions which narrows the opportunities of non-degree teachers pretty much to one-room schools.

There are some exceptions, but generally, non-degree teachers who work toward and finally achieve teaching certificates, are quick to request a transfer to larger schools. It is happening right in the Mason school system, according to the superintendent.

The Mason school district has 16 one-room schools of which 4 so far do not have teachers assigned for next year. They'll be found, Vander Ven said, but it will be difficult.

Looking forward to the day when it may be even more difficult to lure teachers into one-room country schools, the Mason school board is discussing the erection of 3 or 4 larger area schools.

The schools probably aren't in the immediate future, Vander Ven explained, but sites may be acquired for future construction.

The proposed area schools would be operated much like the elementary schools are inside the city limits. Several teachers would teach separate grades. School buses would transport area pupils. And junior and senior high youngsters would be transported to a high school as done now.

With all the importance being put on degrees, the one-room country school may go the way of drug store Indians and cracker barrels.

Son and Pals Accuse Father

Dressed in civilian clothing, a son and 2 of his pals have come out of prison to testify in a trial of Robert Wright, Sr., DeWitt. He is charged with robbery armed.

Friends Honor Mrs. Riker At Open House Sunday

Several hundred friends, former students and teachers will honor Mrs. Viva Riker Sunday afternoon in the school gymnasium between 2 and 5. Mrs. Riker is concluding 30 years of teaching this spring, 24 of those years in Mason.

Methodist church women teachers and students have made arrangements for cookies and punch refreshments during the afternoon. Mrs. Donald Edgington and Mrs. James Ingraham, who are helping plan the affair, have urged those knowing former pupils and teachers to notify them of the event.

Mrs. Riker joined the Mason school system in 1933, before that teaching in L'Anse and Clinton. She has been active in church and club affairs and has endeared herself to hundreds of youngsters. During World War II and the Korean war, she kept up a voluminous correspondence with many Mason boys in service. She has continued to keep in touch with former teachers and students and still today, she has the confidence of many youngsters in school.

Following her exodus from the Mason school system, she plans to spend most of the time in her home town of Clinton and to punctuate her retirement with vacation trips.

Bruce Meek, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dushnell, is slowly improving from a brain injury. He has returned from the hospital to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Meek, Lansing.

SCOUTS SCHEDULE DINNER

Williamston Boy Scout troop 63 will serve its sixth annual chicken barbecue dinner Saturday, June 8, at McCormick park. Serving will be from 4 till 7:30 p. m., rain or shine. Proceeds will be used for summer camp.

Mothers Enroll Kindergarteners

Ninety-one youngsters have been enrolled for next year's kindergarten classes in Mason. In a pre-school registration session Monday 37 were enrolled for Cedar Street school and 54 for Steele Street school. James Vander Ven, superintendent, said 130 are expected to be enrolled by school time next fall.

The superintendent said parents who did not enroll their pre-school youngsters Monday may still do so this week. They can be registered at either school, he explained.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hilliard have returned to their home at 544 East Mt. Hope, Lansing, after wintering in Florida. They went south early in January, spending most of their time at Lakeland. They watched the Detroit Tigers at their spring camp and entered into many community activities for tourists there. They attended the Michigan picnic. Enroute home they traveled up the east coast to Danbury, Conn., to visit Mr. and Mrs. James Bond. Mrs. Bond is the former Eileen Hilliard. She was a deputy county clerk in Mason and Lansing.

Mrs. Anna Bell of Fowlerville and Mr. and Mrs. George Vogt, Sr., of Danville were Wednesday evening dinner guests of Mrs. Victor Palmer.

Marvin Janson attended the annual meeting of the Cleveland chapter of the society for applied spectroscopy at Cleveland, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Club Sponsors May Dance

White picket fences, spring flower cutouts made from crepe paper and calico formed an attractive setting for the May dance, Mason Child Study Club No. 1 annual calico ball Friday evening at the high school. A cluster of colorful balloons topped the maypole in the center of the dance floor. Bouquets of lilacs were placed throughout the gym.

Dancing, both round and square, was from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. Punch was served throughout the evening. Refreshments of sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee, were also served.

Proceeds from the ball will go toward the club's pledge fund for the new hospital.

Speaker of House Flays Scare Talk

George M. Van Pelt, speaker of the house of representatives, flays the scare talk being peddled by members of state agencies and commissions. He called it misleading.

"There has been a great deal of loose talk about cutbacks of state services in the proposed budget now under consideration by the legislature," he said.

"In actual fact, there are no cutbacks in our present state services in the proposed spending for the next fiscal year. The proposed 1957-58 operating budget has been significantly raised from the present levels, including about $14,000,000 more for higher education, almost $4,000,000 more for mental health, and $1,000,000 increases are also due for such programs as adult corrections and safety and defense.

"Commissions, which are appointed by and are responsible to the governor along with administrative officials responsible to him or his commissions, are carrying the outback story when they know full well the opposite is true. They are out to create spending pressure against the taxpayer's best interests.

"Obviously, the intent is a political one. The interests of the people would be much better served if all the political shenanigans were put aside for the remaining days of the legislative session and there was mutual cooperation to solve the problems we face.

"There is no question of the need for additional revenue for school programs, and I am confident that calm deliberation will produce a sound program on school aid. I am equally confident that the school children will be no victims of a tremendous disaster if political achievement is given top billing over education. Republicans are interested in getting money to the schools as quickly as possible, not in playing politics with the future of our children.

"Any action taken must be considered as a prelude to a thorough analysis and revision of Michigan's entire tax structure.

"The uncertainty about taxes in Michigan, the governor's hostility toward Michigan industry, his never-ending drive to tax and spend and spend, these are the things that are doing more than anything else to harm the economic development of our state."

Historian Tells About Early Days

Roy Adams, who inherited many early pictures and other records of pioneer days along with his penchant for history, gave Mason Kiwanians glimpses into the past Tuesday night. At a meeting of the club at the golf course he displayed some of his pictures and told of the settlement of Mason and the development of the city. The program was part of the local observance of Michigan week.

Coming of steamboats to the Lower Lakes and completion of the Erie canal spurred development of Michigan, Adams said. Michigan's swamps and the virtually impassable morasses near Monroe and Toledo caused settlers from the east to bypass Michigan to take up lands in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, the Mason historian said. But with steamboats and the canal, plus closing of the frontier in prairie states, Adams said, the tide of immigration came to flood in Michigan.

Ephraim Danforth bought most of the land around what is now Mason for practically nothing, bought it without seeing it and sold it the same way, Adams explained. The Danforth office was in Detroit, his agent in Mason was Charles Noble. Danforth never saw the town he promoted.

In 1836, Adams said, a dam was built where the Silsby Implement store is now located, and a log hotel was built near the intersection of what is now Columbia and Jefferson. There were few log houses built, he explained, because the mill had been established and it was quicker to build with boards than with logs, and easier too. There was a settlement on Mud creek called Jefferson City, built at a dam there but the settlement dwindled when Mason was made the county seat.

Lansing was then a few cabins on a mud bank at the confluence of the Grand and Red Cedar until, almost as a joke, the site was chosen for the state capital. Leslie, Eaton Rapids and Onondaga had been considered as sites for the capital which was to be moved from Detroit, but in the legislative fight which developed Lansing was the winner on a compromise between warring factions.

In the first years at Mason there was a distillery near the Silsby site, a brewery at State and Columbia, a brick plant on East Columbia, saw mills, grist mills, factories for making sashes and doors and window blinds, 2 planing mills and a clothespin factory. Soon there was the Rogers Carriage Works and a wagon factory.

There were stove mills and barrel factories and woodworking plants of every kind which flourished while there was hardwood timber within reach, Adams stated. Even into the late 1880's, he said, logs were piled from what is now Klipp road on up across the flats to where the Baptist church now stands. There was barely room enough between the mountains of logs for horse-drawn traffic, he said.

One of the last big stands was on what is now the airport, a mile frontage on Eden road and extending a half-mile deep to Dexter Trail. When that was cut the timber economy vanished. The carriage works hung on a few years until the automobile age came in.

Fire kept forcing progress in the business section in the early days, Adams said. He told of the places which destroyed rows of frame buildings on Maple and Jefferson. The main source of water for fighting fire was the reservoir in front of the court house. There were other giant cisterns located about town.

Although the connection between mosquitoes and malaria had not been discovered, early settlers recognized that stagnant water and fever seemed to go together. That was one reason the millpond was drained and mills converted to steam power. Typhoid remained as a menace while surface wells and privies were used, Adams pointed out. He told of the high death rate from typhoid.

Adams told about the lynching of a young Negro man at Mason in 1886, blaming the weakness of the sheriff's staff and the vindictiveness of Eaton and Aurelius men for the blot upon the community's reputation.

Public Inspects School Building

Mason's new manual arts and agriculture building won the approval of several hundred in the district Sunday during open house. The structure was completed last winter at a cost of $137,880.34 and provides facilities for farm shop, agriculture, general shop, mechanical drawing, art and mechanics. It's credited with being one of the best ag shop buildings in the state.

School administrators, teachers and students were on hand to greet visitors as they roamed the building.

The new hot lunch kitchen in the high school was also open for public inspection. The stainless steel kitchen replaced a closet-size operation last winter.

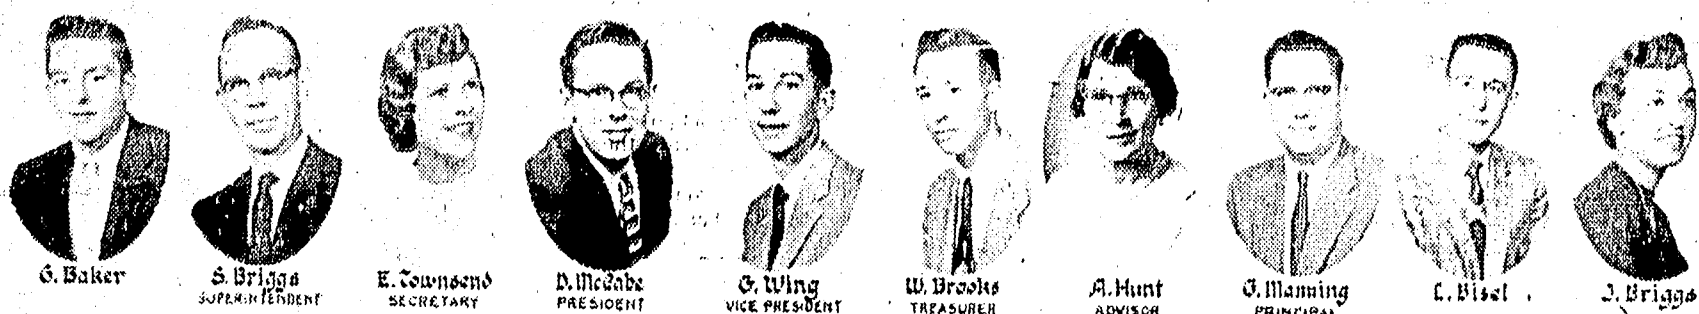

The new building was financed with cash on hand and short-term notes. There is no bonded debt on the ag-shop building nor any building in the Mason school system.

Planning Board Chairman Submits His Resignation

After serving as chairman of the city planning commission for all its 3 years of operation Dr. D. R. Lethbridge submitted his resignation from the group Monday night.

Mayor Paul Richards recommended and the council appointed Ray Neff, subdivision engineer for the county road commission, to fill the remainder of Dr. Lethbridge's term which runs until May 17, 1959.

Dr. Lethbridge steered the planning commission through its 3 main projects, the master street plan system, a new zoning ordinance and future land use plan.

Board Postpones Bid Opening Date

Bids for construction of the addition to Cedar Street school will be opened Friday, May 31, rather than Thursday, May 23. Members of the Mason school board switched the dates Thursday night in an attempt to allow more time for contractors to bid on the estimated $100,000 project.

The addition will provide space for 6 classrooms to the south of the school. The new structure will parallel Cedar street.

Council Plans To Cancel Aid

Subdividers will have to go it alone if a proposed amendment to the subdivision ordinance is passed by the council.

Councilman Al Forgie presented an amendment which would abolish the 75% refund on the cost of running water lines and the one-third refund on sewer lines to plat developers as building lots are occupied.

The provision was added to the ordinance to aid in developing property. Councilmen indicated it had done little for developers or lot purchasers.

A hearing on the change is scheduled for June 3.

Did it ever occur to you how much you could enhance the value of your home or business in dollars and cents by merely applying a coat of paint when it is needed? Aggies Move Closer to another Title

Dansville's victory Monday afternoon over Fowlerville opened the door to the throne room for the Aggies.

Friday night Dansville will wind up the season at Stockbridge under the lights. A victory will give the Dansville another trophy for the display case.

Dansville knocked off Fowlerville 6-3.

Glen Wireman put on a one-man show for the Aggies. He banged Fowlerville pitching for 3 hits, including a double, drove in one run and turned in a sparkling performance on the mound. He allowed only 4 hits while striking out 9.

The Aggies broke into the scoring column in the first ining. Kaye Douglas walked and stole second. He advanced to third on an out and came home on an infield error.

With one out in the second Dansville picked up another run. Jim Breslin singled and came home on Keith Douglas' single.

The Aggie attack produced 2 runs in the third on a double by Wireman and came home when the catcher dropped the ball on the play at the plate. Breslin scored Minnis on an infield dribbler.

The last 2 Aggie runs crossed the plate in the fourth inning. Kaye Douglas walked and stole second and third. Keith Douglas walked and stole second. Kaye scored on Wireman's Chinese liner. Keith was out at the plate but Wireman scored on an over-throw at first.

Fowlerville threatened in the fourth inning with a 3-run rally on 2 walks, 3 singles and an error.

DEAN MARTIN and European star Eva Bartok, are 2 of the romantic principals in M-G-M's new CinemaScope musical, "Ten Thousand Bedrooms." It will be at the Fox Sunday through Tuesday.

Dansville Places Second In State Class D Meet

Dansville led Covert 34-33 up to the relay event.

Again it was Orville Emerson who topped Dansville in the point department. He won the state title in both the high and low hurdles and added points with a broad-jump good for fourth place.

Kiwanis Bowlers Win State Glory

Mason's Kiwanis bowling team must have taken bowling balls along on its state tournament trip to Houghton Lake Saturday and Sunday.

The Kiwanis bowlers, a doormat for the rest of the Thursday night league all season long, came home with a trunk full of trophies and pockets bulging with prize money.

In the team event Mason came in second in a field of 128 Kiwanis teams from all over the state. Industrial Kiwanis club of Detroit nosed out the Mason team by 17 pins. Mason knocked over a total of 2,899 pins.

Oh, Men! Oh, Women!
Wednesday and Thursday
This filmization of Cheryl Crawford's Broadway stage hit of 2 years ago is good entertainment. The story of a psychoanalyst who builds up a successful practice, but fails comically in trying to apply his techniques to his own love affair, it is replete with amusing situations that grow in intensity, clever and clean dialog and expert acting by name stars who seem to be enjoying themselves.

Read Luke 11:5-13.

Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness. (Matthew 6:33.)

A government office holder sought power, and found himself enmeshed in fraud and thievery. Another man with health, education, wealth, died young. Fortune spent, he swept barroom floors for the price of the liquor he craved. A woman used questionable methods to gain a fine estate, only to die and leave it for others to enjoy.

When shall we have faith to believe Christ's promise that all in life will be provided when we truly seek to do His will?

When man plans without God, he builds on shifting sand. Too often a lifetime of labor leaves one broken in defeat only because the goal was selfish and that of a man's own designing.

We do not need better schemes, not more prestige. Instead, the world needs Christ.

Christ will come into the heart of man when invited. Perhaps He waits—sorrowfully—for us to admit Him, to help Him in a greater way.

PRAYER

We thank Thee, heavenly Father, for the choice Thou hast given us—to seek first Thy kingdom rather than things that lure to lesser goals. Let us fall Thee, and in falling short, betray our brother, may we have courage and the will to do Thy bidding. In Thy name, we pray. Amen.

Northern Michigan Scouts Choose Haase As Executive

Harold H. Haase, formerly of Mason, has been appointed district executive of the central district, Scenic Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, at Traverse City.

Haase is expected to join the staff of the council following the completion of his professional schooling at Schiff Scout reservation at Mendham, N. J., the first part of September; and he is also expected to serve in lining up the Camp Grellick program for the summer prior to his departure for the training course.

Kindergarteners Are Registered

Preschool roundup of next fall's kindergarten children at Okemos was at each of the grade schools (Central, Cornell and Wardell) on Wednesday.

To enter kindergarten next September, a child should be 5 years of age by September 1. If he is not 5 by that time, he should remain at home another year rather than start too young, school officials said. Sound educational practices have proved that most failures in school and reading problems have been caused by youngsters starting school before they were ready, experts found.

Okemos Student Finishes Course

Miss Jonnie Ruth McKinley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. McKinley, 2142 Hamilton road, Okemos, will graduate from the Christian education-music course at the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago June 7. As a student there she was corresponding secretary of the Christian Education club and a member of Moody chorale. She was also on a Missionary Union deputation team and was secretary of the Moody Student, the student newspaper.

Miss McKinley is looking forward to further schooling following her graduation in June.

Graduates from this year's class at Moody Bible Institute come from 34 states, Hawaii, 3 foreign countries and represent 21 different denominations. The 241 members of the class plan service as ministers, musicians, Christian Education workers, teachers, and as missionaries in 14 foreign countries.

Albino Starling Falls

Donald Wilcox shot a white starling out of a flock of common starlings Friday. The bird had pure white feathers except for gray around its neck.

Haase is a Scout leader who has served as counselor, troop committee member, and cub pack committee member during the past 7 years. He served in the navy between the years of 1913 and 1915, and attended the Mason public schools, Northwestern Michigan college and Michigan State university. He majored in the field of education while in school.

The new Scout executive was born in Watson, Wisconsin, in 1919. He is a member of the Presbyterian church in Traverse City. He will live at 428 W. 8th street, Traverse City.

Haase has a son who is an eagle Scout and another son who is a first class Scout. The entire family has been Scouting conscious for many years. The father was an enthusiastic Boy Scout and was a leader in the Chief Okemos council before the family left Mason for Traverse City.

Haase is the first Scouter in the Scenic Trails Council to enter the professional ranks of Scouting. He will attend the 198th school at Schiff Scout reservation.

Mass Production Aids Car Luxury

High and low priced cars have switched roles in bringing new features to the American public, according to Roy Christensen of Christensen Ford Sales.

"The secret of this change is volume production," he said.

As an example, Christensen cited the production of the Hide Away by the Ford company.

"The manufacturer of a high priced car wouldn't be able to offer the Hide Away because his limited production would have forced the price beyond the reach of all but a handful of buyers," he said.

New body styles, like the convertible, station wagon and now the Hide Away, have been placed on the market because a volume producer like Ford has been able to bring the price within reach of the buying public.

"This also applies to accessories such as power brakes, power steering, and automatic seats and windows which were rarities until marketed by the volume producer," he pointed out.

Holt Students View Area Problems

Holt high school students are participating in Michigan week by having a good look at their own community.

As part of their school work they studied local needs and how to best meet those needs.

Temple Smith reflected that Holt is more than a dot on the map; that it is the most important place in the world to people who live there.

Roger Brewer and Dave Thomas had a look at both sides of the incorporation issue.

Gary Chappell studied the problem of swimming in the numerous gravel pit ponds in the community and suggested that a pool might be a solution.

Don Livensparger checked the plans for Holt's new high school. The newspaper articles written by Holt students are on this page.

New High School at Holt Will Carry Campus Look

By DON LIVENSPPARGER

Holt is building a new high school to serve the growing population with new and up-to-date educational facilities.

The school is located at Sycamore street and Aurelius road. There is sufficient space for future additions to the building and to the new athletic field which adjoins it. The site is such that a maximum number of pupils can walk—thereby cutting down on bus service.

The funds were obtained by floating a bond issue of approximately $1,000,000.

The school will be a campus style building with 4 separate units. The first unit will have the laboratory rooms, industrial arts room and the art room. The second unit will consist entirely of classrooms. The third unit will have the gymnasium, cafeteria and band room. The fourth unit will have administration offices and commercial rooms.

More and more schools are using the campus plan because of one distinct advantage. It permits easy expansion.

The building will be completed in the fall of 1958 and will practically be filled to capacity on opening day. Additions will be required 4 years later.

Bids were let early in March and construction began soon after.

The S. S. Milwaukee Clipper, linking both sections of U.S. Highway 16, crosses Lake Michigan between Milwaukee, Wisconsin and Muskegon, Michigan saving motorists 240 driving miles. She is of all-steel construction, oil-fueled and equipped with radar, radio direction finder and ship to shore phones. Capacity: 120 automobiles and 900 passengers.

A Small Dot on the Map Does Not Reflect Holt

By TEMPLE SMITH

Holt, Michigan, is a small dot about one-fourth of an inch south of a large star on the road maps. In terms of world affairs, this little cluster of buildings is not worth the amount of U238 it would take to blow it up. Holt is an invisible spot on a minute piece of dust revolving about a small ball of fire somewhere in the limitless reaches of space.

Yet, what is the measure of importance? For the people who live in Holt, it is the most important place in this little old world.

Although the news of the rest of the world is of interest to Holt people and may affect them to some extent, the happenings of their own community motivate them to think and act every day of their lives. They cheer, praise and even defend those who are strangers to them just because they have the same town in common.

People of Holt are proud to say, "I live in Holt." They realize that Holt makes up an important part of the whole community and this in turn makes up a part of Greater Michigan. They are proud to live in the largest unincorporated village in the United States because this area, this town, and the people who live here, are their friends.

Too Many Holt Youngsters Take Swimming Chances

By GARY CHAPPELL

Do people know the number of children swimming in the gravel pits in the Holt area?

These pits are extremely dangerous to anyone swimming in them. The number of children making a non-hour trip to these pits is high, sometimes 10 to 15 in swimming at one time. This situation could be remedied by a swimming pool close to Holt.

The swimming program of years past has helped some, but a swimming pool would nearly shut off the use of the pits. A good example of this is the Moores park pool in Lansing. The charge is 10c, made in order to get back the locker keys. A program in this area could charge a larger amount as a fee to help pay for morning and afternoon dips. This would bring in a good sum of money.

If a season would run from June 1 through Labor Day, a close estimate of the money taken in from open swimming would be $1,200.

This does not include the fees that could be charged for swimming instruction. There are many parents in the area who are willing to pay to have their children taught to swim. It would be an advancement in the right direction for the Holt community if this possibly could be instituted.

Age Groups Usually Differ On Incorporation of Holt

By ROGER BREWER and DAVE THOMAS

One of the biggest and most controversial questions in Holt is: "Should we incorporate?"

This question is answered by the younger set and most middle aged people with a strong yes. Many of the older people say no. There are many reasons for the answers of the different age groups.

A leading citizen of Holt gives this reason—higher taxes by incorporation. These higher taxes would come because Holt would have to have its own police force and a regular fire department. Holt would have to clean the snow off its streets (one person said that the county road commission is doing a good enough job).

and street lights would have to be installed. The same person said that there would be no advantages by incorporating.

On the other side of the question, people say that if the area incorporates, the school taxes would go down because industries would come to Holt. These industries would come because there would be better fire protection and better police protection. School taxes and other taxes would stay in Holt instead of going to other parts of the township and not doing Holt any good.

Some people say that Holt has everything to gain by incorporation and everything to lose by not incorporating.

A poll taken of families last week showed that 48 families were for incorporation, and 2 against.

Incorporation has been a live issue in Holt before and it promises to become one again, perhaps quite soon. It is an issue that needs to be fully considered.

More Game Fish Will Be Planted

Approximately 150,000 muskellunge eggs and an equal number of northern pike eggs are being processed at Drayton Plains hatchery near Pontiac.

Conservation department fisheries workers collected the eggs from wild northern muskellunge captured early this month in 2 western Upper Peninsula lakes. The eggs were kept at Thompson hatchery near Manistiquie until recently.

The northern pike eggs were taken from marshy areas in the central part of the Upper Peninsula.

State workers have thus far been stymied in efforts to collect eggs of the Great Lakes musky. Attempts have been made during the last 3 spring spawning seasons, but the big fish are elusive and egg collection is difficult.

One of the toughest hatchery jobs is feeding these young predators after they hatch. Pike and musky fry demand a constant supply of live food, otherwise they set about eating each other.

To date, state workers have collected more than 70 million sucker-eggs. When hatched, these will provide live food which is essential for the growing muskies and pike.

When the young game fish are big enough to fend for themselves, conservation workers will plant them in public waters. Research on their progress is aimed at providing better angling for Michigan fishermen.

Michigan VFW Lays Plans For Grand Rapids Meeting

Michigan Veterans of Foreign Wars will hold their 38th annual state encampment at Grand Rapids, June 20 through 23, it has been announced by State Commander Max C. McCann, of Mason.

McCann said an expected 5,000 VFW members, auxiliary and guests would be on hand for the 4-day convalesce.

Principal speaker at the party will be National VFW Commander Cooper T. Holt, of Chattanooga, Tennessee. Holt will address the encampment at a business meeting.

Climax of the convention will be on Sunday, June 23, when a state of state officials will be elected. Howard Barhlite of Muskegon is expected to receive unanimous delegate approval as state commander.

The auxiliary will probably elect Mrs. Francis (Esther) Mathews, of Dimondale, state president to succeed Mrs. Melvin (Clarissa) Loeding, of Marysville.

Business of the encampment will center about the many resolutions submitted by local VFW units throughout Michigan, and from the national organization.

3 Are Injured When Car Flips

Three Jackson young people were injured at 3:30 Sunday morning when the car in which they were riding overturned.

Taken to a Jackson hospital by Vort ambulance of Dansville and a sheriff's car were Charles A. Martines, 17, Bert Martines, 16, and Cathy Dickerson, 17. Charles Martines had his left arm cut. His brother was injured about his back and chest and the girl sustained a back injury.

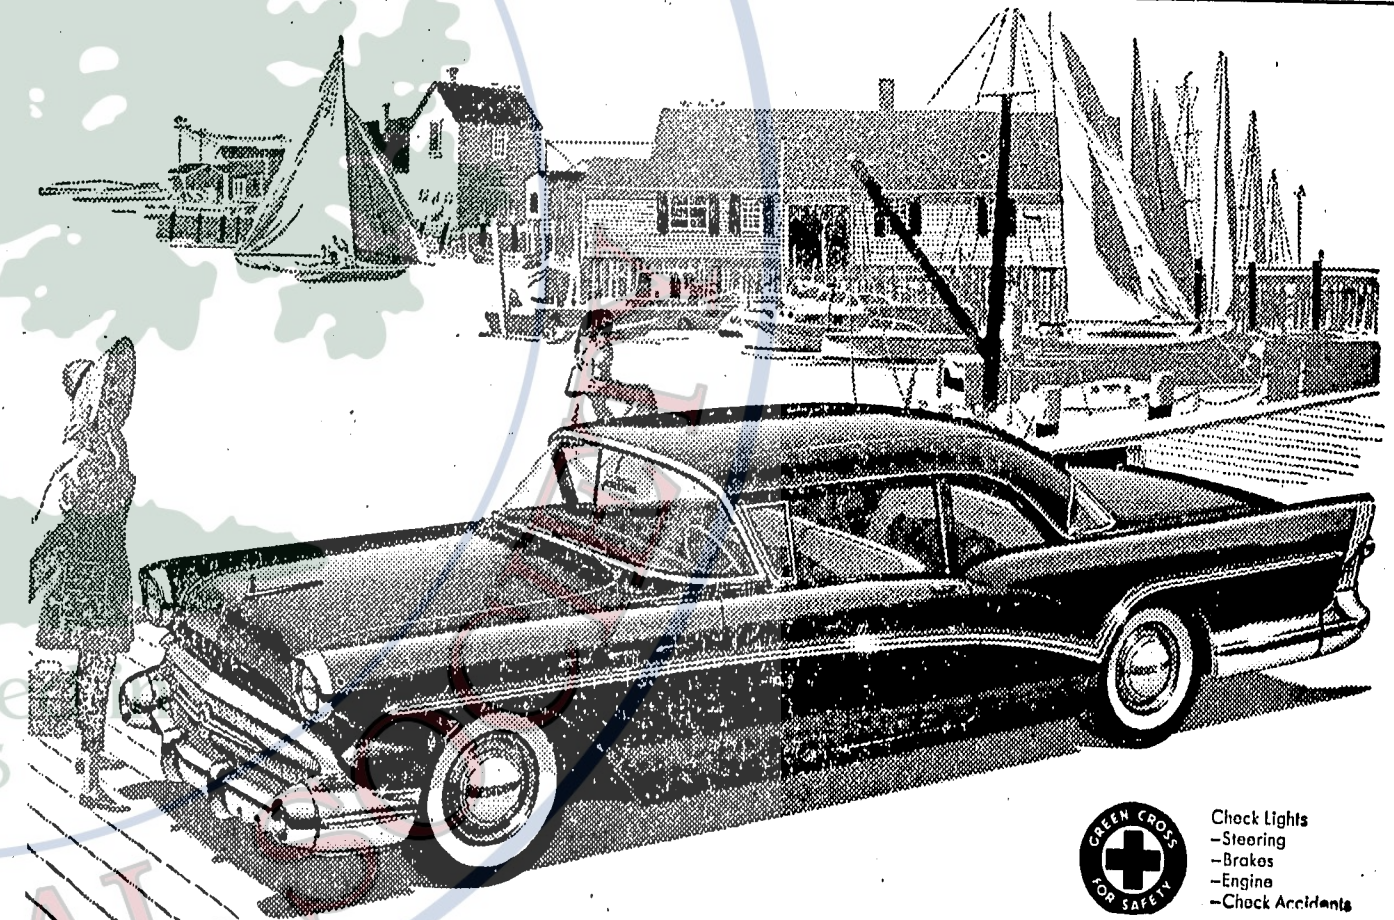

John A. Smith, 19, also of Jackson, was the driver of the car. He was not hurt. He told officers his car swerved out of control while rounding a curve, struck the berm and overturned.

Lichens Are Useful

Lichens, the greenish-gray plant growths commonly seen on trees, rocks and old plowed fields, are sensitive to the atmosphere and are being used to detect air pollution, reports Dr. Henry A. Imshaug, Michigan State university botanist.

School Picnic Dates Are Set

Arrangements are being made for the final activities of the Dansville Agricultural school. The pupils in the kindergarten through the third grades will have their picnics Tuesday, May 28, at the school. They will have their regular classes in the forenoon, lunch at noon and recreation during the afternoon. It is the closing day of school.

The picnic for grades 4-12 will be Friday, May 31, at Pleasant lake. All parents, other members of the family and people of the community may attend. Children below the fourth grade should be accompanied by parents or adults, who will be responsible for them. Games and other activities will be planned and money prizes will be given. Parents are asked to cooperate with the school as far as transportation is concerned in order to avoid possible accidents.

It is suggested that parents drive when possible, insist that boys and girls ride the school bus or with an equally responsible driver and not to allow boys and girls to drive a car with passengers unless they have a regular driver's license and a good driving record.

Buses will leave the school shortly after 9 o'clock for the lake and will leave for home about 2:30 p. m.

Michigan Voters Will Have Chance To Have Constitution Overhauled

By ELMER WHITE
Michigan Press Association

Voters will get a chance in 1958 to rewrite the constitution which has guided Michigan's state government since 1908.

Whether to call a constitutional convention will automatically go on the November, 1958, ballot.

Under another section of the constitution, a convention to write the basic law is composed of 3 delegates from each state senatorial district.

Democrats already are fighting for another system.

The 1952 amendment created the "balanced legislature," with the house (110 members) representing people or population and the senate (34 members) representing areas.

Democrats charge that a constitutional convention will be peopled by Republicans because traditionally, outstate voters send Republicans to the senate.

Republicans retort that the voters approved the reapportionment amendment in 1952, thus tacitly agreeing to the procedure for electing delegates to a constitutional convention.

Despite their hold on the senate and the makeup of a convention, Republicans are fearful that any rewrite of the constitution might upset the reapportionment process.

Civil service, in effect since 1941, has a growing number of critics, and its champions fear the way Michigan hires its 27,000 employees would be changed.

Both parties agree that the voter has it in his power in 1958 to alter Michigan's government.

There have been numerous proposals in the past, including the adoption of the Nebraska system of a one-chamber legislature. Or a generous convention could legalize bingo, a proposition defeated in 1954; it might add a member to the supreme court to end 4 to 4 decisions.

One major point: No legislator may be a delegate to a constitutional convention, placing Michigan's government for a time squarely in the hands of the governor.

And, under the present constitution, the voters have a chance to vote automatically for or against a constitutional convention—every 16 years.

Experts in local property valuation will help fix property tax rates next year.

Governor Williams has signed into law a bill reorganizing the state board of equalization to include 2 new members, recognized experts in the fields of rural and urban property tax assessment.

The bill was sponsored by Senator John P. Sneekeus (R-Coldwater), a former member of a county board of supervisors who listened to the woes of local taxpayers.

"We will now have men on the board who know the local problems," he said.

The 2 new members will replace the state auditor general and the director of agriculture.

Enactment of the law came too late for the change to take effect this year. The board approved a 10% across-the-board increase, totaling $70,000,000 in new local property taxes.

Prison troubles again plague Michigan. There are no riots at Jackson state prison, no mass escapes from Marquette state prison, and things are quiet at Ionia state reformatory.

This time the trouble is at the Detroit House of Correction, where the state houses all its women prisoners and a number of male trustees.

Dozens of major amendments have been made to the constitution in the last 50 years, including state civil service, sales tax distribution, and reapportionment of the legislature.

The latter, adopted in 1952, is the crux of a new fight between political parties and will, in effect, determine the makeup of a constitutional convention if the voters order it.

The state corrections commission has asked for an investigation of conditions following a sit-down strike by the women, and Detroit penal officials have agreed.

In addition, Corrections Director Gus Harrison is worried about overcrowded conditions at all prisons. The total inmate count is expected to reach an all-time high of 10,500 next year.

Bank Installs Proof Machine

The new proof machine was the subject of interest of the examining committee of the Stockbridge State bank during its recent meeting.

The machine keeps every transaction in balance during every minute of the day. It shows up any mistake right at the time the mistake is made and keeps everything correct right up to the moment. It also adds the lists of checks which depositors bring in and corrects any error made by the depositor.

The machine is expected to soon absorb the cost of $3,500.

Established in 1908, the bank has only once foreclosed a mortgage. It has grown from deposits totaling $42,113.14 in 1908 to $3,002,310.57 in 1953 and way beyond that figure today. Directors are W. G. Dancer, J. Herbert Dancer, Paul C. Dancer, Robert B. Dancer and Ambrose Brady.

Paul G. Dancer is president; W. G. Dancer, vice-president; Ambrose Brady, cashier; and John T. Dancer, assistant cashier.

If You're Like Me

You've heard about "civil arrest" but you didn't know just how it worked or why.

An arrest in a civil action is the apprehension of a person by civil process to answer some demand against him.

The authorization and use of arrest in civil actions are limited by the constitutional provision which prohibits imprisonment for debt arising out of a contract, except in cases of fraud or breach of trust, and a few other exceptions of the same general nature.

Even then certain persons are specifically exempt by law from civil arrest. Among these are children under 16, females and certain others.

The statute, however, that says that females are exempt from arrest on civil process does not always apply. For example, in a proceeding for contempt to force a woman to comply with that portion of a divorce decree which requires her to pay a certain portion of a trust fund to her husband, the statute would not be applicable.

One little interesting exemption from civil arrest is that you are free from such arrest when you are already under arrest! That isn't always so, but it would be under such circumstances as this example: Let's say you are brought from outside the state to be in attendance in court under criminal arrest; while you are in court and until you have had a reasonable opportunity to leave the state you are not subject to civil arrest.

Isn't that an interesting quirk of the law?

There's a New Book about Old Soo

By NORMAN BUNKER
County Librarian

The summer of 1846 at Sault Ste. Marie was known as the "Tanner" summer. Some had things happened that summer, and all of them were blamed on John Tanner, including the murder of James Schoolcraft. Tanner had been a captive of the Indians since the age of 9. Thirty years later he found he could not live in peace with either the Indians or the whites. A narrative of The Captivity and Adventures of John Tanner (U. S. Interpreter at Sault Ste. Marie) during 30 years residence among the Indians... was first published 126 years ago. It has been reprinted and is now available in the Michigan collection of the Ingham county library.

Lovers of agarics know what they're doing. Those who gather the wrong kind are no longer with us. Many years ago a detailed guide was published, Agaricaceae of Michigan, by C. H. Knuffman. He spent 10 years in the field and laboratory to check up on his family, commonly known as mushrooms.

For those who are still doing spring cleaning, here's a tip: Wash chandeliers with onion water to prevent fly specks. To make onion water, consult the Encyclopedia of Household Hints, collected by Jane Stewart. Not all the hints are as breathtaking as that one.

If your snake plant is too big for the pot, pry it apart and make 4 plants out of it. Complete instructions, with pictures, can be found in Plant Propagation in Pictures by Montague Free. His advice is just as practical on many other plants, as peonies, iris, begonias and gladiolus. He shows how to increase the number of plants by division, grafting, layering, cutting, bulbs and tubers, sowing seeds and spores.

When your power mower gets enmeshed with snakes, don't be blue. Remember, there are more dangerous snakes in the U. S. than in any other part of the world. So says Carl Kauffold, author of Snakes and Snake Hunting, and expert herpetologist. Relating his adventures in catching snakes in this country, Kauffold says that there is nothing more fascinating.

Bill Gegan likes the outdoors and growing things, too. In Seed on the Wind he urges fathers to instruct their sons early in all the problems and thrills of forest and lake life. He thinks it good for father as well. Gegan has applied this method many times to many types of boys, and imparts his experiences with considerable skill.

Are American men killing themselves to produce a better world for American women to live alone in? That question is posed by Hannah Lees in Help

Your Husband Stay Alive. She feels that American women must be made aware of the shorter life expectancy of their mates before it's too late. And what's more, they should do something about it. Husbands can be made to love life more than money, she claims.

Norman Vincent Peale suggests that we all concentrate on living while we have the chance in Stay Alive All Your Life. Hailed as a successor to the Power of Positive Thinking, this book uses the same approach to life's problems.

There are people who do not let the desire for money dominate their lives. Some have preferred pure gold. Gold in Them Hills by Phil Stong states that most of the men who joined the 1849 Gold Rush lost money on the deal. On the average, the cost of tools and labor was triple the value of the gold. Stong is known as the author of State Fair.

A Claim in the Hills by James Wickenden is a true adventure of a young man of today. He was a diamond prospector in the mountains of Brazil, Venezuela, and British Guiana. He lived with near-aborigines for years. His experiences with them made diamond hunting seem dull in comparison.

For other adventures, other prizes, read Pirate: Rascals of the Spanish Main by A. B. C. Whipple. This is the vivid story of the outlaws who made the Spanish Main their home and hunting ground. Whipple describes how they took their richest prizes, and provides a map with the latest tips on buried treasure.

Edith Schussler's husband was a doctor who followed the railroad construction gangs at the turn of the century. In Doctors, Dynamite and Dogs she tells of the life at Taft, Montana, while the road was being built from St. Regis, Montana, to St. Joe, Idaho. A thousand men worked at the tunnel, with 9,000 more on the right-of-way. Fights, shootings, and murders were the order of the day.

A 61-year-old woman accompanied 7 men through the hazardous canyons of the Green and Colorado rivers on rubber rafts. Old Ricketts Summer writes of her 60-day adventure in Traveler in the Wilderness. Her trip through dangerous rapids, followed by breakfasts of brook trout, did serve the purpose of getting her away from the humdrum life of an author, she claims.

Hanging Judge Parker was not vindictive in dispensing his justice at Fort Smith, Arkansas, in the 80's and 90's. Glenn Shirley in Law West of Fort Smith shows that Parker sentenced 70 men to hang because they needed it. Shirley, captain of police at Stillwater, Oklahoma, records the whole story of the court at Fort Smith, with matter-of-fact accounts of the lives of the criminals, such as the Daltons, the Buck gang, Belle Starr, Cole Younger and many others.

Captain Jim Cook, born in Michigan, probably knew Red Cloud, the Sioux chief, better than any other white man. For more than 50 years Cook was a cowboy and ranch boss in Texas, a big game hunter in the Rocky Mountains, an Indian scout, and a friend of the Sioux and Northern Cheyennes. Fifty Years on the Old Frontier was first published in 1923, and remains as one of the most vital accounts of the cowboys and Indians of the Old West.

Farmer Peck's Wife

Memories Are Precious

Two bouquets of yellow sit near me. One is Sammy's dandelions which he proudly presented to me with, "Mamma, here are some pretty flowers for you. I picked and picked and there are lots left. Tomorrow I'll get some more for you."

I can see him now sitting in them. . . . Socks close by waiting to move on when both are ready. Sometimes the boy takes the dog . . . sometimes the dog takes the boy on to new adventures but always they are together.

Sammy just held a long yellow dandelion up to Socks' chin and tipped his huge head back . . . evidently "to see if he liked butter." I guess he didn't for he picked another and tried again.

This is one of those picture-memories that we mothers like to store away and call on through the years for various reasons.

All the happy memories that go through a mother's head; you have only to get 2 of them together to find this out. Sooner or later the talk gets around to their children. It's quite natural. If they didn't, it would be unnatural. I think, though there is a limit and lots of folks wouldn't agree on the percentage of it in a visit.

That's perhaps the basis on which we choose family friendships more than anything else. It isn't being in the same age group so much as it is having children of the same age group. It's lots more comfortable taking your children visiting where they have (or have had) little ones so they know the stages a child goes through. And I won't list them.

It makes me hang my head in shame though, thinking of all the booby traps we had around here before Susy, Sally and Sammy came along—windows swathed in yards of billowy curtains so a little child couldn't look out decently, rows of tawdry flower pots on the window sills . . . but worst of all were the dog-dads sitting on assorted low tables. We had a dog collection including a shaggy and fragile collie that comes to mind the most . . . and the worst, I bet V. C. will grin when she reads this.

My other yellow bouquet is a flowering currant which really makes the room swim in its aroma. It comes from the bush that Evelyn Scott . . . whoops, that isn't right any more . . . gave me. Now I must remember that it is Evelyn Porubsky for she and Ronald were married Saturday at our church. What a pretty bride and wedding!

I had Evelyn as a tiny first-grader and then in my Sunday school class. Ronald was in our 4-H club and I was his handcraft and garden project leader. His folks were next door neighbors of ours.

Each spring for 12 years now Evelyn's currant bush has reminded me of her. So it goes with many of the shrubs in our yard. Maybe that's one of the big reasons why each little house and yard throughout the land means so much to the owners. I know dotted about around here are plants that were given to me through the years, each with a special story of its own, and not meaning much to anyone but me.

In many cases the folks are dead now, and their plants bring them to mind which, I think, is the nicest memorial there is. Mother is all about the yard for she gave trees and shrubs for birthdays, etc., and divided whatever she had.

Then there are Stella Fenner, Nell Bensinger, Viola Beck, Aunt Gladys, Martha Ryder and Roy Pearce who are gone now but remind me of their friendship through their white lilacs, rose bushes, lilacs of the valley, phloxes and flowering almond.

Of course, Esther Tabor is very much with us but she is also very much in our yard and in my mind. In that first year of our marriage when this yard was as bare as a bone, for the house had burned here and consumed every green thing around it, then it was Esther who really started me out. I rode over on my bicycle one day and wobbled back, barely able to make it. Lashed on, around and about me were 14 kinds of green and growing things . . . some she warned me that I would not care much about as they "spread." But I took anything and everything and through the years I have thought of that happy day even as I hoed it out!

Childhood is a brief span in the bridge of life. Yet it is during the early years that we lay the foundation for all that is to come.

Church School is over, and Eileen and Johnny linger on the church steps, talking about the lessons they've learned this morning. They both are excited because, under their teacher's guidance, the stories of the Bible are beginning to come alive for them.

We're not going to predict a "happy ever after" ending. We're not going to say that having met in Church School, Eileen and Johnny will go on seeing each other in church each week and that ultimately they'll grow up, fall in love, and get married. (Though, who knows? Maybe they will at that!) But we are saying—and deeply believing—that through Church School these children and thousands upon thousands of other children are receiving religious education, an ever-expanding lesson in good fellowship, wisdom, kindness, and tolerance.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Where Michigan Geography Begins

By MARGARET BROWN

Ingham county is the center of Michigan geography. It is here in this county that the principal meridian and the base line intersect.

Complications had arisen in the early days of the new nation of the United States when the land had been described by irregular boundaries. When setting up the states of the Northwest Territory in 1790, congress decided to get away from the old system. Because of this, the town and range system was established. Under it, all townships are described as being so many townships north or south of the base line and so many townships east or west of the meridian line. Each township contains 36 sections, each section being a mile square. Each section can be halved, quartered and further divided to describe the location of certain property.

The city of Mason, being within Vevay township, is legally known as Town 2 North, Range 1 West. This means that Vevay is the second township north of the base line and the first township west of the meridian line.

Surveyors, on an order from congress, established the base line east and west from Wayne county's north boundary line to Lake Michigan. This line now forms the southern boundary of Ingham. The meridian line bisects the state, running north and south. Those lines cross near the intersection of Meridian road and Base Line road on the Jackson and Ingham boundary.

SUPERVISORS of Ingham and Jackson counties once considered buying a right-of-way and making a path to the point where the base line and principal meridian meet. But they never got around to it. The point of zero geography in Michigan is where Leslie and Bunker Hill townships of Ingham almost come up against Rives and Henrietta townships of Jackson county. It is about a half-mile west of Meridian road and three-quarters of a mile south of Olds road.

Every piece of land in the whole state of Michigan is described as being so far one way or another from where these imaginary lines intersect.

The people of Ingham and Jackson counties can thus say they live where Michigan geography begins.

Mammoths and Mastodons Once Pastured in Ingham

By JERRY CHESNEY

Mammoths and mastodons lived in the Grand river valley about 8,000 or 10,000 years ago. Remains of mammoths have been found frequently.

As Harry Freshour was digging a drain 2 miles west of Mason in Aurelius township, he found a mammoth's tooth, and on some new land on the Sheetham farm in White Oak, a perfect set of mammoth's tusks, were found 3 years ago.

Mammoths looked a lot like elephants, but they were bigger, had longer coarser hair, and longer curved tusks. Mastodons looked like mammoths but their tusks were not quite as curved and they had different tooth development.

Few remains of mammoths have been found in Michigan because they lived in the upland regions and when they died, their remains were destroyed by the weather.

Mastodons, however, lived in lowlands and when they died their remains were preserved in the mud and peat of the swamps. About 150 whole or partially fossilized skeletons of mastodons have been found in Michigan, most of them in the southern half of the lower peninsula.

State Land at Dansville Offers Outdoor Pleasure

By PETER ROBINSON

The Dansville state game area was one of the first and is one of the best of the state game areas in Michigan. The Dansville area has the charm of variety, and offers many hours of recreation for those who like the outdoors "undeveloped."

This area is near to people and is truly a sportsman's paradise with its 330 acres of upland and lowland thickly interspersed with woods, marsh, green pastures and plentiful wildlife.

During the depression farmers found it difficult to earn a living on some of the sub-marginal land in the southeastern part of the county. Conservation authorities decided that a state game area would accomplish 2 purposes. First, it would take many farmers from the poor farming area and secondly it would provide a much needed area for residents to hunt and fish.

Funds for these department of conservation projects are provided by the Pittman-Robertson program, or officially, the federal aid in wildlife restoration act, which is revenue from federal excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition. This tax is collected by the federal government and pro-rated back to the states. Money from this fund paid for the Dansville state game area.

There are approximately 40 game areas located throughout Michigan, the primary purpose of which is to give sportsmen a place to hunt where habitats are kept as favorable as possible for game birds and animals.

The largest of the state game areas is Gratiot-Saginaw which includes 8,000 to 10,000 acres.

Also there are some areas which have considerable water frontage. There is good hunting and fishing territory thus provided, plus waterfowl areas, one of these being at Leidy lake. These areas are supported by the sale of duck stamps.

Mob Seized Negro Youth, Hanged Him Without Trial

By KATHY BROWN

Michigan people often point their fingers at the South for lynchings there. Perhaps they didn't know that Ingham county once had a lynching. It was right here in Mason.

John Taylor came here as a camp follower of a Michigan regiment in the Civil War. He had formerly been a slave in Kentucky. He was homeless and needy and sought work. He hired out to Daniel Buck, a Delhi farmer, and stayed there for several weeks. He wanted to go to school and so he arranged with a colored family in Lansing to live with them.

Eventually he was forced to visit his employer for his pay, but received none. Buck had made some threats and so fearing them he picked up an axe when he went to see Buck one evening. While wandering he awakened Buck's daughter. When she saw him she started screaming and jumped on the bed. The Negro claimed that during her jumping she hit her head on the axe. That aroused the mother and as the intruder fled, he struck her.

The sheriff was notified and sent out a posse.

The community was excited, angry, and full of vengeance. On the night of April 23 a hundred men came into Mason and went to the jail. They demanded the keys and prisoner of the sheriff. The sheriff refused so they attacked him and took the keys and prisoner.

They fastened a rope in a tree and told the Negro to start praying. Then they strung him up. While the Negro boy was struggling on the tree he was shot at 3 times. After he was dead the mob took him down and cut his head off. After doing that, they gave it to a young doctor as an accomplishment of the night.

The mob mauled the remains of its victim and threw what was left in a grave north of town.

Interurbans Linked Cities

By GEORGIANNA POST

Mason's first suburban transportation system was the line built by the Michigan Electric Railroad company. It linked Lansing and Jackson and connected with Detroit, St. Johns, Owosso, Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. The fare was 38c per person for one way and 40c round trip between Mason and Lansing.

A hassle resulted when the company bought a right-of-way and placed the tracks on the edge of town. Many residents were furious. They believed that unless the trolley went directly through the main streets much business would be lost! One night there was a raid led by Albee Leon, (justice of peace), and his own personal posse.

They tore up ties and tracks and broke everything breakable. The next day, workmen repaired the track and rolled an engine onto the newly laid track to hold their possession. That night Ira Maxwell stayed in the engine to defend it from intruders. No more intruders came because Ira Maxwell had the reputation as a fighting Scotsman and no one cared to fight him.

The Michigan Electric Railroad company abandoned its Lansing-Jackson line in 1920 after several years of financial losses. Buses using public highways made competition too tough for the electric lines.

The old right-of-way is all that now remains.

Glaciers Brought Gravel Deposits

By ROBERTA JUDSON

Although Ingham county is not thought of as a mining county, minerals lie under top soil. Ingham county has coal and much gravel.

Located in Lansing, Delhi and Vevay townships is a ridge of hills called the Hogsback. It traverses the townships parallel to US-127. It is composed of clay, sand and gravel. The hills are a result of the deposits of sand and gravel in crevasses of the glaciers thousands of years ago.

The glaciers were huge blocks of ice, which moved over Ingham county. When they melted, beds of glacial streams remained. They are the ridges of sand and gravel. They are scientifically described as eskers.

The Hogsback is one of the greatest eskers of all times. The hills have been quite valuable, the gravel being used for road building and other construction purposes.

Objectives of Michigan Week Are Many and Far Reaching

Michigan Week is a special time set aside in the spring of each year to focus attention on Michigan — its resources, its heritage, its almost boundless opportunities. It provides a special occasion for Michigan citizens to increase their knowledge and appreciation of all that makes Michigan great.

Michigan Week activity points up little known or forgotten facts which shed light on the many facets that make Michigan a good place in which to live, work, play and do business.

Michigan Week activity spotlights for both residents and non-residents the reasons why Michigan is famous for its industry, agriculture, tourist attractions and recreation and resort facilities.

Michigan Week enables the people of the state to make an annual audit of Michigan's growth. It helps create a desire to plan and work for an even greater future.

Principal sponsors of Michigan Week are Greater Michigan Inc., a business and civic association, and the Michigan economic development commission. With the help of other cooperating agencies the economic development department provides the state headquarters for Michigan Week. Greater Michigan Inc. provides the state fund for Michigan Week.

Indians Roamed the Forest Before First Settlers Came

By MARILYN BURGESS

Indian tribes of the Chippewas, Pottawatomies and Ottawas roamed what is now Ingham from the early 1700's to the late 1800's. They relied on the forests and streams for food and for clothing.

Chief Okemos, from whom the village of Okemos received its name, was the leader of the Chippewa tribe. Okemos was the main leader also of most of the county's Indians, and many tribesmen followed him in the wars they fought.

After the white settlers came into Michigan, the Indian population in Ingham county dwindled. The records show that only 500 Indians were known to live here in 1836.

Many settlements of Indians were found near Mason and at Onondaga, Okemos and Williamston.

The Indian standard of living was not very high. Wigwags were not picturesque. Indians lived in filth and dirt. They farmed little. The streams and forests provided the needed food and clothing.

The Indians of this county traveled by canoes on the Grand, Red Cedar and Portage rivers and also the Sycamore and other creeks. They also walked back and forth between their hunting grounds.

State Possesses Many Resources

By CONSTANCE SMITH

Ingham's greatest resource is the land. Under the land is coal that was mined in Alaledon in the 1930's, and at Williamston.

This soon came to a standstill because the coal was mined 1000 years too soon. It is soft and of poor quality.

The many gravel pits have made the county one of the leading producers of gravel in Michigan industry.

Thanks to the dairymen, Ingham county is one of the leading areas in the state which trucks fluid milk to Detroit.

Located 1,100 ft. under Detroit is one of the world's largest salt reservoirs. Because of the millions of tons of salt in this mine, it could supply the world for millions of years. This is Michigan's largest mineral resource with iron and copper coming next.

Michigan is in the Lake Superior region, which has the only known source of virgin copper in North or South America. The Indians were the first to mine copper. They made jewelry and trinkets with it.

The forests which have been planted across the upper part of the lower peninsula and above the straits have more total acreage than that of any other state.

The largest limestone quarry in the world is located at Rogers City. Other deposits are at Manistique.

Some of Michigan's other resources are gypsum, petroleum, valuable brines and glass sand.

One of Michigan's greatest resources today is land developed for vacation areas. Visitors can see forests and lakes; go speed-boating, fish or swim in the cool, clear waters around the state.

Heavy Forests Covered Land

By ROGER LOTT

When our forefathers came to Ingham county in the 1820's they saw vast forests. They began clearing these woodland areas to make homes and to raise food for their families. In so doing, they necessarily wasted thousands of feet of timber.

Ingham county has had many different kinds of timber. Among them are oak, maple, beech, elm, basswood, black walnut and others.

In pioneer days oak was used for altars, stockades, firewood, tables, etc. In 1872 a survey was made showing Ingham county had 27 different species of oak trees.

Today, Ingham and the other 82 counties in the state have lost much of their valuable forests. Only 52% of Michigan is still covered with woodland, and most of that is in the northern counties. However, farmers now realize the value of forests on submarginal lands to control erosion and for timber harvest. Considerable reforestation is now being done.

Mason Eighth-Graders Study Local History

In observance of Michigan week, Mason eighth-graders delved into local history along with state history.

Some of the eighth-graders asked to write news stories about the new things they had learned. Mrs. Phyllis Stid helped them with their research and writing. The stories appear on this page.

Young Woman from East Organized School at Mason

By SHIREEN FRY

The first private school in Ingham county was established in 1857 and was called the Fuller academy. It was located 2 miles southeast of Mason on what is now known as the L. B. Barr farm. The Fuller family moved to Mason from New York with 9 children. The oldest daughter, Emma Jane Fuller, had the advantage of a college education in New York and it was her responsibility to educate the younger children in the family.

To do this she established the academy on what was then the Fuller farm. She decided to admit neighboring children who wanted a boarding school education for a moderate fee.

Fifty or 60 pupils from Ingham county and throughout the state enrolled in the school.

Besides the general courses taught in most public high schools, the academy offered courses in French, German and rhetoric.

The school continued about 10 years. During the last few years it was used as a teachers' finishing school. In one year more than half of the first grade teachers' certificates issued in the county were awarded to graduates of the Fuller academy.

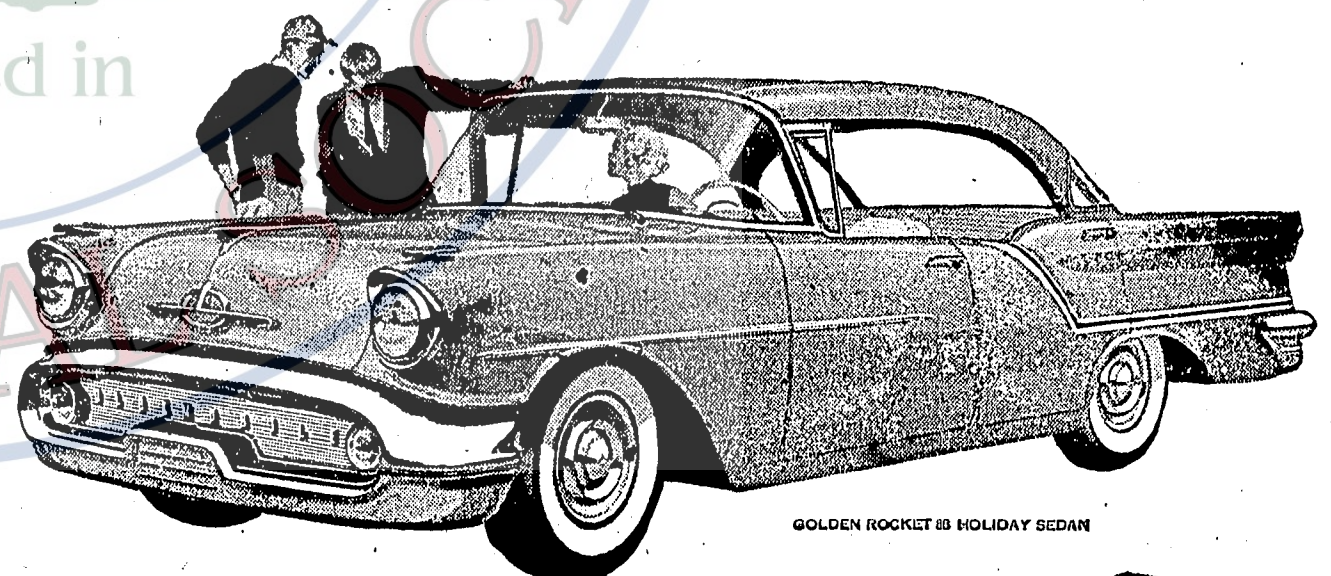

The second floor of the Fuller home was enlarged and fitted for a school. It still remains intact in the L. B. Barr home.

We Must Not Cross the Road

There can be no passing by on the other side in this community.

We have been doing it for years, just as the travelers on the road from Jerusalem to Jericho did. They were on the road ahead of the Samaritan and they looked the other way when they saw the man who had been wounded and left to die.

Here in this community we have been passing by on the other side, permitting a few people in Mason to provide the rest of us with hospital facilities, or permitting people in Lansing, Jackson, Eaton Rapids or Stockbridge to provide facilities for us.

But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where the wounded man lay, and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

In the parable it was related how the Samaritan gave the wounded man first aid, and how he took him to the inn, which in those days was the hospital. And the Samaritan paid the innkeeper, and promised to pay more if the wounded man stayed beyond the allotted time.

Which now of these three was the good neighbor?

The answer is plain. The man who gave succor to the wounded man, not the men who passed by on the other side.

Here in this community we now all have the opportunity to put one of the basic principles of Christianity into our own lives and our own living.

We need a hospital. We are raising $500,000 to build and equip a hospital that will serve this community adequately. It's a challenging task but it can be done. It can easily be done if we all act like the Good Samaritan, if we show the same compassion.

We can not look the other way.

Welcome to the Workers

In barracks at Mason are 165 men from Mexico, here to work in our fields.

These men have been chosen for their eagerness to work. They are men who bear good reputations in their own Mexican communities. They have received permission from their own officials and from our officials to enter the United States to work in sugar beets, cucumbers and onions and to work in cherry, peach and apple orchards.

These men from Mexico are not coming as IFYE delegates or Fulbright scholars, yet the impressions they get from living and working among us are every bit as important.

Few of the men from Mexico speak perfect English but most of them speak better English than we do Spanish. It's hard for them to converse with us in words, but there can be communication and understanding through nods of the head, smiles and cheerful greetings.

We should let our welcome to these Mexican braceros show. Let's do it.

Progress Is Not Just Numbers

Not only metropolitan cities but even small towns and suburban areas have pointed to census statistics as the sole criteria of progress.

People in Mason have pointed to other towns as making great progress because of many new houses being built and many new families coming in. That could mean progress and often it does. Occasionally it doesn't.

Ingham county has made great progress within the past 10 years, we all agree. But the progress is not measured by numbers. Quality, not quantity, is what should guide any community in its development. We could bring in shiploads of people and settle them here in Ingham county and we would be worse off instead of better off.

Progress is not just numbers. It's the quality of people, the quality of a community, the quantity of opportunity offered, the quantity of opportunity accepted, that really counts.

Professional State Pride

So this is Michigan week. Like the Texans, Michigan folks have taken to selling themselves and others on the merits of the old home state. The only difference is that Texans do it all year long while most Michiganders join the statehood frenzy just once a year.

Michigan week serves a purpose if it awakens people to the beauty and advantages of the Wolverine state. It's worthwhile if it makes all of us stick our chests out with pride.

Yet there is a danger in all of this professional cheer-leading, a danger of becoming overzealous, overspent and possibly overbearing.

The Michigan week committee, like lots of other state-financed committees, has sought out a regular niche in the government wall of bureaucrats. Now instead of the spontaneous enthusiasm of local volunteer committees, the program is operated on a several-thousand-dollar budget by paid professionals.

Campaign material, sometimes 4 and 5 letters a day to the same person, are dispatched from Lansing in huge quantities.

Lavish campaign material is given away in abundance.

It's wonderful to boost the old home town, the county, the state and nation. There isn't even any quarrel with getting behind the United Nations or the NATO countries with equal patriotism.

Yet, when professionals make a career out of that patriotism, the patriots soon lose interest.

Michigan week is fast becoming overly organized.

State pride can't necessarily be won with hired leadership with an unending supply of money. Such pride must come from the hearts of people.

We're all proud of Michigan. We can get along without the high pressure antics.

Down by the SYCAMORE

Several people expressed surprise last week at the front page feature on spelling championships at the Mason school. Perhaps the Ingham County News and other newspapers should have done a better job on academic school news in the past and there would not now have to be so many articles on why Johnny can't read, or can't figure or can't spell.

Little has been done in the public press to encourage boys and girls to make the most of their educational opportunities; except to run pictures of valedictorians and salutatorians and then it's too late for other boys and girls in that group to dig in.

Boys and girls are sent to school to be educated. That's what the shouting over school needs and finance is supposed to be about. But somehow there's more publicity about play than work in school. The muscle boys get their pictures in the paper and draw the headlines.

So last week we decided to accent the functional in news content as well as typography. We played up spelling. We sent one of the spellers on the Ingham County News staff to cover the contests.

Hereditry and environment may be factors in spelling. There were 3 Ward contestants, Jim in the fourth, Sandra in the fifth and Christine (the winner) in the seventh. There were 2 Warners, 2 or 3 Lotts and 2 Harvaths (who take after their mother).

Words which caused the most trouble were catarrh, myth, chintz, isthmus, religious, pretzel, duchess, knuckle, and gnash.

On Saturday afternoon I attended my first double wedding. It was the doubleheader of Suzanne Pearsall of Mason to Charles E. Budd of South Bend, and his sister, Rose Mary, to Robert E. Stevens of Iowa City, Iowa. It was in Alumni Memorial chapel at Michigan State. Both brides are graduating from the nursing course there next month.

It was an impressive ceremony, with Rev. Raymond L. Norton of Mason Methodist church in command. The Pearsall girls looked glorious—Suzie, Toby and Connie.

My brother Hugh once planned on a double wedding. He kept company with either Ina or Ida Clark, identical twins. I didn't know which was which and neither did Hugh for sure. While he was trying to make up his mind which one he wanted they up and married 2 other fellows.

Few readers have spoken about it, but several publishers and printers are showing interest in adoption of functional makeup on the Ingham County News. Bob Myers of the prize-winning Lapeer County Press is one of the experts who likes the new look and has said so. Other experts who have sent word are John Gingas of the Leslie Local Republican and Ink White of the Clinton County Republican News.

Forest and Marlon Hill are graceful ballroom dancers. They did some fancy stepping at the calico ball Friday night. They didn't enter the square dancing. Forest's trick knee disqualified him.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Oesterle and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cullen (she was Irma Oesterle) are energetic and graceful square dancers.

According to a square dance expert, eighth-grade and ninth-grade boys just walk and shuffle through ballroom dances because they fear to acknowledge their ignorance of square dancing. They'd have heaps of fun if they would learn square dance holds. It takes many of the boys well into their junior or senior year before they get up nerve enough to learn. It just comes naturally to most of the girls, the expert said.

Conflict sometimes arises even in the midst of harmony. Sunday just after Mason Presbyterians finished singing, "Be Still, My Soul," the choir started its anthem, "Be Thou Not Still."

Interscholastic spring sports could be abandoned and nobody would suffer much. Michigan weather is too unpredictable for baseball, golf and tennis before the last of May and early June. Introduction of soccer as a spring sport, both intramural and interscholastic, might be beneficial—after the boys finished their spelling lessons. Soccer can be played in almost any kind of weather and it's rugged exercise.

A good man's eulogy may save more souls than a sermon.

Wilber Seelye, Lansing lawyer, did well with the eulogy at funeral services for Judge L. B. McArthur Friday. He had a good subject—there was so much to commend. The judge had innate dignity, he was a righteous man, compassionate and with strong convictions—so said the eulogist and it was all true.

Farming Is Really Soil Stewardship

Approach of soil stewardship week, May 26 to June 2, sponsored by the National Association of Soil Conservation Districts and national church organizations, again focuses attention on the kinship between a man's spiritual beliefs and the soil resources on which his life depends, according to D. A. Williams, SCS national chairman.

"Our awareness of such a relationship is always with us, consciously or unconsciously," he pointed out. "Some see the kinship most clearly from a pine-blanketed mountain as they look out over woods, strip-cropped fields and clear-running streams or sparkling lakes.

"Others find it in turning a spadeful of living in the cool of the morning, or in the mellow roll of the furrow slice at plowing time. For soil not only gives life, it in itself is a living thing, a combination of living organisms around a skeleton of finely ground particles of sand, silt and clay.

"The longing for land-ownership of the acres one operates, a desire for that 'poultry farm' to which one will retire, or 'just a place to raise a few flowers' represents man's feeling that land is something stable, something to which he can tie, something in which he can sink his roots. In it he finds security and peace.

"Closely allied to that desire to possess land is the hope and the promise of fulfillment which land gives—hope for stability, for security, for peaceful living and the promise of bountiful harvests.

"This longing for land is universal. It surges no less in the heart of a Chinese, an Asian or a European than in the heart of an American. Because of it revolutions have occurred and wars have been fought.

"With a bit of land, man enjoys its use and its harvest. To get the most from it, he gives it his best knowledge of management and culture. And of the culture he bestows on it, the highest form is wise use of land and conservation measures.

"The good steward knows that conservation helps make the hope and the promise a reality, both now and for the decades and centuries to come.

"Since soil is a God-given heritage to all people, man is merely its custodian and good stewardship is a sacred responsibility. Fortunately, it also is good business since it results in higher income, better living, greater ease of farming, lower production costs and greater efficiency in the use of labor and machinery.

"Not only the material benefits but the spiritual feeling for the land must be added together to explain the intense interest and widespread support of modern, scientific soil and water conservation which has swept the country in recent years. Such interest is seen in the long hours which thousands of non-salaried soil conservation district directors are giving to speed up the program. It is seen in the many ways found by almost all groups to advance the conservation program. This is true of rural, urban, industrial, civic, professional, wild-life and other organizations.

4-Way Dry Cuts Costs

Exploratory tests show that exhaust outlets in the bottom corners of grain storages could cut drying power requirements a substantial amount.

Scott Hedden and Carl Hall, Michigan State university agricultural engineers, found out this possibility, according to M. H. Avery, county agricultural agent.

Power requirements with the outlets were a third to a twelfth that needed without the corner outlets, depending on the depth of the grain in the storage.

The engineers constructed a small laboratory storage to test the exhaust outlets and a 16-inch diameter air duct was placed in the storage 2 feet above the bin floor.

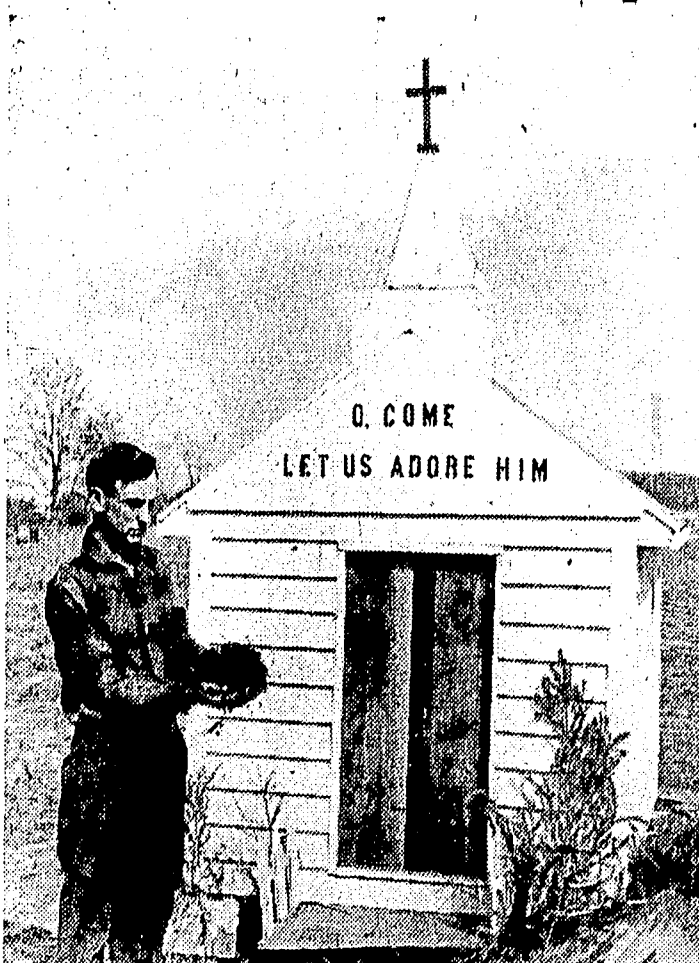

By varying the amount of air released by the corner outlets, the engineers found they could bring about uniform air distribution throughout the entire bin with depths of grain varying from 2 to 8 feet over the circular duct. The exhaust outlets were adjustable in size.

Many grain storages are not being used to full capacity because of the limit of the depth of grain that may be dried over duct systems placed on the floor. Eight feet is the usual limit of grain depth without using excessive power for drying.

More tests must be completed before any recommendations can be made for using this exhaust outlet system on a large scale, Avery said.

All of us sense our dependence on the soil in the food we eat, many of the clothes we wear and in our houses. The soil will benefit from man's wise care, or it will suffer because of his ignorance or greed. Users Should Be Cautious With Present Insecticides

Some insecticides and weed killers now available commercially are extremely poisonous and should be treated as potential human killers, a Michigan department of health physician warned.

Dr. F. S. Leeder said just a taste of some insecticides and herbicides is enough to kill an average-size adult. The same holds true for some chemicals used for killing rodents and fungi.

"As plant and animal pests become more resistant to DDT and other older control materials," Dr. Leeder explained, "the anti-pest chemicals must be made more deadly if they are to do their job."

"Since they are now stronger than ever before, follow directions very carefully whenever using these chemicals," Dr. Leeder advised.

He said farmers should be especially careful because as an occupational group they probably are exposed to more potentially harmful materials than any other major class of workers.

Dr. Leeder said that in addition to pesticides there are other chemical preparations used routinely in most homes today which can be deadly in amounts of one ounce or less. These include most disinfectants, some dry cleaner solvents, some drain cleaners, moth repellents, rust removers, radiator cleaners and indelible inks.

Deadly in amounts between one ounce and one quart are cosmetics, drugs, polishes, window cleaners, stain removers, lighter fluid and bleaches.

Dr. Leeder pointed out that accidental poisonings took the lives of 87 Michigan residents during 1956.

Killing Trees Can Be Quick

Woodland owners looking for short cuts in killing trees can do the job in about 30 seconds per tree with a portable power girdler.

Maurice W. Day of Michigan State university's Dunbar forest experiment station made the time measurement when he tested the power girdler along with chemical methods of killing trees.

With interest growing in improving forest stands, woodland owners are looking for quick ways to kill undesirable trees.

The mechanical method was the fastest in point of time per tree but girdled trees take 2 to 3 years longer to die than chemically-killed trees. This machine makes a U-shaped cut about one inch wide and 1 1/2 inches deep around the tree. It won't work well with stump sprout clumps that are close together.

One of the chemical methods tested by Day has much to recommend it, especially with trees over 5 inches in diameter. Using an axe, Day made cuts around the tree to form a sort of frill. A 2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5-T combination "brushkiller" was mixed with diesel oil and sprayed in the frill with a hand sprayer. This operation takes a little over one minute per tree.

Day also found that this same solution could be sprayed on the lower 18 to 24 inches of the trunk and exposed roots in less time than the frill method. This takes more spray and as a result probably would work better with small trees.

Every woman should hang on to her youth, but not while he's driving a car.

Poultry Raisers Receive Honors

Mrs. Vito Capitani of Mason and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore M. Ernest of Stockbridge have won membership in a national honor club for poultry flock owners sponsored by the Moorman Manufacturing Company, Quincy, Ill. They were among members of the feed company's second annual "Beat the Experts" Egg club in 18 states.

Winners' laying flocks produced each dozen eggs during a 60-day record-keeping period with an average of 5 lb or less total feed.

The national average is 8 lb of feed per dozen eggs. Poultry experts say that 5 1/2 lb is "very good" and that 5 lb is "outstanding." Winners' superior care, feeding and management of their laying hens enabled them to "beat the experts."

Vaccinate At 16 Weeks

All laying flocks should be vaccinated against Newcastle disease and infectious bronchitis before they are 16 weeks old, according to S. C. Schmitt, Michigan State university poultry specialist.

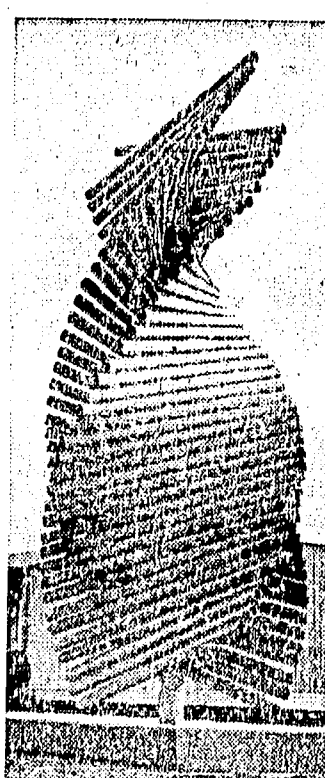

On most Michigan farms, chicks should be vaccinated against Newcastle disease when between 2 and 4 weeks of age and bronchitis vaccination along with a Newcastle booster should be given at 16 weeks, he said.

But, if either bronchitis or chronic respiratory disease have bothered growing birds in the neighborhood, M. H. Avery, county agricultural agent, suggests vaccination against Newcastle and bronchitis at 4 weeks. Boosters with both vaccines should be given when the chicks reach 16 weeks.

Wheat Battle Looms

The 11% lower price supports for 1958 on wheat recently announced may have a profound effect on government farm policy for years to come. It is expected to sharpen up the coming free-for-all battle on basic farm policy. That will be a 3-cornered fight between rigid supports, unlimited flexible supports and the Grange's commodity-by-commodity approach to farm policy.

St. Lawrence river is ice-free barely 8 months of the year, yet it moves about 1/3 of Canada's foreign trade then.

PIPE THIS!—Artistry in water pipes adds up to an attractive display on the fairgrounds in Hanover, Germany, site of the International German Industries Fair. Arranged in a high double spiral, the pipes are made of "Eternit," a widely used artificial slate.

Garden Tools Require Care

Proper care of garden tools can make them last longer and work better.

Rakes should be hung up, out of the reach of small children. Keeping them inside will prevent them from rusting.

Hoes, in addition to being hung up inside, should be dried before storing, and if wet, they should be oiled with an oily rag to keep them from rusting. This oil will come off, or "sour," in a few strokes in the soil.

A few strokes with the paint brush will identify tools, in case someone borrows them or they are left.

Moisture Content Is Key To Ensilage Fermentation

The right moisture content of ensilage is essential for good fermentation, according to S. T. Dexter of the farm crops department at Michigan State university.

Silage should be damp enough to pack well and keep air out. However, it should not be so wet that a lot of juice is squeezed from the silo.

With proper fermentation, good legumes make better silage than weeds and grasses. It is often a good idea to cut the crop before it is mature enough to go in the hay mow, said Dexter.

Since immature alfalfa or clover is too damp to be put in the silo when cut, most farmers will it in the field, Dexter explained that forage in bunker silos need not be as dry as most of that which goes into upright silos.

Because of the weight from above, lots of pressure is exerted on the bottom of a silo. To allow for this, silage on the bottom should be drier than that in the middle.

In the top third of an upright silo, forage should be comparatively damp to insure good packing and settling. The top load can be very damp. Weeds and other waste materials can be put on the very top as they will probably spoil.

With forage that is too damp, corn or cob meal, sugar beet pulp and other fine materials can be used to soak up excess juices. Dried molasses will also do the job.

A chemical called sodium metabisulphite helps to control silage odors but does not prevent drainage of juice.

somewhere. And the painting will not weaken the handles, as carving or burning does.

Most wheelbarrows now have ball-bearing wheels that are sealed and need no lubrication. Wheelbarrow handles can be painted or varnished with a mixture of half turpentine and half raw linseed oil for their protection.

Rubber tires on wheelbarrows should be kept inflated for easier pushing and longer life of the tires.

House Vote against Acreage Reserve Threatens Balance of Farm Program

By CARL COLLIN

The house vote to kill the acreage reserve part of the soil bank program at the end of 1957 really leaves federal farm programs in the air. The halting showed 154 Democrats and 38 Republicans against the program. For continuing the program were 141 Republicans and 46 Democrats. So actually the proposal to end the acreage reserve won by only 5 votes.

Where we go from here is a big question. How the senate opinion stacks up on the program is anyone's guess.

The status of the 1958 wheat program is now mighty uncertain. Growers are scheduled to vote June 20 on marketing quotas. Furthermore, it won't be too long before farmers will have to decide what acreage they will plant to wheat for harvest next year.

Local ASC committeemen have to start signing up farmers for soil bank participation several weeks ahead of planting time.

Secretary Benson now has promised to submit a legislative draft of his new long-range farm program this session of congress. This is a change in his plans. He had intended to present specific recommendations next year. But house agriculture committee members complained that his recent speeches and in hearings before congressional groups, were too general. They want him to spell out a definite program for them to consider.

How much of the vote against continuance of the acreage reserve was just politics and how much represented a "revolt" against spending large sums for farm programs in another question that will have to be answered later on. Economy certainly is one reason. One report says the house action was significant because of the forces behind it. It was largely a victory for city congressmen, some from both parties, who have grown tired of voting big sums for farm programs, programs Secretary Benson says are not working any way.

The vote points up the split in the farm bloc, once so potent. It's the second time in the last few weeks that farm legislation had suffered a setback. The other was the defeat of the new corn stabilization program after farm-minded congressmen had fought among themselves over the proposal.

Bitter arguments are ahead over what new farm legislation will be. That's for sure. We have reached a crossroads in our government policy for agriculture. It's Secretary Benson's belief that government's role in agriculture should be reduced greatly from present levels. He would have federal aid limited to research, education, sales promotion, market building, credit, promotion of soil and water conservation and price supports designed to prevent disastrous drops in prices. He will get a lot of support for these ideas in congress. And he will also get some terrific opposition. Without high price supports the economics of farming will change. It will be rough going.

Soil Stewardship Week

Most local Granges in Michigan are making special observance of soil stewardship week, May 26-June 1. Those entrusted with the care of the soil, one of the nation's most important resources, should rededicate themselves to their responsibility not to waste it. Civilization depends upon the soil.

Smokey Says:

A carelessly tossed cigarette can cause terrible damage.

ing for many thousands of small farming units.

Apparently there's no thought now to eliminate the conservation reserve part of the soil bank plan. That's the long-range part of the program. Even the economy-minded house appropriations committee has moved to continue it. Despite its disappointing start, most farm leaders in congress are in favor of it, think it's a good deal for the long haul. It's basic purpose, they believe, is to conserve the land rather than to cut production.

Just 7 million acres were signed up under the conservation reserve program this year. Eventually and somehow it's hoped that around 25 million acres of cropland will be retired under the program. But even if this goal is reached, production won't be reduced in direct proportion to the acreage retired. That's because so much of the land put under the conservation reserve is not too productive. A large part of it is marginal land. Higher payments will have to be paid to attract better land. But such an added cost is not in the mill now.

A record large late spring strawberry crop is in prospect this year. National production is now forecast at almost 222.5 million pounds. That's an increase of 39% over 1956 and 11% above the previous high output set in 1955.

The strawberry crop outlook here in Michigan is good if it can get by now without a killing frost. If weather conditions are anywhere near normal they will be safe. But the way the weather has been acting up all over the country it's hard to tell how far from "normal" growing conditions will be.

The Michigan crop this year is forecast at 40.6 million pounds, up 7 million pounds from last year. This output would be 21% above 1956 and 30% above average. It's going to take some good marketing and selling on the part of growers and handlers to keep strawberry prices decent this year.

There's a good asparagus crop coming along. It'll be 12% bigger than last year. Nationally, the crop is a big one, too.

Tranquilizing drugs don't work on baby chicks to help them from getting excited. Above a certain concentration in the ration, the drug has a slight inhibiting effect on the growth of the birds.

USDA economists say hog prices this summer will be the highest in 3 years but that prices will drop sharply in the fall.

Michigan winter wheat yield is now expected to equal the 30-bushel per acre record of last year. Total output, however, will be about 7% lower than a year ago.

A 30-second dip in a solution of a broad-range antibiotic called oxytetracycline will more than triple the shelf life of vegetables. The same substance injected into livestock before slaughter will extend the freshness of beef, lamb and pork.

Just remember that May showers bring June flowers.

If Mother Earth has digested enough of this rain the county tractor and plowing contest will be at the Ken Myers farm 5 miles east of Williamston on Williamston road Saturday. The event was rained off a week ago and the soil hasn't dried out yet.

Mason's Chamber of Commerce will stage another meeting June 10. So far 67 business and professional folks have signed up. The Chamber takes the place of bootstraps others use to pull themselves up with.

Those who attended the Mason FFA parents dinner last week seemed to enjoy the chicken barbeque. But I have it straight from one mother who should know, that the chicken was spread over the charcoal in a frigid condition. It seems the boys had dressed and cut up the birds a couple of weeks earlier and hadn't thought to thaw them out until just before the dinner.

Peter Cavanaugh, assistant campaign director of the hospital fund, is a personal friend of Billy Graham. As boys they were neighbors in the North Carolina hills. The evangelist is a top golfer, even professional caliber, according to Pete. We've got some good golfers right here in Mason, but frankly, most of them would be mighty poor evangelists.

Arvide North, Most Illustrious Grand Master, Royal and Select Masters of Michigan, will be honored at a banquet at Holt Masonic temple Saturday, June 1. The Mason man was elected to the state's highest Masonic post Saturday at Muskegon. Arvide has a string of Masonic affiliations including Mason, Ingham, Leslie, Lansing, the Michigan council, Illinois council and Inverness council.

The joke was on President Diem of Vietnam in Mason last Thursday morning. Although the welcome mat was out, he never showed up, and probably never expected to anyway. A foreigner with 12 letters in his name was scheduled to visit the federal agricultural offices in Mason. The same day President Diem was scheduled to arrive in East Lansing. It just figured that the president would be coming to Mason. We got the tip from Sidney Grayson who picked up the office gossip Wednesday night. We grabbed the camera and in the highest journalistic ethics tipped off the Lansing State Journal roving reporter. Sure enough, the foreigners were at the federal building. Only instead of the president, it was Abdoerachman, an Indonesian government official, and his party. It was still a good story, but somehow Abdoerachman's visit was anti-climatic.

No man can climb out beyond the limitations of his own character.

Ingham Herds Respond To DHIA Test Program

Whether the cow tests were recorded by IBM or by longhand, it didn't make much difference to at least 2 Ingham Dairy Herd Improvement associations during April. All herds showed good milk and butterfat averages.

Thirty-two dairy herds on IBM averaged over 40 lb of fat in April. Two averaged 54 lb each. They were Kenneth Kurtz, 26 grade Holsteins, 1,470 lb milk and 32.2 lb fat; and O. J. Smith & Son, 28 grade Holsteins, 1,260 lb milk; and O. J. Smith & Son, 28 grade Holsteins, 1,290 lb milk.

Herds testing 45 lb fat were: Kenneth Bibbins, 22 registered Jerseys, 1,050 lb milk; Raymond Powell, 28 grade Holsteins, 1,170 lb milk; Platt & Wilcox, 40 registered Holsteins, 1,200 lb milk; Davis & Ellsworth, 22 grade Holsteins, 1,170 lb milk; Paul Scherer, 24 grade Holsteins, 1,020 lb milk; and H. Jorgenson, 55 grade Holsteins, 1,140 lb milk; Maurice Felton, 45 registered Holsteins, 1,080 lb milk; and Harold Witt, 45 registered Holsteins, 1,170 lb milk.

Ingham No. 6 Reports
Ten herds in the new Ingham No. 6 Dairy Herd Improvement association averaged over 30 lb fat in April.
The 16 registered Holsteins owned by William Freiermuth were high with 45.6 lb fat and 1,164.2 lb milk. Avery Looks to the Future And Predicts Farm Prices

By M. H. AVERY

Insects—A few insects are beginning to show up on the farms. Last week we visited 2 alfalfa fields with Ray Jones of the entomology department at Michigan State university and found considerable spittle bugs, especially in the new seedlings. We sprayed a plot on the farm of Bob Byrum in Onondaga township. Forest Anderson sprayed 2 fields on his farm near Dansville. We will report later on the success of these plots. The young spittle bugs are just beginning to emerge. By the time you read this it will be too late to spray this year.

James says the insect population will depend considerable on the weather and if the weather remains cool and wet as last year it will keep down the population of the destructive insects.

Weed Control—If the weather should stay cool and wet as it is as I write these notes, it would be well for farmers to plan on using a chemical weed control spray on corn this year. We are recommending one pound of 2,4-D Ester just as the corn comes through the ground as the most satisfactory spray and time for spraying corn to save cultivation.

Outlook—Cash wheat prices are expected to decline this month and continue downward through June. The difference between the support price and the market price will, no doubt, be less this year than last, due to an expanded export program. In Michigan the low rate will be around $2. A county-breakdown will probably be announced in June.

Wheat prices will rise after the harvesting season and the average return to farmers for this season will be about the same as last year—around the $2 support price. Producers should note that a referendum will be June 20 to approve or disapprove the 1958 allotments.

Onion prices are not expected to hold above last year's level. Acreage of late spring onions is 65% above a year ago and early summer acreage one-third up.

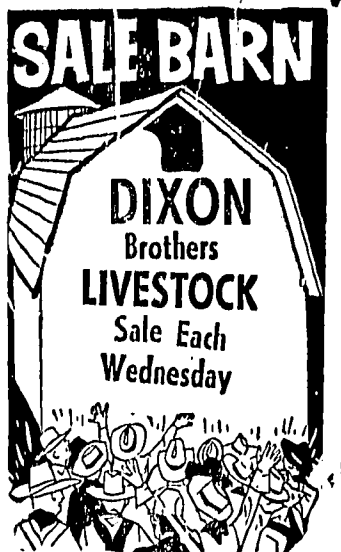

Don't look for much improvement in the potato prices this year. Pea beans, according to intention reports, Michigan farmers will plant more acres of pea beans this year. They will then continue in heavy supply. Support prices are down 9 cents on this year's crop.

Farm prices for soybeans for the next month or so are expected to remain at about the same level as now; though there is a large supply of beans on hand at the present time, strong demand for crushing and exporting is expected to hold the price on the 1956 record crop. The 1957 crop will, no doubt, compare very favorably with the 1956.

Corn acreage is expected to be the smallest in 70 years in the United States. However, corn yields have been increasing and

In addition increased plantings of sorghum grains and barley will tend to offset any cut-back corn production.

This means cheap feed for livestock men.
Hog prices for slaughter should reach a peak in late June or early July. Prices through the summer should remain above the average for last summer which was $16. Prospects for an increase in cattle prices this summer have been hurt. An increased cattle marketing program is indicated by the number of cattle and calves on foot in the 13 leading states as of April 1. Ten per cent fewer steers were sold for slaughter of the major mid-west livestock markets and producers intend to market 13% fewer fed cattle in May than they did last year.

Holstein Cows Make Records

In tests supervised by Michigan State university, several Ingham Holstein cows have set high records.

Twin Maple Rag Apple Ormsby, owned by Harry E. Covert & Son, Leslie, produced 17,034 lb of milk and 626 lb of butterfat as a 5-year-old. In the same herd Twin Maple Pieve Renown produced 14,720 lb of milk and 692 lb of butterfat as a 2-year-old.

Fred Graf, Stockbridge, had a producer in June Creamette Triune. She yielded 19,075 lb of milk and 672 lb of butterfat as a 10-year-old.

Leslie PTA Installs New Officers

Mrs. Moore Brownlee was the installing officer for the 1957-58 slate of officers at the last meeting of the school year for Leslie PTA. It was also historical night and old textbooks, school annuals and other memoirs were on display.

Retiring president, Leslie Vince, was praised by the incoming president, Elroy Hanks, for having greatly increased the membership and average attendance per meeting during his 2 years of presidency, of having inspired other officers to work more diligently and to attend meetings on the county and state level. He congratulated Mr. Vince on being the only president of the Leslie group to serve 2 terms, and presented him with his past president's pin. Mr. Vince, in turn, presented Mr. Hanks with a president's pin and wished him success in his tenure of office.

Mrs. Hanks and Mrs. Glenn Rieck were appointed delegates to the county and state PTA gatherings.

Mrs. Claude Smith, a former president of the Leslie group, was program chairman and divided the number into 2 groups for a spellbound with the retiring president and the incoming one as captives. An old-fashioned speller was used, but words had to be spelled backward.

Plans for future programs were discussed, after which refreshments were served by the fifth and sixth grade mothers with Mrs. John Ingalls, Mrs. Charles Lay and Mrs. Duane Phelps in charge.

Miss Weigman's room was to have received the trophy for best parental attendance for the year but due to the absence of the person in charge, the presentation will have to be made at the first meeting of next year.

Water Service To Be Extended

Leslie village council decided to extend water service to Blair street at last week's meeting, and will ask for prices for digging the ditch for the water main.

Millard Taylor, representing the Leslie Improvement Association, appeared before the council to ask if they would contribute toward summer band concerts in Leslie, if the concerts would be sponsored by the Leslie Improvement Association and the high school, as well. Jerry Dawson, band instructor of the Leslie high school, also attended the meeting, telling members of the council how such a plan could be put in operation.

Acknowledgement of the order has been received by the council for the sewer gate to be installed at the manhole nearest the sewer disposal plant. At a previous meeting, Ray Smith of Ayers, Lewis, Norris and May, consultant engineers, had recommended not only the sewer gate but also a third overflow structure so that excessive heavy rain storms would not overtax the facilities of the sewer disposal plant. Meade Brothers' estimate of $150 for the overflow structure and $200 for installing the sewer gate were accepted by the council.

Discussion of the Summer's construction work was carried on but due to the fact that the Ferris company had withdrawn its proposal, it was decided further study should be given the proposition.

Village President Marvin L. Pixley and members of the council will meet at the sewage disposal plant Tuesday evening, May 21, for conference. They will then adjourn to the GAR hall for a third reading of the sewage ordinance.

Group Schedules Monthly Meets

At a recent meeting of the Leslie Improvement Association, President Don Lamont expressed confidence in the plan for one meeting each month on a scheduled basis, with committees meeting on call.

Lamont cited the work done by Harold Hamilton and his industrial committee in arranging for the purchase of 5 acres of land on which to locate industrial plants which might come to Leslie. The group voted to support Hamilton's move and to commend

MICHIGAN BELL

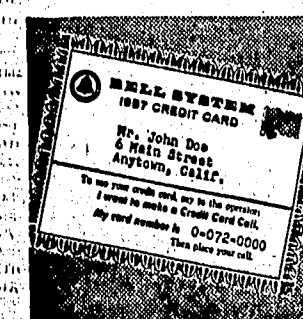

TELEPHONE lines

"MOM, can I stay on Tommy's for lunch?" Just a simple telephone message, but because of it Mom knows just where her youngster is. The telephone makes it easier to keep track of the children. Remind them to call you if they're going to be late getting home from school or if they stop off at a friend's house. And, Mom, you can check on Junior's whereabouts just by calling the neighbor down the street. Why not let your telephone help you all it can? It's always there, ready to serve you whenever you need it.

TELEPHONE OFFICES

on wheels are being used in a number of fast-growing communities. Eight of these large trailers, carrying complete dialing equipment, are now in use. They were wheeled into rapidly built-up towns where the demand for telephone service increased faster than anyone could foresee. They serve up to 1,200 customers apiece. These trailers were put into operation in a matter of weeks. Michigan Bell was one of the first telephone companies to use this ingenious mobile central office to help provide service until telephone buildings can be enlarged to house permanent equipment.

BELL SYSTEM Credit Cards are now more convenient than ever. They make it so easy to telephone Long Distance when you're away from home. Just say to the operator: "I want to make a Credit Card call. My card number is..." Your call goes through and is charged to your own telephone. You'll find it comes in mighty handy when you're traveling or visiting in another's home. So, if you don't already have a Bell System Credit Card, call our Business Office and ask for one. Credit Cards are furnished free of charge, of course.
