T'was Happy Halloween

Mason Kiwanians entertained area youngsters Monday night at one of the best attended Halloween parties under perfect weather conditions.

It was the annual treat but no trick social event. Over one thousand costumed youngsters showed up at the athletic field for costume judging, games and refreshments. Over at the high school the senior high youngsters tripped the light fantastic at a Kiwanis-sponsored dance and a large crowd showed up at the junior high for a similar affair.

For the most part Mason youngsters lived up to their part of the bargain by refraining from the vandalism which plagued many other communities. There were a few, though, who did not get the word or ignored the word.

Manager System Advocated in City

John Patriarche, East Lansing city manager, urged Mason Kiwanians and Mason city council guests Tuesday night to consider adopting a council-city manager form of government for Mason. He spoke at the weekly Kiwanis meeting at All Saints Lutheran church.

Patriarche, city manager in East Lansing for 18 years, is a former president of the State Association of City Managers and is a member of the Ingham county board of supervisors.

He said there is a definite trend towards the city manager form of government throughout the world. He cited the popularity of this type of government in this country and Canada and pointed to the existence of city managers in other countries.

The East Lansing city manager pointed out that as a community grows so does its problems. And that there are more problems than a part-time council can handle.

He stressed that a city council can better govern when it has a paid "leg man" to help get things done. Ideally, he said, a city manager and a city council must work closely on matters of policy and administration. He added that a manager cannot properly do his job if this concept of city government does not meet with the approval of councilmen and the community in general.

Attending as guests of the Kiwanians were Mayor Gilson Pearsall and Councilmen Vaughan Snook, Dr. R. R. Robbins and John Hamlin.

Horn was only recently advanced to the rank of sergeant. He was in 1st Bn., 23rd Infantry division,

Warrant Sought Against Motorist For Friday's Fatal Auto Accident

City Fire Fighters Hustle

Fires this past week have kept Mason volunteer firemen hustling.

Damage to the medical offices of Dr. A.V. Smith and Dr. Milton Bergeon at 116 Sycamore street is estimated at about $3,000 to $5,000, according to Dave Stone, Mason's assistant fire chief.

The fire broke out Thursday afternoon about 5:30 p.m. at the back of the building. Firemen surmise the blaze was caused by cigarette ashes thrown in trash barrels located at the rear of the building.

Dr. Smith is in Florida while Dr. Bergeon has set up temporary offices at the former offices used by Dr. Donald Cairns on W. Ash street.

During the fire Robert Ingham, fire chief, was slightly injured when he fell while climbing over a falling onto the house roof. Ingham was

Mason Boys, Stolen Car Are Found

A car stolen from a parking lot behind the Mason Bakery on W. Maple street Monday morning, was recovered Monday night in Racine, Wisconsin, Mason police were advised Tuesday.

Racine police picked up 2 Mason juveniles who are alleged to have stolen the vehicle which is owned by W. G. Buchman, 302 S. State street, Mason.

Chief Tom Stolz of the Mason police and Undersheriff Wells Moses of the Ingham county sheriff's department left for Racine Tuesday to pick up the car and the boys for a return trip to Mason. They are expected back tonight.

FATALITY CAR--Mrs. Kenneth Parker of Lansing was killed in this car Friday night at the US-127 and M-36 interchange within the Mason city limits. Four others in the car were hospitalized.

Several Questions Facing Ingham County Electorate

Mason voters will go to the polls next Tuesday in the 1966 congressional elections about 3,000 strong, if all the 2,998 persons registered to vote exercise their franchise.

Only one local issue faces Mason voters: whether or not to approve the annexation of 30 acres of land just west of Mason on the Vevay township line into the city. Owners of the land, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Corbin, are requesting the annexation.

Three county and state issues are attracting considerable pre-election consideration by the voters. They include a proposal for the county to borrow $9.2 million for improvements and additions at the Ingham Medical hospital, a fixed millage issue and the question of whether the voting age should

There are 2 townships adjacent to Mason which will be deciding whether or not sale of liquor by the glass will be permitted. Vevay and Delhi townships both have the liquor issue on their ballots. Both townships received liquor by the glass petitions from prospective restaurant owners considering locations in the 2 townships.

The addition of a 4th judge to the Ingham circuit court bench is another issue of great interest to the electors. Four

Hit-Run Driver Escapes, 5 Persons Hospitalized

For months motorists were forced to drive through a most congested construction area north of Mason and no accident resulting in a fatality occurred. Just 2 weeks after the official opening of the new US-127 bypass, an auto crash resulted which took the life of a Lansing woman and seriously injured several passengers in one car.

Dead is Mrs. Kenneth (Dorothy) Parker, 64, of 6300 Somerset. She died of multiple injuries shortly after being admitted to Mason General hospital Friday night, October 28.

The scene of the accident was at the new US-127-M-36 interchange in the east bound lane of M-36. A witness at the scene said a truck sped past him through a stop sign on the South exit ramp to Mason crashing into the car driven by Jesse Sonier, 66, of 323 Filey street, Lansing, who was driving east on M-36.

Driver of the truck was placed in an Ingham county sheriff's patrol car and fled while officers attempted to free an injured woman passenger trapped in the automobile, Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore said.

Preadmore said the truck involved was owned by the Industrial Paint company of Jackson and that a company official told deputies he had no knowledge of his truck being in use at the time of the crash.

The sheriff intends to ask the prosecuting attorney for a warrant for the truck driver's arrest today, or as soon as his department completes its investigation.

Others in the accident, all passengers in the car driven by Sonier were his wife Nellie, who was transferred from Mason General to St. Lawrence where she was admitted to the intensive care unit and listed in very serious condition today; Mrs. Parker; her husband, Kenneth, 65; and Mrs. Rose Crane, 80, of 3216 N. Logan street, Lansing.

Sonier is still a patient at Mason General listed in fair condition. Kenneth Parker and Rose Crane have been released.

Besides her husband Mrs. Parker is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Donald Hartig of Holt, 3 sons, Russell of Mason and Richard and Leroy, both of Lansing; 3 sisters, Mrs. Fern Althouse and Mrs. Martha Kole, both of Lansing and Mrs. Lou Shoemaker of Pewamo; a brother, Wilbur Cole of Houghton Lake; 14 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

sions, general meetings and a banquet.

Boyd, vice-president of Lansing Area Chamber of Commerce; McPherson Browning of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith; Mrs. Winifred Olds of WILX television; Max Murningham, mayor of Lansing; Frank Angelo managing editor of Detroit Free Press; Nelida Simons, home extension agent from Puerto Rico, to mention only a few.

Ball, Chains Hold Rural Girl Captive

Young Miss Faye Camp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Camp of Stockbridge, has been receiving lots of teasing from her classmates and friends since last Wednesday.

Faye's mom, editor of the Stockbridge Town Crier, brought home a leg iron complete with ball and chain as part of a Halloween costume she planned to wear at a community Halloween party complete with an Ingham county jail inmate's garb. Curiosity got the best of Faye and she tried on the leg manacle, much to her dismay.

One thing was forgotten--a key to release the device. The leg iron weighed some 25 pounds and kept Faye in one spot for over 2 hours.

During these two hours sheriff's deputies were searching high and low for the all-important key. It was finally located at Detective Captain Versie Babcock's home and rushed 20 miles out to the Camp residence where an anxious mother and subdued daughter welcomed officers.

The story of Faye's predicament spread throughout the state and the United States. Newspapers as far away as Phoenix, Arizona found the captive's tale amusing and passed it on to their readers.

WOE IS SHE--Faye Camp, a 15-year-old sophomore at Stockbridge high school, was the prisoner of a 25-pound ball and chain for 2 hours before the device's key could be found.

JACK WARREN says: Let's talk FACTS . . . not FICTION

"With crime in Ingham County on the increase with long delays in getting to trial being commonplace, it's time to talk FACTS and time to stop the FICTION."

One candidate tells you he has "firsthand experience" with divorce cases.

BUT the records show his total divorce experience during the past 17 years is limited to 7 cases!

The same candidate talks of "juveniles" and crime

BUT, what he doesn't tell you is that the PROBATE JUDGE and not the Circuit Judge HANDLES juveniles.

JACK WARREN doesn't engage in half-truths. JACK WARREN in 17 years has commended or defended over 291 circuit court cases, more than five times the cases of his opponents. JACK WARREN has handled 81 circuit court jury cases - more than five times the cases of his opponents.

'Vietnam Peace Long Way Off' Chamberlain

"Peace in Vietnam is a long way off, even after the opposed forces face each other across the negotiating table."

That is the opinion of Congressman Charles E. Chamberlain of East Lansing, Michigan's representative from the 6th district.

He voiced in an interview while his mobile office was in Mason last Friday.

"I share President Johnson's hopes and yearning for peace", Congressman Chamberlain said, "as does everyone else in the United States. I hope that his mission will be a complete success."

But Congressman Chamberlain believes that LBJ's timing was off -- that he should have made the trip after the 1966 elections, not before. He believes that the president's trip planned just before the elections had political overtones which will bring criticism.

What do you think of the Manila conference and what do you think came out of it?" Congressman Chamberlain was asked.

"It will be some time before we know if any success came as a result of the meeting in Manila", he replied. "I caution everyone against being too optimistic about an early solution in Vietnam."

The congressman recalled that after the Korean armistice and negotiations began the 2 sides met 575 times, $10 billion were spent after the negotiations began, and during that time a million men were drafted into service, 9,000 Americans were killed after the negotiations began and as many wounded as before the armistice.

"In Vietnam," he said, "we are dealing with a ruthless system. Even though we do get negotiations it will be a long, hard row. We are in for a lot of difficulty and hard decisions."

What does winning the war in Vietnam mean?

The congressman explained it in this manner:

Winning means disrupting and destroying the ability of the Vietcong forces that despite whatever additions and support may be infiltrated from outside South Vietnam the Vietcong are unable to mount sustained or organized attacks on South Vietnamese populated areas; and so that such sporadic acts of terrorism or attack as occur can be contained and dealt with by Vietnamese troops or police personnel.

Congressman Chamberlain believes that victory would certainly mean the gradual reduction of military incidents in South Vietnam to a point that would permit an orderly sequence of free elections and the establishment of a permanent type of South Vietnamese government based on popular choice.

But such a condition, Chamberlain pointed out, may not mean the immediate end of all American presence in Vietnam, but it would certainly permit a gradual reduction in the numbers of American combat troops required there and it should also mean that the extent and character of any continuing American presence there would be determined by agreement between the United States and the duly elected Vietnamese government.

For a long time Congressman Chamberlain has been urging more action to deny supplies to North Vietnam. In a recent speech from the floor of the House of Representatives he produced a chart indicating by country of registry the free world ship arrivals in North Vietnam between January 1966 and August 1966. They included 40 ships of United Kingdom registry, 7 to Greek, 1 of Italian, 1 of Cypriot and 3 of Malta, for a total of 58.

NEVER UNDERESTIMATE THE POWER OF A WOMAN

By DICK LYON

The automobile manufacturers have long recognized that the "little woman" looms pretty big when it comes to deciding on the family automobile and most modern body styles and interiors are aimed at satisfying her taste.

The surveyors got some shocks recently though when they brought their marketing data up to date with a poll of female drivers. First off, the gals told them they didn't like their advertising - too many pictures of pretty girls and too few ads explaining the advantage of the car - which makes some sense.

A real surprise was that most preferred FEWER style changes, higher seats, more built-in safety, doing away with the drive shaft hump, bigger glove boxes and - I knew there must be a feminine angle here somewhere - more places to hang things!

A few came up with a suggestion that a lot of we-he-men could put to good use. They wanted a set of instructions covering "howtofix it" for such things as flooded carburetors and other minor mechanical problems.

Many proposed short instruction courses for ladies so they could understand the workings of their cars and look after them better.

Quality dealer service departments welcome questions from lady drivers regarding their cars and usually make extra efforts to win and keep the confidence and trust of their female customers. See you next Wednesday.

City Police Investigate Assault Case

Mason police are investigating an apparent case of assault and battery on an 18 year old youth while he sat in his car parked in the 100 block of E. Sycamore street last Saturday night.

Albert Clark, 18, told officers he was sitting alone in his car when suddenly the car door was opened and someone hit him about the head and shoulders. Police quoted Clark as saying that he did not remember anything from that time until the next morning.

He told police a watch and a pair of brown loafers were missing from the car and that a hub cap also was missing.

Police said the assault took place sometime between 10 and 11 p.m. Saturday. They received the report of the attack at 8:30 a.m. of October 30.

Howell Posts 4th Win in Row

HOWELL--Howell High beat Haslett Friday night because Howell has a better football team. Howell did not win because it played inspired ball. Howell did not win because it was able to come through in clutch situations. Howell won because it was able to score two touchdowns and Haslett didn't score any.

No team is up for every game and Howell was flying so high against Gabriels the week before that some degree of letdown was inevitable. The result was a lack-lustre performance which could prove beneficial in making the Highlanders get up again for next week's encounter with Mason.

In the first quarter, Howell scored after an interception by John Dukes gave Howell the ball on Haslett's 45. It took eight plays and a two yard plunge by John Dickie to provide the score. The extra point was kicked by Ken Niblock.

After this, it seemed like Howell was always on the verge of scoring, but never quite pulling it off. Still in the opening quarter, Howell threatened when Jim Walker blocked a punt and recovered the ball on the 32. Howell lost the ball when a fourth down play failed to gain the needed yard.

In the second period Howell drove to the 16 and fumbled. Later in the quarter Howell drove to the 12 and fumbled. In the third quarter Howell drove to Haslett's five where they had a first down. Yost fumbled. This drive got its substance when Pennell threw passes of 13 and 24 yards to Lubur and Don Jones.

The next time Howell got the ball, Pennell completed a 33 yard pass to Lubur which put the ball on Haslett's 35. The Highlanders drove to the 15 where Haslett held them to a fourth down. An attempted field goal by Niblock was short.

When Howell got the ball again, Howell started its sixth successive sustained drive. Nothing went drastically wrong on this one, and Howell scored its second touchdown. The conversion attempt was blocked. The drive went for 71 yards and John Dukes figured in 57 of them. He ran for 20, took a lateral after a pass for 17, and caught a pass himself for 20. (The play where he took the lateral after a pass is called a "flea flicker.")

Howell totaled 259 yards--152 rushing, 107 passing. Pennell completed five of seven passes. Pennell has the highest percentage of completions of any quarterback in the Capital Circuit.

Don Jones gained 46 yards in 10 tries. Paul Rogers made 28 in four. John Dickie went 11 in seven, missing the second half due to an injury received in the Gabriels game. Mike Yost ran 12 in eight tries. John Dukes went 24 in eight and took a pass for 20 and the touchdown.

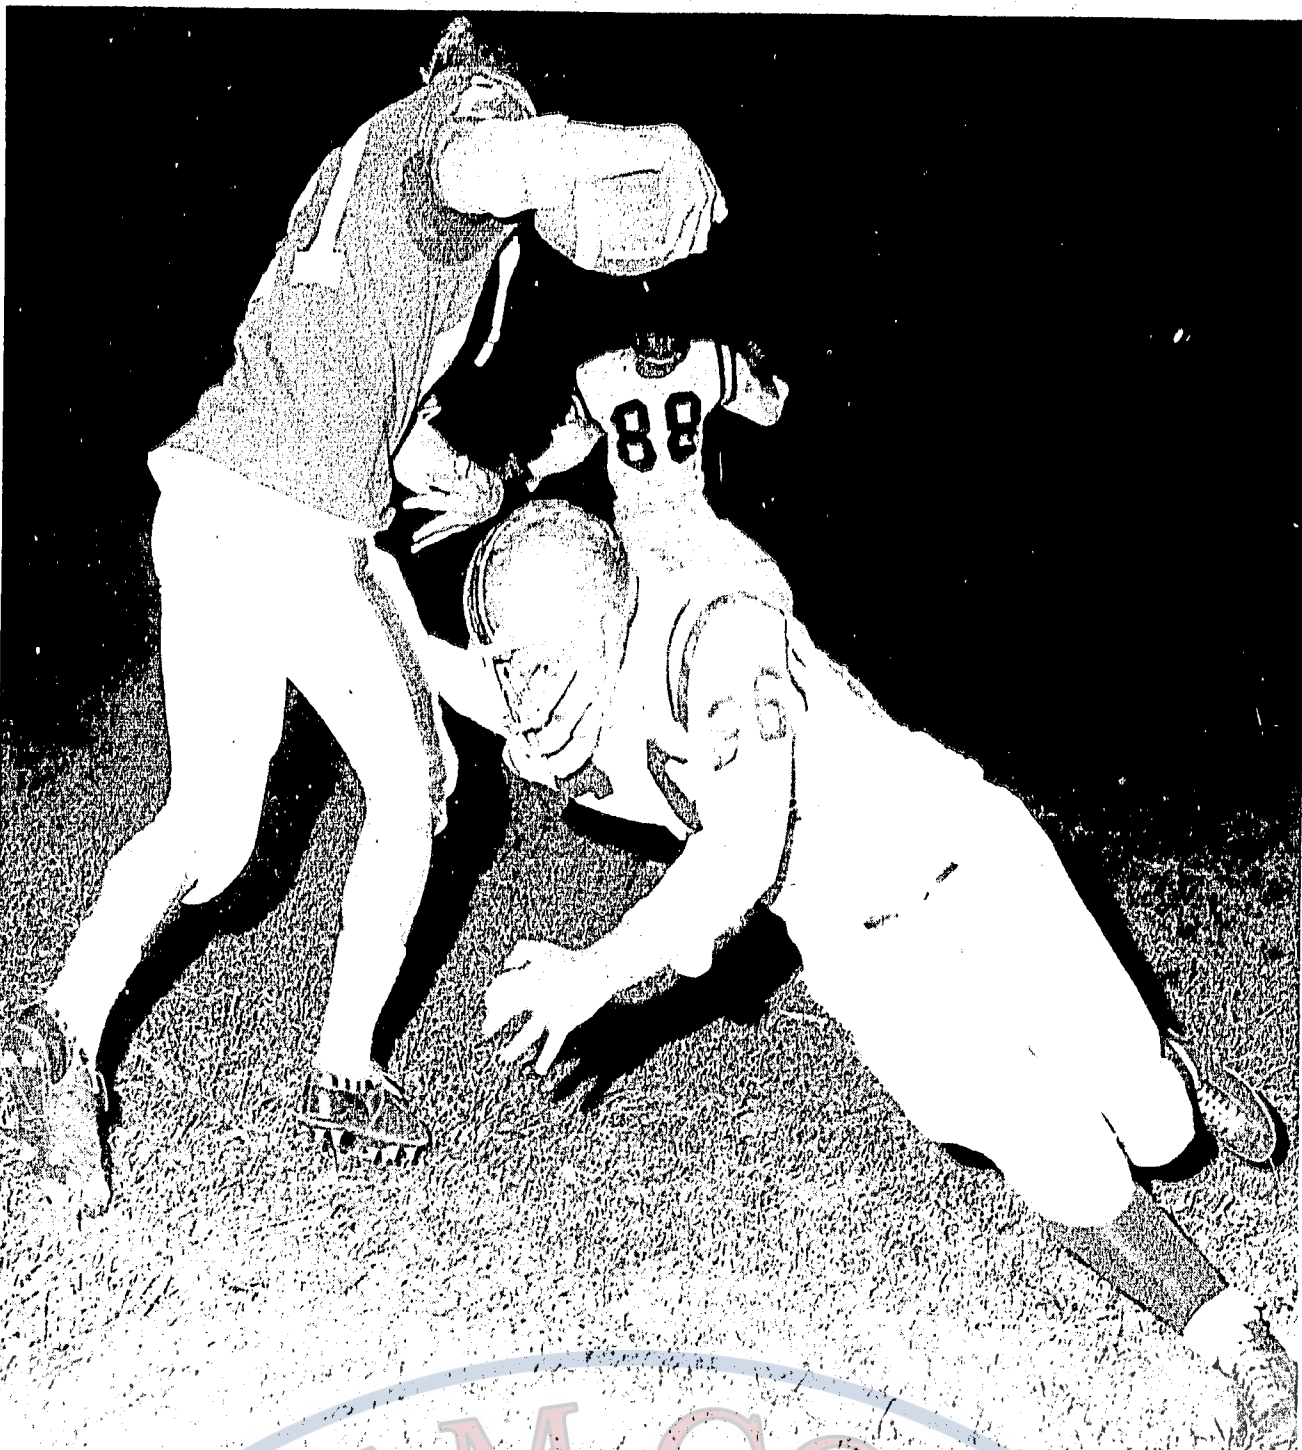

Next week's Mason game promises to be a great defensive battle. Vying for all-league honors, Rich Hahn will come up against Mason's 195 pound, six-foot, two-inch Mike Doolittle, and John Dickie will go against Steve Strickland.

Mason has shown good defense all season, holding opponents to 44 points while scoring 114. Close behind, Howell has allowed 52 points while scoring 100.

Mason has the same record as Howell, winning four, losing two in conference play. Mason lost a heart-breaker to Gabriels 13-7 on two intercepted passes.

It should be a very interesting game.

Paul Rogers was reinjured Friday night. There is still too much play in his knee. Norm Paton might see limited action against Mason.

SHEDDING TACKLERS has been one of Ron Underwood's strong points this year as Mason football fortunes took a turn for the better. Underwood did some fancy dodging to get out of the clutches of Mike Woods on this play Friday night. The Mason junior quarterback helped lead Mason past the Rams 20-6.

Mason Runs Over Holt To Enter Title Picture

Coach Bruce DePue maintains the 1966 football season started too soon and isn't lasting long enough. The Bulldogs demonstrated they are getting stronger every game by downing Holt 20-6 in spite of a slow start Friday night.

After starting the season by losing 3 of the first 4 games, the Bulldogs find themselves on a 3-game win kick with one more to go. In fact Mason still figures in the title picture providing the right combination of its prevail.

The Bulldogs' biggest if involves their final game with Howell at the Highlander field Friday night. If Mason wins that one and if Haslett beats Okemos and if Gabriels tops O'Rafferty, then Mason will be tied for the title with Gabriels and O'Rafferty.

Coach DePue and his Mason team are concentrating on the first if. The Mason-Howell clash is apt to be one of the best games of the season. Currently Mason and Howell share third place with Gabriels. Howell, like Mason, has come on strong as the season progressed.

The teams are similar. The Highlanders are big and play power football with the emphasis on the run, although both teams have come up with the pass when necessary. Both teams are made up of experienced players. Players Mason will have to watch out for are Chuck Pennell, quarterback with the best percentage of pass completions in the league; John Dukes, Don Jones and John Dickie, power runners. Not to be forgotten is understudy quarterback Paul Rogers, who makes the option play a threat whenever he is in the game.

Mason seniors making their final appearance are Steve Strickland, Ross Ginter, Dan Webster, Ron Webster, Carl Lawson, Steve Pollok, Ted Fanson, Dave Pletzke, Jim Thorburn, Paul Jancha, Ron Cook, Brian Doolittle, and Jon Shafer.

Howell has a 4-game win streak on the books while Mason has won the last 3.

Mason overcame a severe epidemic of fumbles Friday against Holt. The Bulldogs, sure ball handlers all season, bobbled the ball 6 times in the first half with 5 of the fumbles coming in the first quarter. Most of the problems came from the hard tackling and ball stripping tactics of a fired up Holt crew.

Taking advantage of the fumbles, Holt controlled the ball most of the first period and got on the score board before the period ended when Jim Douglas tossed a pass to Dorne Croley on a play covering 35 yards. The extra point try was stopped.

The Holt score settled Mason down. From there on out it was all Mason. The Bulldogs started a drive from their own 32 which ended with Russ LaMacchia recovering the final Mason fumble on the Holt 15. The next time, though, it was different. After Gary Potter recovered a Holt fumble on the Holt 30, Mason moved in to score with Ron Underwood picking up 22 yards on one run and Doug Engle picking up 7. Then Underwood sneaked in. Ginter ran the extra point.

The second half was easier for the Bulldogs. The Bulldogs received and did everything but score. Then the game broke open. Strickland went one yard for a touchdown on one drive with Ginter adding the extra point. Then Engle went over from 5 yards out to pick up another touchdown but the extra point try failed. That ended the scoring although a Ginter TD late in the game was called back on a penalty.

In the first down department, the Bulldogs picked up 16. The always tough Mason defense limited Holt to 4. Mason runners picked up 329 yards on the ground while Holt was held to 59 yards on the ground.

Fresh Win

Mason's freshmen came up with a football win Wednesday night over the Holt frosh. The Bulldogs have a date this Wednesday at Howell in the final game of the season. The frosh took the Mason junior high 20-0 Friday.

Leslie Sweeps ICL To Gain Title

Leslie wrapped up its first Ingham County league grid title Friday night and culminated a perfect season but not without going through some apprehension. The Blackhawks found Dansville tough and wound up with a 6-0 victory--a far cry from the free-scoring efforts in previous games.

The win came on a touchdown by Bob Schultz, the league's leading scorer, in the second quarter. Schultz banged off tackle for the one remaining yard after the TD was set up by Harold Hayter who crashed through the Aggie line to block a Dansville punt. Jerry Hendershot fell on the ball for Leslie.

Schultz, who has 66 points to his credit this year, was the leading rusher with 134 of Leslie's 238 yards.

The Leslie star wasn't the only ball carrier on the field at Dansville for the Aggies got 92 of their 132 yards from Jack Prince.

Both Leslie and Dansville have completed their league play. The Blackhawks will wind up their best season in history Friday night by going up against BTS, The Aggies, who finished in fourth place in the ICL with a 2-3 record, will wind up the season Friday night over at Olivet.

Hounds Scare Raiders

O'Rafferty had a difficult time with dogs again Friday night. Two weeks ago the Raiders fell before the Mason Bulldogs. Friday night they had a difficult time with the Eaton Rapids Greyhounds before finally escaping from winless Eaton Rapids 13-0.

The league-leading Raiders will have to do better than that Sunday if they are going to win the Capital Circuit title because they have a final date with Gabriels. If the Rocks win it would be all over for the Raiders. The best they could do is salvage a tie depending on the outcome of the rest of the games involving Howell, Mason and Okemos, other teams with a chance at sharing the title.

Eaton Rapids will take on Holt Friday night with neither team figuring in the mad scramble for the title.

The Raiders started fast against Eaton Rapids and then fizzled. In the first quarter Greg Keast went 12 yards to score a 6-0 lead. Then both teams turned to defense and locked themselves in the middle of the field. In the fourth quarter the O'Rafferty offense came alive long enough for Sam Migaldi to pick up a touchdown on a one-yard plunge after the Raiders had gotten help from 2 major penalties in the drive. Keast added the extra point.

Fowlerville Rocks Pirates

FOWLERVILLE--The big glads wrapped it up in the second quarter against Pinckney but had a sit by helplessly as Leslie sneaked by Dansville to keep Fowlerville in second place, the first time in five years it has finished out of first. It is the first title for Leslie.

Leslie is sometimes said to be football's answer to baseball's hitless wonders. The Blackhawks won three games by one touchdown, skirting around Dansville 6-0 Friday night. They went undefeated for the season, handing Fowlerville its only set back the week before.

Gary Kenroy opened the first period scoring with the longest field goal he has ever kicked--a 33 yarder.

In the same quarter, Pinckney's John Vaughn caught John Allshouse in the end zone for Pinckney's only score, a safety.

In the second quarter, Larry Sparks ran for 45 yards to set up the first touchdown. Dan Perroud scored from the one.

Later in the second quarter Dave Evans scored after he snagged a 15 yard pass from Kenroy.

Also in the second quarter, John Perroud scored on a 19 yard run which capped a 45 yard drive after recovering a Pinckney fumble.

In the third quarter Fowlerville took advantage of another Pinckney fumble recovered on Pinckney's 30. They drove to the nine where Marv Sober took it in for the score. The final score was 29-2.

The only place where Pinckney led in the statistics is that they ran 16 more plays than Fowlerville. This is because Fowlerville kept losing the ball after they made touchdowns.

Fowlerville rushed for 226 yards, passed for 100. Pinckney rushed for 133, passed for 70.

John Allshouse came through for Fowlerville, starting at quarterback for the first time after Kenroy suffered a slight hand injury. He passed 5 for 10 and intercepted one.

Pinckney fumbles were recovered by Dave Silver, John Hicks, Joe Shaffer, and Mike Glover.

Bob Kuch led Fowlerville on defense.

Jayvees Defeat Ramblers

Mason's jayvee grid squad is coming on strong after a slow start.

Thursday night the jayvees turned back Holt 26-18.

The Bulldogs jumped into a fast lead when Craig Webster scored twice. The first TD came on a pass play covering 40 yards. Ron Perrine was on the throwing end. Then in the same quarter Webster climaxed a drive by going over from the 4.

In the second quarter Holt got on the board with a touchdown. Mason came on in the third period with another score when Perrine found Steve Reeser open and hit him with a TD pass. After this score Dave Birney booted the extra point.

Holt wound up the period with a touchdown to make it 19-12.

Mason added to the cushion in the last period on a 29-yard pass play from Perrine to Reeser. Birney kicked the extra point.

Perrine has pitched 5 touchdown passes. Webster has crossed the goal line 8 times in action this year.

The jayvees have one more chance to perform, Thursday night at 7 they will entertain Howell in the final bit of action.

Perfect Pick Earns Cash

Frank Kapugia's crystal ball was really working last week. He had a perfect record in picking the winners after discounting the 2 tie games.

He wasn't alone, either. There was another soothsayer with a perfect record, but unfortunately the second perfect picker forgot to put his name on the entry.

So, the $15 belongs to Frank Kapugia, 1310 Berton street, Lansing.

One more week remains in the Ingham County News grid contest. Get in on the action.

A Message from JACK LECHLER

To my many friends:

On November 8th you will have the opportunity to vote for two of the non-partisan candidates for the office of Circuit Judge (6 year term). This is an extremely important election! The men you elect on November 8th will be shouldering grave responsibilities.

Having served you and the many citizens of Ingham County for many years...as Undersheriff, as Sheriff, as Municipal Court Probation Officer, and as a Circuit Court Officer, a major part of my life has been spent in and about the courtroom. I've had the opportunity, first-hand, to view the exploding crime rate in our county and the growing number of persons who feel free to take the law into their own hands. I've seen first-hand the need to add an experienced judge to our circuit court bench...a judge with courage and understanding. I think I know and understand the calibre of man needed for the 4th Circuit Judge position.

While I am now retired, I do feel that it is important to speak out concerning one of the candidates. For seventeen years I've watched JACK WARREN both in and out of the courtroom. I've seen JACK WARREN withstand outside pressures of all kinds, and I've witnessed his patience in dealing with human beings of all kinds. I've talked with circuit court jurors...with persons accused of crime...and with witnesses, and they (like myself) have been impressed with the "bigness" of JACK WARREN.

Whoever may be your other choice, I most strongly urge that on Nov. 8th you join with me in voting for JACK WARREN for CIRCUIT JUDGE.

Sincerely,

John F. Lechler

Two Mason Men Develop Method to Spread Marl

Ed Ferris of E. Ash street and Dick Foster of E. Columbia street, Mason, have come up with an idea which may revolutionize the process of applying marl to soil.

Demonstrated recently at the farm of Miss Mable Ferris, Ferris road at Onondaga road, the machine liquifies marl and distributes it evenly over the ground.

Marl is rich in calcium carbonate or lime and is found under water. In the past farmers have not used the soil builder because it has been impossible to spread it or even break up the large chunks.

Only in the experimental stage, the machine was observed by Michigan State university extension specialists and representatives of the state ASCS office.

To get lime on their fields Ingham county farmers have been forced to use lime stone transported from Bellevue, Parma or out of state. By liquifying marl the farmer can have the lime build up he needs without the high costs of transportation.

Jim Mulvany, county extension agent, says he thinks the machine has a potential for area farmers, especially if approved by the ASC and the Conservation department.

Ferris modestly claims there is nothing new about the parts used in the machine, only the way they are used to produce spreadable marl.

He and Foster began working on the device last spring.

The 2 men have great hopes for the marl spreader. In fact Ferris' son Richard is planning to take over the marl operation following his return from service with the Army Medical Corps in Germany.

This machine isn't the first idea Ferris and Foster have worked on. They successfully created a huge land-clearing machine which was original and patented. This piece of equipment is used to clear large areas of land primarily in Florida for subdivision developments.

The land clearer literally eats up fully grown trees and leaves the cleared land looking like a plowed field.

Clothing Meeting Is Scheduled for 4-H Leaders

Hems -- "It's all done except the hem." How often this statement is said. Yet how often the hem affects the overall appearance and quality of a garment.

A recent survey of clothing construction printed materials explained over 20 types of hems. Today, there is a variety of dry goods in fabric shops, including blends, synthetics, the extensible, the bulky, the sheer, the wash and wear and on and on. Gone are the days of only wool, cotton, linen and silk with a definite hem for each.

A clothing meeting for volunteer 4-H local leaders and Junior leaders will be held on November 8, 9, 10 and 11, in each of the following 4 areas of the county to discuss the criteria for selecting a suitable hem, with consideration for both durability and appearance.

Tuesday, November 8, 7:30 p.m. at the Williamston Methodist church.

Wednesday, November 9, 7:30 p.m. at Vevay township hall, Mason.

Thursday, November 10, 7:30 p.m. at Dansville township hall.

Friday, November 11, 9-11:30 a.m. at Delhi township hall, Holt.

The purpose of these lessons is to give some guidelines for making a choice of hem that will be suited to the fabric, garment design and intended use and care of the garment.

These meetings will be conducted by the county 4-H Clothing development committee. They are Mrs. Ted Damsby, Williamston; Mrs. Leonard Blood and Mrs. Bruce Deeg, Mason; Mrs. Delmar Carr, Webberville; Mrs. Alvin Nottingham, Stockbridge;

Mrs. Vance Mead and Mrs. Harry VanKuren, Mason; and Mrs. Paul Jankoviak, Lansing.

The committee met on Tuesday, November 1, to plan these meetings with Miss Rhoda Peck, County extension 4-H youth agent. Miss Peck said that new illustrative materials have been prepared for discussion at these meetings.

Women Want International Events Too

Women want international news on women's pages as well as on the front page, according to an article in the current issue of Banner Lines, quarterly publication of the Michigan Women's Press Club.

Virginia Baird, assistant editor with Michigan State University Information Services--10 years a women's editor--sees interest in international personalities, foods, fashions, homes, happenings and travel as a significant trend among women readers.

In an article entitled "Let's talk about Criteria for Good Women's Sections," she recommends more time and space for stories of worth and of interest to homemakers and to professional women; less, for weddings, engagements, society, the bulletin board bit and stories with a "Cause".

Mrs. Baird is a member of the committee for the statewide women's pages competition to be held in connection with the winter meeting of the MSPC in Niles, February 17-19.

Delhi Is Asked To Consider A Cable Antenna TV System

A system that would permit a subscriber to receive 12 to 20 television stations sometime in the future without an antenna and with guaranteed best reception possible was described this week by Bruce Hollowick, a Lansing attorney.

Hollowick has made a formal application to the Delhi Charter Township board on behalf of the National Cable Company, Inc. for a Cable Antenna Television System (CATV) license similar to the one granted to the company by East Lansing in September.

CATV consists briefly of a tower near a town, normally 500 feet in height, with separate antennas on the tower for each channel. Hollowick explained, "From the tower sight signals are carried by means of cables to the homes of individual subscribers."

"No home antennas or wires are needed. The service is much like a utility service, since cables would be on each utility pole with individual hook ups to each home."

According to Hollowick the system could carry as many as 20 channels. "However, at present the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) has stringent rules regarding what channels can be brought in, and cannot be brought in, and cannot be brought in."

"If a license were granted, we would apply for a waiver so that we could bring in new stations," he said. "Some people in the industry predict that within 10 years everyone in the U.S. will use the CATV system," Hollowick said. "At present 20 million are subscribers."

He outlined some of the benefits of having a system available to the community. "The system guarantees perfect reception with no adjustments or maintenance, except on your television set which is beyond the control of the system," he said.

Normally, one channel is set aside for news, weather, and time, usually viewed as a ticker tape with music in the background.

"The system is also capable of receiving all FM stations within 100 miles for radio."

Presently, most residents in this area receive about 3 stations with sufficient quality to view. With CATV the number could be increased by adding the CBC (Canadian Broadcasting Corp.), which will be in color in another month, plus improving in places the reception of the existing stations, Hollowick stated.

Music Is Theme of Program

Under the banner "Music the World Over" the Music Club of Mason will gather for its monthly program meeting Monday, November 7, at 8:00 p.m.

Meeting at All Saints Lutheran Church on West South street, the group will hear vocal numbers by soprano Suzanne Mills. A clarinet ensemble will also perform.

Clarinetists include Dr. Donald Cairns, Mrs. Ronald Ketchum, Mrs. Paul Tidemann, and Mrs. Warren Emrick. A second woodwind group will present a selection of European origin. Consisting of clarinet, oboe, flute and horn, the group includes Kathy Jo Pruden, Marie Lyons, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tidemann.

The public is always invited to meetings of the Music club which is affiliated with the National Federation of Music clubs. Persons interested in music, whether performers or not, are welcome.

ing stations, Hollowick stated.

"One big attraction," he pointed out, "is the variety that would be offered in sports and movies. There are some special programs which Detroit receives, but never reach this area," he said adding, "However, that until existing regulations are changed, the only stations that would be available are Michigan stations and the CBC."

There is a cost to subscribers. "The installation fee would cost $10 and a monthly fee would be assessed for each set in the house, $5 for the first set and $1 for each additional," Hollowick explained.

He added that there would be no continuing obligation to use the services for any length of time. Subscribers would probably be billed monthly, he stated.

At the present time Hollowick has no idea where a tower will be erected.

"We will try to cover as large an area as is economically feasible," he said, "and we will offer the same rates and conditions to subscribers, regardless of how far they live from the tower within the area."

Enumerating the steps necessary to make such a system available to a community, Hollowick said, "First we must obtain a license; second, we must negotiate rights of way for laying cable; third, we must lay cable over the entire area; fourth, we must hook lines up to the individual subscribers and lastly, we must maintain the operation and insure the most efficient operation and services."

In the East Lansing ordinance No. 181, chapter 72, the CATV is required to pay an annual fee of $1,000 to the city and have insurance covering public liability and property damage.

"This is not to imply that CATV is a dangerous operation," Hollowick mentioned, "It is just a precaution. What if one of our trucks had an accident?"

The National Cable Company, Inc., sponsors of the proposed CATV, own 3 other corporate television stations in the United States.

Grass fires have also kept firemen on the jump. There were 4 such fires this past week, 3 of which were attributed to dry conditions and careless hunters.

A PREDICTION

Arctic May Become The Hub of the World

NEW EMPLOYEE--James T. Kallman, Ingham county probate judge, announces the appointment of Mrs. Barbara Kellogg (above) as a child welfare worker in the juvenile division of the Probate Court. She succeeds Mrs. Ardith DeFoe who recently resigned. Mrs. Kellogg received her BA degree in Social work from Michigan State and her field training was with the Ingham County Probate court delinquency Division.

The frozen and desolate Arctic, land of the Eskimo and the polar bear, may one day become the "hub of the world," a center for transport, industry, even agriculture.

The prediction is made in the current issue of Petroleum Today magazine, in an article entitled: "The Arctic, Land of Frozen Assets." The assets include vast stores of gold, iron, nickel, oil, and other minerals that are attracting increasing numbers of settlers to the Far North.

There is more to the Arctic, the magazine points out, than ice. During summer months, when temperatures may reach 100 degrees Fahrenheit, the frozen tundra thaws, and hillsides are blanketed with flowers. Gardens produce foot-long carrots and cabbages the size of soccer balls.

In Arctic Sweden school children bask under ultraviolet lamps to compensate for the lack of sunshine in winter; Greenlanders are served by regularly scheduled helicopter flights; the Soviet Union has a dozen Arctic cities with populations of 50,000 or more. The strategic importance of the Arctic has led the U.S., Canada, and the Soviet Union to establish extensive research and military facilities above the polar circle.

During recent years, the magazine reports, one of the most dramatic Arctic developments has been the search for oil on the Arctic Slope of Alaska. The task: to find the petroleum to help meet U.S. energy needs of the future.

The investment required is substantial: A typical Arctic oil well costs more than $1 million. Men and equipment must be transported hundreds of miles into the isolated Brooks Mountain Range and maintained there for weeks and months on end. In the case of one well, drill rig and equipment were airlifted 330 miles from Fairbanks, Alaska, to a crude runway at the drilling site; it took a giant airlifter 72 round trips to complete the job.

The Arctic operations have challenged the oilman's ingenuity. They have learned to use live steam to thaw frozen antifreeze in temperatures of -60 degrees Fahrenheit. Barrels of oil must sometimes be rolled into wood fires to make the oil thaw. Geologists have learned to keep dangerous wild animals at a distance; for example, they shout or sing when approaching a lake where a bear might be fishing.

Most drilling is conducted in winter months when the surface is frozen; in warm weather much of the area turns into swampy muskeg. The hard winter surface is fine for supporting a drilling rig, but the heat from the machinery on the rig turns the ground soupy.

One solution that oilmen have devised is reminiscent of selling ice boxes to Eskimos. A system of tubing carrying refrigerating fluid is placed in the icy ground beneath the rig - helping to keep the frozen north frozen.

Stockbridge Man Felled by Shell

After being shot through the chest by what is believed to be a .22 rifle, 80 year old Charles Hardt of Stockbridge is thanking his lucky stars that he is still alive. Not only is he alive but he isn't even confined to the hospital, having been treated and released last Saturday when the incident happened.

Hardt was helping his son Roland to combine beans on the farm of the younger man and was riding the combine while Roland drove the tractor. Roland looked back and suddenly saw that his father appeared to be in great pain. Rushing to his side, Hardt heard his father say, "Something happened. . . I felt a stabbing pain and it doesn't go away." Not knowing what could have happened, Hardt put his hand inside his father's coat and felt something wet. He immediately helped the elder Hardt into the house and upon removing the man's jacket and shirt, saw the two wounds, one in his back and another in his chest.

Hardt was rushed to Foote hospital by his son and daughter-in-law in the family car. X-rays revealed that a bullet, probably a .22 caliber, had entered the man's back, just above the rib cage, and had emerged just above his heart. Doctors who examined Hardt at the hospital said that if the bullet had been only one inch lower it would surely have struck his heart. However, as it was, there was a clean wound, all the way through. Police who investigated the incident said the bullet probably came from the gun of a hunter.

New Modern Math Class Is Beginning

The Adult Education program announces a second session of the class Modern Math for Parents.

This is designed for those who could not fit the first session into their schedules or else missed the information about that session. This class will meet for 5 weeks beginning Monday evening November 7 and ends December 5. As with the first session the second class will be $4, and will be paid the first night of class. The class will be meeting at the Senior high school from 7 - 9 p.m.

This class has been the most successful of the classes in the program with the 3 classes now in their fourth week with a total enrollment of 71. Most who are now enrolled find the material from the class to be of great help in understanding the new style of mathematics now being taught in the Mason schools.

It will be necessary to have minimum enrollment of 15 for the class to be held. The enrollment fee of $4, is for instruction only.

Halloween Is Big Event For Dansville Children

DANSVILLE -- Trick or treaters in Dansville had a purpose in mind Monday as they went door to door. They were collecting for UNICEF, the United Nations Children's fund.

They were successful in their project as over $100 was gathered.

Enthusiasm built up to the community project as a poster contest was staged prior to the big day in the Dansville's sixth grade class. From Mrs. William Bellenberger and Mrs. Don Mueller's classes these youngsters were prize winners: Kirk Galley, 1st; Betty Hicks, 2nd; Peter Shinevar, 3rd.

Edison Vorhes' class winners were Patty Clery and Jill Sharland, 1st; Debbie McCann, 2nd; Aaron Tostevin, 3rd. The posters were displayed at the school and in business places around the village.

Halloween didn't end after the UNICEF collection though as members of the Dansville PTA sponsored a special party at the school for all youngsters in the 6th grade and younger.

Over 300 children attended and were judged for the best costume. Winners included Rocky Bushard and Robin Quillin, preschoolers; kindergarten, Benjamin Bear and Debbie Sprout; first grade, Russell Bushard and Rebecca Brown; second grade, Melinda Davis and David Sprout; third grade, Randy Bushard and Cindy Williams.

Fourth grade, Cindy Davis and Philip West; fifth grade, Chris Leader and Mike Risner, and sixth graders, Aaron Tostevin and Chester Aseltine.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was the Rev. G. Robert Sawyer. In addition to the costume prizes there were also 25 door prizes given out.

Church Class Enjoys Party

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Barry hosted the Mason Baptist Ambassador class at a Halloween party Saturday, October 29, in the church. Members came in costume with some of the outstanding ones represented by a caveman, a clown, a ghost, a gypsy and a Beau Brummel.

Decorating the room were witches, pumpkins, skeletons, ghosts and corn shocks. Devotions and games were led by the teacher, Mrs. Violet Hinkley. Refreshments were served and the men bobbed for apples.

Mason Senior Girls Chalk Up 20-12 Victory

By PAT O'BRIEN
Mason High School
A fierce football rivalry was played out under the lights at Mason high last Saturday night. The senior girls led throughout the game to come out on top 20-12.

Both teams displayed good tactics and each had exceptional players. Michelle Slabaugh, right, half-back, led the seniors in yardage gained with 129 yards. This was an average of 11.73 yards per run and she carried the ball 11 times.

On one run Michelle scored a touchdown for the Seniors and made the extra point. Sharon Slisby, quarterback, also scored once and carried the ball for the extra point. Eleanor Kranz intercepted the ball and carried the ball one yard to gain the third touchdown for the seniors. Carol Woodard, another fast runner, had an average of 11 yards gained; while Bonnie Perfit led the tacklers with 10 tackles on the ball carrier. Sue Smith and Mary Kirkmeyer scored for the junior touchdowns. Sue led the juniors in yards gained, while Julie Seyfarth and Sylvia Wasson proved tough on defense. A bit of excitement was added to the game in the fourth quarter as 2 junior cheerleaders, Doug Engle and Rick Hoadley, tried to enter the field and substitute for players.

The senior cheerleaders, Ron Cook, Dan Webster, Carl

Lawson, Steve Strickland and Dave Pletzke interrupted play and carried the imposters away.

The game was played with flag football rules. A piece of material hung on each player's belt and a tackle was made when this was pulled out. Practice sessions were held 2 weeks in advance of the game.

Senior coaches were Mr. Lou Sheppard and Mr. Veldman. The juniors were coached by juniors on the varsity football team.

Injuries were fairly high for the game. Bonnie Perfit suffered a broken finger. Carol Campbell pulled some ligaments in her leg and possibly chipped a bone. Jackie Stubert broke a blood vessel in her finger.

The game was sponsored by the B.A.A.

Despite their disappointing loss, the junior girls generally conceded that the game was fun and that they hoped to start a tradition at M.H.S. by continuing the festivities next year.

DETERMINATION--Although Julie Seyfarth with the able follow up by Mary Kirchmeir made a strong bid for a touchdown here, little could save the junior class powder puff team from defeat at the hands of the senior girls.

'Swinging' Dance Set In Dansville

By CAROLE LAXTON
Dansville High School

DANSVILLE -- How could so much fun, talent and entertainment be jam-packed into only three short hours?

The Dansville area residents have an excellent opportunity to find the answer to this question! F.H.A. is sponsoring a "swinging" dance November 11 from 8 p.m. - 11 p.m. to be held in the gymnasium.

Parents, alumni, and all students are welcome to come and share all this fun and excitement.

There will be something special for everyone. Square dancing, round dancing and "rock-n-roll."

The "We Folks" will provide some of their own special arrangements, which are always great.

Along with all the other talent, various members of the community will add to the fun.

The dance is put on as a service to the community for "Better Family Relations Through Communications."

So don't miss it!

Andy Lukomski is King

Susan Felton Reigns As Dansville's Queen

By CAROLE LAXTON
Dansville High School

DANSVILLE--Goblins, witches, devils, spooks, and all sorts of "spirits" invaded Dansville Monday night as all the students in the sixth grade and under went "trick or treating" for U.N.I.C.E.F. After the students gathered pennies and candy from the neighboring townspeople, they assembled at the school for a party. Prizes were given for the best costumes.

For an exciting, tough game, Dansville opposed the Leslie

"Black Hawks" on the Dansville field last Friday following school. Leslie scored a touchdown during the second quarter with the final score 6-0 in Leslie's favor.

During half-time, the band, with director Gary Norris, presented an excellent performance. After the band played the national anthem, the floats all being very original and unique were drawn around the field. To conclude all this excitement, the candidates for the Royal Court were presented. The "Fall Ball" commenced promptly at 8:30 Friday night in the gym, which was beautifully decorated by Susan Felton and Susan Nottingham, with the help of part of the student council.

Suspense built up as the students, parents and candidates kept wondering who had been elected. At 10 p.m., Steve Driggs announced the 1966-67 King, Queen, Prince, and Princess. Elected as Prince was Sophomore Michael Glenn, Reigning as Princess is Jalayne Cornell, also a sophomore. Andy Lukomski was crowned Homecoming King with Susan Felton elected as Homecoming Queen.

All in all, the entire court presented a very handsome picture.

Thursday, the entire student body was "captivated" by a ten-minute film on gun safety, shown in the gym. After the film, the cheerleaders put on "T.V. station" pep rally. Cheryl Sheathelm, announcer, broadcast from T.V. station MBWLHPT (standing for Mr. Don Mueller, Mr. Searl Briggs, Mr. John Van Winkle, Mr. Robert West, Mr. Ted Lyons, Mrs. Alice Hunt, Jack Prince and Team).

So much for that... It was a singing pep rally, more or less, with songs rewritten by Susan Nottingham. It was enjoyed by all the students and the teachers.

This is a final warning for the "Little Sisters" in F.H.A. Be prepared for anything and everything. This is the last week of being yourself.

(You'll never be the same again). Informal initiation is being held November 9. Class meetings were held Monday to discuss any important happenings or unusual occurrences.

Webberville Dads Enjoy Their Night

By MARSHA LOTT
Webberville High School

WEBBERVILLE -- It was Dad's Night at the Webberville football game Friday night. The fathers and their sons were introduced at pre-game ceremonies. Each father was given his son's number to wear. After the game they all met for refreshments.

The Spartans lost their football game Friday to Potterville. They played a good game but the Vikings scored more. Next Webberville travels to DeWitt.

There were Parent-Teacher Conferences at Webberville. The parents came to pick up their child's report cards and they had a chance to talk with the teachers. After the conferences they all met for refreshments.

The Annual Staff had a meeting this week and picked out the cover for the 1967 yearbook. The seniors are busy working on the annual. There was a Pep Assembly Friday in preparation for the Potterville game. The cheerleaders did cheers and put on a skit. The assembly ended with the singing of the school song.

Musical Wizard Performs

By RUTH CAMP
Stockbridge High School

STOCKBRIDGE--The student body was entertained by Vic Hyde, a professional musician and comedian, at 2 separate assemblies last Thursday. Hyde has appeared on such television programs as The Bob Hope Show, Lawrence Welk, I've Got a Secret and Gomer Pyle.

He astounded the students by playing 2, 3, and 4 cornets at one time while playing 3.

He played 3 different parts, Hyde also demonstrated his ability to play the slide trombone, valve trombone, cornet, trombone, cornet, saxophone, clarinet and piano. In addition, he played a "hose-a-phone", an instrument he invented.

Throughout his performance, Hyde delivered educational commercials. He told the kids that everyone has some talent, and that no matter how small or insignificant that talent may seem students should help themselves by staying in school to further their education and develop their talent.

Band members Nancy Zeitz and Ron Bloxom were presented with the coveted Oil Can Awards during the half time of the game Friday night. Both seniors, Nancy is the band's drum major while Bloxom is a member of the percussion section. The Oil Can Award is given each year to the 2 seniors in the band who contributed the most to the smooth operation of the band during marching season and the winners are chosen by ballot by the members of the band.

Also during Friday night's halftime program, 11 seniors in the band were introduced to the crowd and played the school fight song for the last time at a football game. The 11 are Doug Atkinson, trombone; Steve Batchelor, flute; Dan Bloxom, drum; Sue Brown, twirler; Ruth Camp, baritone; Judy Donahue, clarinet; Jan Hanewald, clarinet; Ellen O'Brien, clarinet; Linda Richardson, drum; Sue Rob, cornet; and Nancy Zeitz, majorette.

Senior Officers Pick Motto, Flowers, Colors

By CONNIE BROWN
Holt High School

HOLT -- "We've climbed the foothills, the mountains lie beyond." So says the motto of the Holt High School Senior class.

The motto, class flower, and class colors were selected Thursday by the Senior Class officers: Jim Spencer, Jeff Stauffer, Melinda Oakes, and Charlie Sinclair, president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively. Selected for the flower of the class was the white orchid. Blue and white were chosen as the class colors.

Although it may seem quite early, Tuesday, November 1, the seniors will place orders for graduation announcements, calling cards, Thank You notes, and the like. The orders will be taken at a meeting of the senior class at 9 that morning.

Wednesday evening the parents of Holt high seniors will meet with the counselors and faculty to discuss college, scholarships, graduation, and other related subjects. All senior parents are being urged to attend!

The senior class play, "Rebel Without a Cause," is coming along fine. The first 4 evenings of the week of November 7 will be devoted to rehearsals of the entire play. Thursday will be dress rehearsal with make-up, Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, are red letter days as the play will be presented to the public at this time.

The Holt Chapter of Future Homemakers met Thursday, October 27, after school. Helen Smith, the Chapter president, conducted the meeting. The F.H.A. Regional Convention which was held at Michigan State University on Saturday, October 15, was the main topic of discussion. About 15 Holt F.H.A.'ers attended. In fact, Holt was in charge of arranging a method by which the girls who attended could evaluate the convention. The Holt girls also put on a skit pertaining to this "evaluation booklet."

Also discussed at this meeting was a possible fashion show, Daddy Date Night, an annual affair, and the F.H.A. candy sale. The group also decided to hold meetings every other Thursday, alternating between evening and after-school meetings.

The other officers of the Holt F.H.A. are Lorraine Murray, vice-president; Pam Hake, secretary; Pam Koeller, treasurer; and Kathy Stevenson, historian. Mrs. Beverly Wilson, Holt High Home Economics teacher, sponsors the group.

Lily Lambeth, a sophomore, is the newly-elected president of the Holt Chapter of Future

Nurses of America, Lily and the other executives for this school year were elected Thursday at a general meeting of the organization held for that purpose.

Pat Martin was selected vice president; Giesella Wuertel, secretary; and Janel Sheldon, treasurer. The next meeting will be held in 2 weeks. Before that time the officers will get together to plan the meeting. Mrs. Doris Beck is the club sponsor.

The newly-formed Holt High Literary club met Thursday during homeroom period. Discussed was a joint meeting with the East Lansing High School Reading and Discussion Group, also a new organization this year. The main purpose would be an exchange of ideas and guides for the organization of the clubs.

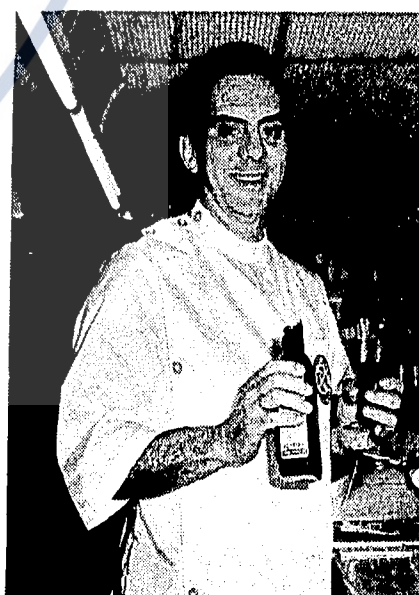

One point brought up was that because both organizations are new perhaps this joint meeting should be postponed for a while. It was also suggested that such a meeting could be in the form of a Christmas Party. All seemed to be in favor of this. More definite plans will be made later.

The Literary Club decided to meet November 7 at 7 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Norma Hood. Mrs. Hood is the club faculty advisor.

Plan for Cities of Tomorrow

Too Late to do Anything for those of Today

It is too late to do anything for the cities of today, a renowned Greek architect, engineer and urban planner believes.

But we still have time to plan for the cities of tomorrow, according to Constantinos A. Doxiadis, a man whose international credits include awards from the International Union of Architects and the Industrial Designers Society of America.

"It is impossible to build cities in the old way and expect them to operate satisfactorily in the future," Doxiadis told an audience at Michigan State University last week.

He flew into Lansing from Athens, his home and international headquarters, to give the first address in a new series sponsored by MSU's School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture.

Unlike the walled cities of the medieval era, he pointed out, our cities and our population are dynamic. Yet, in many ways, "we are still building static cities."

ONE UNIVERSAL CITY

By the end of the next century, he predicts, when our population may reach 50 billion, "all our cities will be united into an universal city -- an ecumenopolis."

Within 50 years, for example, he expects metropolitan Chicago and Detroit to be on continuous city with Battle Creek as the halfway point. And in less than a century, there will be 13 billion people living in the world's urban areas compared with only two billion in rural areas.

"I don't say this is the ideal city," he hastened to add, "I just say this is what is coming. But if we allow all of our cities to grow, there is no hope for them."

His solution -- create new urban centers, new cities, to relieve the pressures of growth and change on the old centers, but avoid making the mistakes of the past.

ROAD SYSTEM "RIDICULOUS"

"The system of roads we are still building is ridiculous," he said, "and our cities' centers are being choked to death."

Traditionally, cities have grown outward around the city center in concentric circles, swelling like a balloon.

Traditionally, even today, cities have turned to "urban renewal" as the remedy, tearing down old neighborhoods, demolishing old city centers, to widen streets or build new traffic arteries.

"Why should we abandon the old neighborhoods, the cities of the past," asks Doxiadis. "We don't have the right to destroy a neighborhood until it has been amortized from every point of view -- economic, social, cultural."

"Maybe the next generation is going to consider these neighborhoods more important for culture than the ones we are building today."

Urban renewal? "It is inadvisable," he said, "but we need it today when we allow 60 percent of a residential area to be taken over by warehouses."

The future? If city planners start following "reasonable policies," says Doxiadis, "I would condemn urban renewal completely 60 years from now."

Doxiadis' major criticism of the cities of the world today centers on man's need for freedom of movement.

"We must not deprive man of his ability and desire to walk, because it is from walking, the anthropologists tell us, that man developed his present form."

NOT FREE TO WALK

But in the cities today, he believes "we are losing the battle. We are not free to walk or to run in the cities. The introduction of the red light was the greatest step backward in human history."

Success tomorrow involves changing attitudes on three key points: first, and foremost, understanding man's needs and potentials and being very conservative in anything that involves man.

For example, he personally is against round rooms and uneven ceilings.

Second, adopting a realistic attitude toward inevitable technological change and in dealing with it thinking in revolutionary terms.

"We can expect the cities of tomorrow to construct tunnels, 'deepways,' rather than highways for high speed traffic," he predicts. He bases his opinion on a recent study by Rand Corporation that indicates it will be cheaper to construct tunnels than surface roads by the middle 1970s.

Thirdly, recognizing the two opposing forces at work in today's world: the necessity for growth and change, and the necessity to build a balanced, static community made up of small permanent shells for man.

Today's dilemma is to reconcile these forces, says Doxiadis.

A BIOLOGICAL PRINCIPLE

It is from biology that he derives the principle -- a fundamental one -- to solve the problems of the cities.

Single-celled organisms divide in order to multiply. Unlike cities, they do not just grow larger and larger. Multi-celled organisms, second order life like animals and man, are systems of cells working in harmony.

"The cities of tomorrow are organisms and we can create them on the basis of these principles," Doxiadis contends. "We have to create rational networks for our high speed, mechanical systems within which we can construct human communities."

On the drawing board, Doxiadis' plan resembles a gigantic tic-tac-toe design with the lines representing the traffic networks and the squares representing communities of up to 50,000 persons each.

What about the people who don't want to live in the cities, in the coming ecumenopolis? Doxiadis seemed puzzled that a student posed this question and eagerly replied: "The role of the small cities and the villages is very big, for it is there that the human scale can be preserved."

"Our only hope for humanity is that every man keeps and respects his own desires. That guarantees us that if the majority fails, the minority will survive."

Aurelius Briefs

Miss Florence Mansfield, district director for Pioneer Girls, spoke last Sunday at Aurelius Baptist church.

Singspiration services are planned November 6 at the Methodist church of Leslie. The church calendar for this week lists: Wednesday, Pioneer Girls meetings; Thursday, Mid-week Prayer Service, Adult Discipleship class; Saturday, Adult Choir Practice.

The North Aurelius School association will meet November 14 at the school at 8 p.m. Guest speaker will be Corporal William Ryal of the Michigan State University police. He will speak on hunting and gun safety.

Neighborhood Youth Corps Approved for Michigan

A Neighborhood Youth Corps (NYC) project sponsored by the Michigan Department of Conservation, Lansing, Michigan, was approved today by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz.

The project will provide work experience for 300 out-of-school youths, 16 through 21 years of age, at a total cost of $599,980. The Federal Government will furnish $421,550, and the Department of Conservation will contribute the balance of $178,430.

The youths will be assigned work as gardener aides, conservation aides, park and recreation aides, and in maintenance, service, and other occupations. When necessary, the Youth Corps enrollees will receive counseling, testing, and remedial education.

The NYC is administered by the Manpower Administration of the U.S. Department of Labor, and is an Economic Opportunity Act program, and a major part of the Nation's war on poverty.

The Corps is designed to provide disadvantaged youths from low income families with part-time jobs which will enable them to stay in school, or to provide those not wishing to return to school with meaningful work experience.

Secretary Wirtz recently stated that the work accomplished in local and State NYC projects "has opened new dimensions in the daily lives of all the people in the community, improved services, provided better recreation, and increased conversation."

The NYC office serving the State of Michigan is located at 809 Washington Boulevard Building, 234 State Street, in downtown Detroit, and is under the supervision of Dorset T. Conley.

discussion included the locker inspection to be staged next week, a money-making project, Honor Student of the Month Program, and cleanup week. Tom Sawyer, the Buildings and Grounds Commissioner, at the suggestion of the group promised to check into the possibility of having locker inspections on Wednesdays instead of Fridays.

Administration must clear this change of policy, and, until that time, the commission is planning a locker inspection next Wednesday or Friday. The Commission also discussed the possibility of staging a money-making project, probably a dance. Any proceeds from such a project are placed in the Student Council treasury, but the Commission is financed by the Council.

Sandy Gruhn, who is heading a committee for selecting the Honor Students, reported that nothing can be done by her committee until the faculty meets to decide the best way to select the students.

Clean-Up Week was also discussed. Last year the commission talked about such an event but didn't put the idea into action. Tom hopes to get the project going full steam and planned for some week between football and basketball. The commission will meet again next Wednesday.

Ten minutes before dismissal from school Friday the entire student body moved to the gymnasium for a brief assembly. For some reason the spirit at these afternoon pep assemblies seems to be far superior to the pep at the morning rally, as was held last year. Although the spirit was boundless, the Rams lost to Mason, 20-6.

Praise Given MSU Project In Brazil

Michigan State University's recently completed program to introduce business education in Brazil has been recognized by a U.S. government agency as the most successful overseas project by a university.

Testimony in the Congressional Record indicates that the Agency for International Development (AID) considered MSU's project as the best of its kind.

The 13-year program started in 1954 when advisers from the MSU Graduate School of Business Administration established a business school in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Similar programs were started five years later at the University of Bahia in Northern Brazil and the University of Rio Grande do Sul in the south.

Business education was never part of a university curriculum until the MSU project began. Now, as other faculty members are trained and become available, other universities will introduce business education in their programs.

Twenty-five MSU professors on rotating assignments spent 72 man-years in Brazil, developing teaching materials germane to Brazil's economy. They overcame the Portuguese language barrier by teaching through interpreters.

Asks MSU's Ag Chief

What Happened to Milk Can?

Whatever happened to the milk can, the three-bottom plow and pasture management?

All but the most casual observers know the answers to these questions, and they realize the changes that have taken place in agriculture over the past 15 years. But how many people today have attempted to look ahead to agriculture in 1980?

Speaking was Michigan's new chief of agricultural education, Edwin W. St. John.

"We must make changes in agricultural education, just as the farmer has had to make changes in his way of operation," said St. John. "This is not to say that we have not already made progress, but there is much more to be done in the months and years to come."

The speaker said one of the goals was to make more clear "our philosophy of agricultural education in the public schools."

In looking at Michigan agriculture in the next 15 years, as described in MSU's Project 80, St. John outlined a 10-point plan for vocational agriculture.

First, he said we must expand our training programs for off-farm agricultural occupations at both the high school and post-high school levels.

"A multitude of off-farm agricultural businesses and services has emerged to aid farmers," he said. "The rural-urban complex also has undergone phenomenal changes which have implications for employees in ornamental horticulture and agricultural resources requiring knowledge and skills in plant, soil and animal science."

Second, he said agricultural education will definitely have a place in area vocational schools, although development will be slow. Third, he predicted that vocational-technical courses will develop in community colleges, which will number about 50 in Michigan by 1980.

He also called for a continual updating of the agricultural curriculum, perhaps through the use of advisory committees, and said we must give more attention to training for employment, pointing out that the effectiveness of vocational education will be measured by its ability to prepare people for jobs.

Still other recommendations included a continuation of and emphasis on farm training programs for high school students, young and adult farmers; facing up to our greatest problem -- lack of teachers; expansion of technical programs at MSU, continuing to improve vocational agriculture standards; a consideration of how vocational agriculture relates to the predictions of Project 80.

Trail Traverses Hell

The "Road To Hell" Michigan has not only been paved with "Good Intentions", but also the finest, most spectacular nature trail in southeastern Michigan, thanks to the efforts of the Portage Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America, Glenn Seaver, Chairman, Mel Reinhard, Hell's Chamber of Commerce president said recently.

Starting at the Bruin Lake Headquarters of the Scouts the trail meanders over approximately 14 miles of Michigan wonderland, with breathtaking views from the surrounding hilltops of the many lakes and forests in the area and terminates at the Devil's Outpost at Hell, Michigan.

A Winter Wonderland Tour will be conducted the second weekend in January by the Scouts when Hell traditionally, FREEZES OVER, the trails being marked with bright red banners.

In the summer of 1967 over 5,000 Boy Scouts will attempt to walk the entire trail for the Bronze Potawatomi Trail Badge Award. The use of the trails, which traverses much of the Pinckney Recreation Area State Property will also be open to the general public.

Artists Exhibit

LANSING--A two-man show by local artists, Jens Plum and Stacy Proffitt will open at the Lansing Community Gallery, 124 Ionia Street, on Sunday, October 30.

Gallery hours for the show, which will run through November 27, are 11-5 p.m. on Wednesdays, and 1-5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.

Sadie Hawkins Dance Plans Are Underway

By CHRIS STEWART
Williamston High School

WILLIAMSTON--The Girls Athletic association met Thursday during 5th period, Ronny Murray, chairman of the Sadie Hawkins dance, gave a rundown on the progress of the dance.

It will have a Hawaiian theme. The committee chairman and the committees were picked. Janet Eifert is in charge of entertainment, Sue Bixby is chairman of clean-up, decorations chairman is Gail Baker, refreshments chairman in Lee Zehender, and Marie Turner is in charge of getting chaperons.

A Hootenanny will be scheduled in the near future. The committee which will organize the Hootenanny was picked. The members are Margaret Scarlett, Connie Gorsline, Cathy Casey, Judy Perkins, and Deb Matson.

Pictures were taken for the yearbook on Friday. Various organizations which had their pictures taken were GAA, FHA, FTA, AFS, class officers, and the Varsity club. The Girls Glee club and the chorus will have their pictures taken sometime in November. This is because many of the girls in the glee club have to get their outfits they wear for their concerts. The outfits are pastel skirts and sweaters.

The Junior class began rehearsals for the Junior play Monday, October 24. The play is "John Brown's Body." The 3 characters will be played by Lee Rother, Tim Taylor, and Chris Smith. The only other persons in the play comprise a chorus. The play is under the direction of Mrs. Stock, who teaches speech and American literature at the high school.

Williamston's JV's and their Varsity team had a victory this week. Both games were against Stockbridge, the score of the reserve game was 7-0 and the score for the Varsity game was 13-12.

director Charles Davidson with a unique gift in appreciation for his efforts on their behalf. He was given 12 whistles, 11 of them bearing the names of the graduating seniors and an extra one for himself.

The band's halftime program represented a glance into the world of musical showbusiness. Among the numbers performed were "On The Street Where You Live", "Younger Than Springtime", and "More".

Members of the senior class ordered their class pictures last Thursday. They were required to pay half the total cost of the pictures at the same time. The underclassmen's pictures have arrived and are in the school office.

The great big cats lost a heartbreaker to the Williamston Hornets Friday night 13-12. The Panthers fought hard but couldn't stop Williamston on their final drive toward victory.

It was Dad's Night and the fathers of all the players were introduced with their sons before the game.

There was a dance in the new gym after the game with music furnished by a local group called "The Concussions." Members of the band are Terry Krumnrey, John Robinson, Frank Stevens, Mike Lehman and Dennis Jarrell.

The Melting Pot

By HAYDEN PALMER

It was my pleasure last week to attend a luncheon at Highfields, the opportunity camp for boys, now being formed on a 147-acre tract of land just off Old Plank road, about a mile east of Onondaga.

The purpose of the luncheon was to bring together persons who have played a part in the making of Highfields. There were about 60 persons present and they heard a detailed account of the work being done, the projects planned for the future and the needs of the camp.

Highfields is expected to be ready for operation within the next few weeks. It will start with 24 boys who will be trained in various trades or prepared for further schooling.

Highfields is not a prison or an institution or a detention home. It is, instead, a place where a boy may learn to become a good citizen and a way of life that will make him a good member of society.

Robert Drake, former judge of probate in Ingham county is the founder of the program. Through his efforts a corporation was set up known as Camp Ingham Inc. and the work of building the first building was undertaken. Donations of money, labor and materials have speeded the process and soon Camp Highfields will come into its own, so to speak.

All these men who gathered at the luncheon listened to Judge Drake's discussion of what Highfields is and what it hopes to be and then rose from their chairs and gave him a standing vote of confidence.

That was about the nicest part of the entire program, for Judge Drake is entitled to all the praise that can be bestowed upon him for his efforts.

Long before a shovelful of earth was turned at the site of Camp Highfields

Judge Drake told me at lunch one day about his dream to aid boys to a better life. His dream is now being realized -- a dream that will bring a lot of happiness to many and one that will be a boon to society in general.

Judge Drake thanked his friends for the standing ovation but was quick to point out that he could not have accomplished what has been done alone. It required the whole hearted support of right thinking people in the community to put the program across.

And that cooperation was given freely and earnestly by a lot of business, professional and educational leaders who believe in giving a helping hand to a boy in need of help.

Highfields is in an area surrounded by woods and with a small stream running through it. The first building was built near the stream which it is planned to dam and develop a lake. Later cabins will be built to house the boys. Landscaping still has to be done and an area black-topped for parking.

The person who sees Highfields on his first visit may not be too much impressed, because there is a lot more work yet to be done. But if he can visualize, as I can, what the potential is there, he will see a project aborning that will be a boom to mankind.

Millions are spent for prisons, jails and detention homes, but here is a project that will reach the boy before he can become a menace to society.

Judge Drake best described Highfields as "a concerted community effort to help boys to help themselves."

It is worth the time of anyone to drive out to Highfields and see what is being done.

The 18 Mill Issue

Ingham county voters are being asked to approve a fixed millage of 18 mills. The request for fixed millage was made by the county tax allocation board and if approved would put the allocation board out of business. The issue is a complicated one and is an issue which has not gained the publicity of other ballot issues but is of great importance nonetheless.

What is fixed millage? It is a plan permitted under the new constitution which calls for assigning a maximum portion of the county tax take on a permanent formula basis to the county, school districts, township and intermediate school district.

Under the present system the 15 mills available are assigned by the allocation board to the 4 participating units. The present system means an annual tussle which is becoming increasingly bitter as the county and school districts, the main participants, vie for the tax dollar.

The proposal as presented to the voters Tuesday provides that the millage be raised to 18 mills with the portion going to the county for its operation, the portion going to the various school districts, the intermediate school district operating millage and the township millage where requested, being permanently fixed with 6.55 mills to the county, 10.25 mills to the school districts, 1 mill to the township and .2 mill to the intermediate school district.

There are advantages to the fixed millage. The various units will be able to plan operations and budgets, knowing that the millage will not fluctuate from year to year.

Proponents of the plan do not hide the fact that the proposal will cost taxpayers a little extra over the years, but they point to the increased efficiency and advantages of operation and planning.

What does it mean to the county? Proponents point out that the county, faced with expanded demands for money brought on by new legislation, by requests of additional service on the part of the people and by inflation, will have a cushion. Supervisor Jack Patriarche, chairman of the county ways and means committee, reports that the county sees no need at this time to take the 6.55 maximum.

What does it mean to the schools. It means that schools, which have seen their share of the 15 mills gradually shrink as county needs became greater, will have a basis for more orderly planning. It means that the increased millage available will take some of the pressure off of the practice of going to the school district electors for extra voted millage. It doesn't mean that extra voted operation millage will be eliminated but it could be curtailed to some degree.

What does it mean to the intermediate school district? It means that there is a cushion of growth here, too.

What does it mean to the townships. It means no change. Under the present setup the townships proving a need for millage can get up to one mill. This will not change. What will change is that under the new system if the township does not require one mill that mill will not be levied.

The fixed 18 mill proposal is not a new one. It was rejected a little over a year ago. But, it bears careful consideration on the part of Ingham voters between now and Tuesday.

It can't be sold on the basis of cutting taxes required but it can be sold on the basis of providing orderly planning by the various units

Here's a Welcome for the Welcome Wagon

For 2-1/2 years Mrs. Richard (Lorraine) Bebee has taken her Welcome Wagon to hundreds of homes in the Mason area welcoming newcomers to the area.

This is national Welcome Wagon week. And while we usually shy away from such pseudo-commercial ventures that have special weeks set aside for them, Lorraine and her Welcome Wagon seem the exception.

Newcomers to the area probably know more about the value of the Welcome Wagon than older residents. Suffice it to say that hardly does a newly arrived family get its suitcases on the front porch before Lorraine arrives at the house. And at this point she explains how nice it is to live in the area and all the while handing over appreciated gifts from her sponsors.

Sure, Welcome Wagon is a commercial effort. Cynics can question the motives of the sponsors and the Welcome Wagon hostess. Yet, the commercial values are dwarfed by the gracious welcome felt by the newcomers and the good this initial contact does for the entire community. Lorraine's tireless efforts practically eliminate the possibility of anyone moving to the area who doesn't receive the personal Welcome Wagon welcome.

Welcome Wagon sponsors pay a lot of money and provide some nice gifts to keep the program going. Lorraine is quick to give the lion's share of the credit for the welcoming program to the sponsors. Yet, it's probable that Lorraine's interest and devotion to the task is equally important.

This is national Welcome Wagon week, and if you'll pardon the expression, we're "going on the wagon" this week to salute Mason's Welcome Wagon hostess and her sponsors.

Wilderness for Tomorrow

The threat to the magnificent national parks of the United States brought on by current overuse is vigorously stated by Peter Farb, wildlife authority, in a recent issue of this newspaper. Destruction of the nation's forest life is a challenge to every individual.

The people must show themselves willing to make sacrifices if they are to preserve their country's greatest natural treasures. At the moment, thoughtless recreation-seekers are destroying much of this wild beauty with abandon. Mr. Farb holds the National Park Service responsible. It has been far too intent, he charges, with making so-called improvements which draw throngs of visitors.

It has been far too concerned, he says, with providing motoring and camping facilities to encourage ever-increasing attendance. As a result of this "come-one-come-all" policy, too many motorists crowded the national parks this summer. They chalked a record 125 million visits. Wildlife cannot survive such pressure. The "development" trend should be stopped right where it is. But it will not be arrested unless the American people want it stopped. They must not continue to demand facilities which will make every part of the American wilderness easy to reach by automobile, with plenty of room to park and camp when they get there. On the contrary, they must be willing to see automobile use of the parks rationed if need be. They must insist on rigorous conservation policies at the national level.

This is not asking much. The nature lover with pack and walking stick will always find a path in the woodlands. As for the motorist, who would not sacrifice a little to make sure his children and grandchildren will have unspoiled forests to roam in? (Christian Science Monitor)

The Happiness Boys In the Schoolrooms

In the current generation a fad has swept through the ranks of U.S. educationists like hula hoops among adolescents.

The purpose of primary education, so the legend goes, is to produce happy, well-adjusted citizens, and don't worry too much whether they can spell or multiply. As a by-product of this whimsical notion, emphasis has been placed, in teacher training, on the methods of education, as opposed to sound knowledge of the subject to be taught.

The California school system revolted against this trend, about five years ago, restoring academic subject matter to the curriculum -- instead, we suppose of basket-weaving and finger-painting. It was required that teachers be thoroughly prepared in the subject matter they are to teach.

This policy still is under fire and Thomas W. Barden, president of the California State Board of Education, has given his critics their answer.

He has no quarrel, he says, with trying to create happiness, but he thinks this is secondary and we agree. "If we aim to train the mind," he says, "we shall produce citizens who may be able to save the future for ourselves and for the world. If we aim at happiness, instead, we may produce empty-headed citizens who are happy but also dangerous."

The rising rate of dropouts and juvenile delinquency offers little evidence that this easy-going system even has increased happiness. It certainly hasn't improved character. As Al Smith used to say, let's look at the record. (Stuart, Fla., News)

About as engaging a youngster as there is in town is Claudia Seibert. Her big eyes and quiet manner give her a lot of dignity for a second grader. There comes a time to put away childish things. That time comes to the wise when they are very young. Some people never put away childish things and so never grow up. The time comes early to Jacqueline Ryal. She stopped in at the office last week to put in an ad all her own, offering to sell her tricycle and playhouse. "I'm too big for those things now," Jackie said. She told Norma she was six and in the first grade.

Mixed with the salt rising bread aroma wafted from the ovens of the Mason Citybakery Saturday morning will be the fragrance of international baked goods placed on sale by the PTA at the Perkins hardware store. ## Barbs and Praise

By DICK BROWN

Tuesday Michigan electors will have the opportunity and the responsibility of going to the polls to select a slate of state, congressional, legislative, judicial and local officials whose names will appear on a bed-sheet ballot.

Here is one voter who will make an honest attempt, in the face of the ballyhoo and circus atmosphere of today's elections, to pick men and women of ability and convictions. That is sometimes a hard and almost impossible job.

I do know that the carpetbaggers who have swarmed into Michigan are not going to influence my vote one bit.

Bobby Kennedy, Teddy Kennedy, LBJ, Dick Nixon, Hubert Humphrey and assorted senators and representatives from other states representing both political parties are not going to influence my vote one bit.

Michigan people will be electing Michigan candidates to make Michigan a better state in which to live and work. The inclusion of Michigan on the grand tour of the political mainliners and their assorted fellow travelers does not and should not mean a thing.

Has-been crooners and Hollywood stars, Grades A and B, are great for drawing crowds but they do not know Michigan's problems, Michigan's aims or the qualifications of candidates and issues facing Michigan people.

Here is one voter who is going to take his time in the voting booth and before going to the voting booth to make sure that the X in the square is in front of the right name as far as matching the qualifications and philosophy of this one voter.

I don't care what the Kennedy dynasty thinks of Michigan candidates, I don't care what Nixon wants, I am going to cast my vote for what I want. That is the purpose of the election.

If every voter voted his own convictions. Tricky advertising, fancy political shows, high pressure from national leaders leave me cold.

My chance at the ballot is important to me. It is important enough to study the issues to the best of my ability, arrive at a decision on issues and candidates on my own. I am not taking anyone else into the voting booth on election day. My vote is my own.

Is there anyone who cares to join this minority movement?

There has been a lot of comedy, most of it sick, in this election. Someone quipped that Ferency has made such a name for himself with his humor that he isn't really worried about what he's going to do if he loses his bid. They claim he has been booked as a standup comic at the Rooster-tail, the Detroit nightery.

Here is a tip of the hat to Mason youngsters on their Halloween behavior. True there were a few soaped windows and smashed pumpkins but the costly vandalism which plagued many communities did not take place here. Thanks.

country and town .....

By JIM BROWN

At a meeting in Lansing a few weeks ago, Governor Romney declared that the definition of luck is: When preparation meets opportunity. It seemed like good advice and I've found that it is good advice to pass out to kids who don't like what they see on their report cards or to a president searching for approval in the Pacific.

There is probably an element of sheer chance in the good and bad of this world. Yet what most of us pass off as "good luck" is the fruit of someone's effort to prepare for the knock of opportunity.

And while we're on the topic of good luck, it must be noted that Thursday the BW and I will be observing 15 years of communal living - marriage. While you're reading this bit of news Thursday, the love bird and I will be at the top of the Empire State building... or riding a Circle tour ship around Manhattan... or on the Staten Island ferry... or walking along Madison Avenue... or... for you geography buffs who haven't guessed yet, we'll be in New York City to observe the occasion.

Fifteen years ago Thursday night, the scene was Chicago. Weathermen still refer to November 3, 1951, as the day of the Big Snow. It snowed so hard and the wind blew so hard that it took real determination to get to the church. But it was a battle worth fighting. Robert Louis Stevenson had some interesting ideas about marriage. Marriage is like life in this - that it is a field of battle, and not a bed of roses. He also said: Times are changed with him who marries; there are no more by-path meadows, where you may innocently linger, but the road lies long and straight and dusty to the grave. And Virgil a few years ago observed: Marriage happens as with cages - the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.

I suppose those who have turned the corner at 25 years of marriage, 30, 40, 50 and certainly 60 years of togetherness can't be impressed over hitting the 15-year mark. They can say, and with probably some truth, that the real tests are still ahead. Yet, the first 15 years of marriage provides the opportunity for some testing, too! Just before we were married, I stopped into the old A.G. Spenny & Sons garage (where Kerr hardware is now located) and broke the news to A.G. I joshingly (honest) told him about my Chicago bride-to-be, how she couldn't cook and I'd have to teach her; how hard it would be for this big city girl to make a go of it out in this frontier town. And I said a lot of other things.

A.G. retorted, "You know, Jim, you'll find that after you're married you won't be perfect company day after day after day. It's just not humanly possible. And just remember that your new wife won't be perfect in every way every day either. The quicker you can learn to give and take on the 'unperfect' days, the happier you'll be."

A.G. was right. The new life was quick to back him up that I wasn't perfect every day! (Sometimes for several days in a row).

I always appreciated A.G.'s advice. Happy anniversary to Mrs. Jim Brown, Now 15 years, 4 children and one mortgage later, I look forward to many more years of marriage. Samuel Johnson once observed that a man who marries for the second time pays a great tribute to his first wife, for the second marriage indicates to all the world that he was happy enough with the first marriage to be willing to enter into a second.

And so it is at our 15-year milestone. I am anxious to continue for countless more years - a statement intended to mean that I have enjoyed the past 15 years.

The Melting Pot

By HAYDEN PALMER

You may have heard of Charlotte Camp, who edits the Stockbridge Town Crier, a newspaper that records everything of note in Stockbridge and its surrounding communities.

Charlotte, as she is known to about everybody in her town, in four years time has become a dyed-in-the-wool news hawk who can dig out stories that would baffle a lot of old timers in the business.

But Charlotte does have incidents that crop up in her newspaper career. Some of them would cause most women to back away from the job she holds.

One of these incidents occurred last week. She came to Mason on Tuesday morning as usual to supervise the make-up of the Town Crier. When the job was done she said she had to go to the Ingham county jail to see Sheriff Kenneth Preadmore. She returned about a half hour later carrying a 25-pound iron ball and a length of chain to which leg irons were attached.

"It's for Halloween", she announced to everyone in the News office. Then she loaded the ball and chain in her car and took off for Stockbridge. An hour later the phone rang. It was Charlotte and there was trouble.

When she arrived home her daughter, Faye, decided to inspect the ball and chain. She opened the cuff and slipped it around her ankle. Then she snapped it together and found herself chained to the heavy ball. Faye called her mother to unlock the cuff, but there were no keys available.

Charlotte, however, rose to the occasion. She called the sheriff's department and Sergeant Elliott Moore was sent to Stockbridge, armed with keys, to liberate Faye, who by that time had found the situation wasn't very funny. He brought with him

William Backus of television WILX who took movies of Faye's liberation from the chains. Faye appeared on Channel 10 that evening. Faye finally was freed and things settled back to normal in the Camp household.

There was another incident a couple of years ago when Charlotte went to a house in the Stockbridge area where a crazed man had shot his daughter and was in the house armed to the teeth as sheriff's officers and state police took cover outside to await the arrival of tear gas before trying to drive him out.

Charlotte and the tear gas arrived about the same time. The officers donned gas masks and started their march toward the house, lobbing tear gas shells into the building. Charlotte joined the march with the officers but she had no mask. The wind suddenly veered and blew some of the fumes back toward the marchers. The masks protected the officers but Charlotte for several days was complaining of smarting eyes.

But despite this little mishap she got the story and picture, too.

***

There was another time when a store in Stockbridge was robbed. Charlotte arrived on the scene as detectives arrived to check the place for fingerprints. They had found some on a door knob and were preparing to dust them, when Charlotte barged through the door then shut it and in so doing obliterated all the prints. She got a story that time, too.

***

When she isn't digging for news, which is most of the time, Mrs. Camp is active in the Methodist church and is an excellent housewife. But her first love is getting a story and she usually gets what she goes after.

Your comment and Reverend Gintzer's editorial entitled "Civil Rights and Personal Responsibility" in the October 19, 1966 issue of the Ingham County News calls for some response.

First of all, your statement that "He poses a new slant . . ." would seem to suggest that few people, if any, have previously considered "Civil Rights and Personal Responsibility" side by side. Just the opposite is true. Civil Rights leaders have long preached, prayed and talked about personal responsibility while much of our society has shown little by way of personal responsibility or honest intent to overcome the years of hypocrisy to which we have become accustomed. The recent reaffirmation of principles by major organizations makes this altogether clear if, indeed, it needed clarification.

Reverend Gintzer makes specific mention of Dr. Martin Luther King after asking "What spineless leadership do we have infiltrating the Civil Rights movement?" The question, as stated, is so loaded in the direction of Reverend Gintzer's bias that, like the question "Have you stopped beating your wife?" it becomes impossible to answer. Let me only state that, if he means to say that Dr. King is "spineless" and has been "infiltrating" the Civil Rights movement, he has a very strange idea of Dr. King's role. It is ironic and disturbing that he seems to have entirely missed the point of Dr. King, who, as a well-trained minister, has often interpreted the gospel message of love with both eloquence and clarity. So have many others. Reverend Gintzer fails to give this fact even the most superficial recognition in his own garbled effort to make sense out of that message.

I am certain that the statement "Civil Rights does not entail the idea of a 'free-loading' gift of a job" would meet with general agreement among Civil Rights leaders. It is unfortunate that Reverend Gintzer writes as though leaders in the Civil Rights movement are in favor of "free-loading" or a "hand-out". This is not the case and it is dishonest to write as though it is.

When the writer of the editorial speaks about slums, he again misses the boat. First of all, let's remember that there are more poor whites than poor Negroes who live in substandard housing. He says that slums are the product of people who inhabit the area. In making this unqualified statement, he totally ignores the fact that a high proportion of slum dwellings are owned and should be repaired by a landlord who never has or never will live in the area. He ignores, too, the fact of unemployment, health problems and discriminatory treatment which prevent people from achieving the kind of life they want for their family and themselves. Finally, he ignores the effect which sustained defeat, rejection and injustice have on the human spirit. He consistently deplores the action of people who have been affected by conditions and just as consistently ignores the people who have imposed these conditions on others. This problem in Reverend Gintzer's thinking leads him, throughout his editorial, to place the burden of proof upon the wrong party and to see a villain where there is really a victim. This, along with the very questionable practice of suggesting that certain people favor things which they do not favor, leads him to misinterpret a major social issue and he speaks very awkwardly and poorly to certain points which have been eloquently and honestly covered by many Civil Rights leaders who stand firmly against violence and personal irresponsibility on the part of anyone.

I hope that when Reverend Gintzer next finds occasion to spit his teeth, and ask a question about the Civil Rights movement, he will ask "What blindness prevented me from understanding the goals of a Civil Rights movement which are really the goals which all of us profess to cherish?"

Inflation Controls

The Washington Economic Irresponsibles -- including President Lyndon Johnson and most of the members of the bipartisan - composed Congress -- have persisted in adding fuel to the fires of inflation.

Federal tax rates must be increased and federal spending cut in order to sensibly and properly slow or, hopefully, end the destructive inflation, and to attempt to bring revenues and expenditures closer to balance. The Washington Irresponsibles have further increased spending lavishly and have continued to refuse or delay increased taxes.

Now, the Congress has adjourned for the November elections. I realize that the Washington Irresponsibles are subject to various manipulations, that many hold perverted expediences regarding November elections, and that some are plain thick-headed in the brain department.

Still, one hopes that the Washington Irresponsibles have, find, or are given sufficient intelligence and latitude to bring about a special session of the Congress as soon after the elections as is possible for the purpose of increasing taxes and cutting spending.

If the Washington Irresponsibles persist in the denial of facing up to this primary task until 1967, it might be six months, more or less, before the proper and sensible actions are taken. With every day of delay the economic situation threatens to worsen -- and does worsen.

I am sure that Senator Harry Flood Byrd, Senior, would agree that the madness inherent in the new economics currently embraced by the Washington Irresponsibles must be ended; and the sooner the better for everyone.

You Don't Say

By Sally Trout

Each week The Ingham County News asks a question at random of persons in Mason. This week's question is: "Do you think 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote?"

Glen Kasperek, 249 Washington street, Mason: "I think that 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote, because they are old enough to serve in the armed forces and, therefore, should have a voice in government."

Kasperek by the time a person is 18 he or she is through high school and into college and should be better qualified to vote than many others that are older."

Robert Watts, E. Oak street, Mason:

"It is hard to decide the question of 18-year-olds voting as it depends entirely on the individual. Some 18-year-olds are more qualified at 18 than others in the older age groups."

"We like to think with age and maturity comes knowledge, but this is not always so. The entire issue is a question of when a person is old enough to think clearly and cast an intelligent ballot."

Dick Lyon, 1435 S. Ives road, Mason: "Yes I sure do think 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote. This particular age group today is more mature than the 18-year-olds of the past."

"The young people are the ones called on to fight for their country, therefore, they should have the right to vote. Young people of today are better educated and have to know what's going on -- they should make good voters."

Mrs. L.P. Morse, 726 S. Hall Boulevard, Mason: "I wouldn't think 18-year-olds should vote. We are pushing young people too fast and trying to make them grow up too soon."

"I do believe that 18-year-olds could do a pretty good job of voting but don't think it should be forced upon them. Actually I don't really think the majority of 18-year-olds want to vote."

Mrs. Morse

Are the Polls Accurate?

By Elmer E. White

Predictions of coming events are frequently most interesting if viewed in retrospect.

Political polls measuring potential voter sentiment often provide the most interesting look after that sentiment has been expressed at the election booth.

Polls by newspapers and private organizations are reported periodically throughout the campaign and the statistics can change greatly as the campaign progresses.

This year's gubernatorial campaign, upon which so much national attention was focused, produced no startling public polls except perhaps from the shifting number of "undecided" voters. Gov. George Romney maintained a healthy majority from the start.

One private poll, which gained little attention, may provide the most interesting evaluation in retrospect, however.

Charles Orlebeke, a high-ranking aide to the Republican chief executive, disclosed the results of a private poll taken on behalf of Romney.

An overwhelming majority of the voters, 85 percent to be exact, approved of the job being done the past four years by the Romney administration, Orlebeke said.

An election margin of this size would no doubt further boost the 1968 potential of the Republican governor. How close does this private survey come to your district's vote?

HELP FOR RETARDED
Financial difficulties are threatening a 15-month-old project of the State Mental Health department, but officials hope to salvage much through redesign of the program.

The TOP program, for Training, Opportunity and Placement, was operating primarily on a U.S. Department of Labor grant. This money will be exhausted by January 1, when Department officials hope to switch to state support.

TOP aims to place retarded persons in the community; to help them find jobs and homes and to improve work skills as they adapt to a normal life.

Some 575 persons from various state institutions were referred to the project for potential placement and 240 patients were placed. Most of these are still on the job.

Dr. V.A. Stehman, assistant department director for services to the mentally retarded, reports that the shift in financial support will essentially require a shift in focus and administrative changes in the program.

Emphasis is placed on strengthening services to the patients already placed, although new placements will continue to some extent, he said.

In the first 15 months of the program each participating institution had a full-time TOP evaluator and placement officers were stationed in various metropolitan areas.

Administratively, the change means the placement officers and evaluation team will be based at the department's Lansing office and travel around the state as the need arises.

Basic idea behind the project will not change; to teach the retarded patient some job skill and personal pride so he can resume life on the outside.

Stehman notes that several of those placed early in the program were given jobs requiring little skill, such as car washing. Time and normal social contacts have already helped many of these improve their abilities so they are ready to move on to new challenges.

Follow-up supervision of those already placed will serve to strengthen the program, says Stehman.

SILENT DEATH
Silent killer. Have you ever heard of it? Could it be in your home?

As many as 100 lives have been lost annually in Michigan to the silent killer despite regular warnings from the State Health department.

The silent killer is more commonly known as carbon monoxide but gains its nickname because it has no visible color and no odor, but it lurks wherever there is combustion, such as canned heat, gas refrigeration, a furnace, or auto engine.

Prevention is very simple; just provide adequate ventilation. An open window providing a good strong draft in the house, garage or heated car can eliminate almost all of the accidental exposures to carbon monoxide fumes.

Regular inspection of home heating systems, gas appliances and auto exhaust systems is also recommended to eliminate the possibility of faulty mechanisms leading to carbon monoxide leaks.

After the business meeting, games were played and refreshments of coffee, cider, doughnuts, pumpkin pie and Halloween treats were served.

Under 21

Pros and Cons Of Voting Age

By Douglas Dilday

A subject of great controversy at this time is the voting age, whether it should be lowered to 18 or remain at 21 years.

This has been a subject that the generation under 21 has had on their minds for a long time and has given rise to different views, naturally both pro and con. Some are as follows:

Pro: Society has been making adults out of the younger generation for some time, for example: At the age of 12, adult prices are paid for admission fees and dues regardless of its purpose. By the time we are 15 we are taught to drive an automobile and at 16 we are allowed a driver's license and a working permit so we could earn our way, where 20 years ago this could be done at the age of 14. At eighteen, we can marry, be drafted and die for our country and even enter a college of our choice and choose our own careers.

If all this can be done before 21, why does maturity play such a strong factor on voting in an important election? At eighteen, a teenager is more apt to have a better knowledge of politics and current events than most adults who have been away from school and most of the educational programs for several years.

Teenagers today are accepted as adults only when it pleases the parents, law makers and individual persons so involved.

Con: The voting age should remain at 21 because today's younger generation is too restless, riotous and demonstrations are beginning to be a way of life in some areas. They are too confused. Some don't even have a definite decision on what they want out of life until the age of 21 and some are not too sure even then.

Our Heritage of a democracy is the greatest gift ever given to us and we wouldn't want it to become destroyed by confused and uncertain persons, who might not even be too sure what it's all about.

Responsibility comes soon enough without having to make such an important decision. Today's teenager has a great acceptance to many things in life, but time itself is against him for the kind of wisdom needed in choosing the highest leaders of our country.

The issues mentioned in the Pros and Cons of voting at 18, are only a few in this current controversy, but they all come from the generation under 21.

★ LETTERS

I have four boys in Service. Three of them, by coincidence, were home on leave late in September and October. Two got home on time, but the third was stuck in New York on a very busy Saturday after the air strike was settled.

It looked like he and another serviceman would have to wait at least 48 hours or try for a bus. Out of nowhere some other passengers took them to lunch, refused to let them pay for a thing and put them on their plane with a smile and handshake.

They found out only that the seats belonged to members of a band who said they could wait for another flight.

Ben got home Saturday afternoon and Tim had to leave early Tuesday morning. Those extra hours together were very precious to all of us. The boys had not seen each other for nearly two years.

As long as there are people like this, willing to give a helping hand along the way, without thought of return or fanfare of any kind, it makes it just a little easier for mothers like me to send our boys on their way.

May God bless them and reward them in his own special way, whoever and wherever they may be.

Here are some examples of the costs of the liquor industry to the taxpayers of Michigan. Please note that the costs of liquor related problems are four (4) times greater than the amount of liquor revenue collected. In Pontiac, Michigan, the costs were found to be 14 times greater than the liquor revenue.

November 3, 1966

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Voter of Vevay Township:

One of the issues the voters of our township will be asked to vote upon at the November 8 election will be the following question:

"Shall the sale of spirits in addition to beer and wine be permitted for consumption on the premises within the township of Vevay under the provisions of law governing same?"

DO THE TAXPAYERS OF MICHIGAN IN FACT BENEFIT FROM THE SALE OF LIQUOR as indicated in the letter you received from Messrs. John and Stan Levandowski, future proprietors of the Red Coach restaurant?

NO, Mr. and Mrs. Voter, THEY DO NOT! The picture of all the "clear revenue" which the taxpayers are supposed to realize from the sale of liquor was obviously and extremely one-sided.

In figuring any so-called financial "benefits" from liquor revenue, there are certain "liquor costs" as well. Michigan has never conducted a study of actual costs--however, several other states have. One reported revenues of $13 million from the liquor tax, and KNOWN COSTS OF ALCOHOL-RELATED PROBLEMS OF $46 million!

The cost is nearly FOUR TIMES THE INCOME, to say nothing of the unevaluated costs of broken homes and lives lost or permanently crippled in an alcohol-caused auto accident.

An objective study made by the Pontiac Press in the city of Pontiac, Michigan, showed the city received over a year's time the sum of $17,500 from liquor revenue, but that alcohol-related expenses to the city amounted to $247,000--fourteen times the amount received!

Industry suffers through absenteeism, faulty workmanship and labor turnover at an estimated cost of over $1 billion per year. Michigan workers lose more than $33 million per year which can be attributed to lost "alcoholic days". Space nor time will not permit us to innumerate the implications of alcoholism, mental illness, delinquency, crime, accidents, etc.

Liquor taxes are distributed on the basis of population--not on the amount collected from the Mason area. We in Vevay Township will not benefit from the sale of liquor in our area. The liquor license costs only $350.00 more a year than an existing tavern license. This amounts to only 80¢ per day. This would not pay for even 30 minutes of law enforcement per tavern per day. We urge you, Mr. and Mrs. Voter, to cast your vote for the well-being of our homes and on the side of safety and savings.

VOTE NO on the liquor-by-the-glass proposition November 8.

Sincerely yours,
Vevay Township Citizens
United Against Liquor By the Glass

P. S. On the flyer attached to your letter from the Messrs. Levandowski, it was indicated that the liquor tax helps pay for highway construction and maintenance. This is not true. Highway costs are underwritten at the state level entirely from a restricted fund financed by highway user taxes (gasoline and weight taxes.) See Article 9, Section 9, of the State Constitution of 1963.

Traffic Accidents Continue Drop in County

Ingham county continues to show a decline in traffic accidents for 1966.

For the 9th consecutive month figures submitted to the Lansing Mayor's Committee on Traffic Safety reveal that Ingham is one of the few areas in the country where the traffic toll is not increasing at an alarming rate.

Although accidents involving motorcycles have doubled, records of enforcement agencies compiled by the Safety Council of Greater Lansing show a total decline of 341 traffic accidents, during the first 9 months of 1966 as compared with last year.

During this period traffic claimed 29 lives in the county, a drop of five from the figure of 34 for 1965. In contrast to this record, officials point out that Calhoun county, with about half the population of Ingham, also recorded 29 deaths during the first nine months of the year.

The only gain in Ingham County during the period was in the number of personal injury accidents and the number of persons injured. During the period there were 2,106 personal injury accidents in which 3,249 persons were injured as compared with 2,024 accidents in which 3,071 persons were injured last year.

Estimated economic loss in all accidents in the county in the first nine months was placed at $7,051,450, based on the National Safety Council formula, which is far under the loss of over $12,000,000 recorded last year. If this trend is maintained officials believe the loss this year will be under the $10,000,000 figure.

The largest decline in accidents was 431 in the number involving property damage. Many factors are advanced by officials for the area drop in accidents in the face of rising state and national tolls. These include stepped up enforcement with more police vehicles on the roads, the use of radar in Lansing, improved intersections and streets, driver improvement and education programs, and a continuous effort to keep drivers alert to dangers. All enforcement agencies reported an increase in arrest for traffic violations during the nine month period.

On Issue Before Voters

Fixed Millage

Here Are Questions and Answers

Ingham county voters next Tuesday will express themselves on a "fixed millage" plan.

A combined committee of school and governmental personnel this week drew up a series of questions and answers raised in connection with the issue.

The committee is composed of John M. Patriarche, East Lansing, chairman of the Ingham county tax allocation board; Alton J. Stroud, Mason, superintendent of the Ingham Intermediate school district; and Robert Walter, Lansing, business manager of Lansing public schools.

The questions and answers follow:

Q. What is meant by "fixed millage?"

A. A plan under which each governmental unit is assigned a maximum tax rate which remains constant, year after year.

Q. How does this differ from present practice?

A. A County Tax Allocation Board annually divides 15 mills between the several units—school districts, county, townships, and intermediate district.

Q. What authority is there for the adoption of fixed millage?

A. Article IX of the 1963 Michigan Constitution, implemented by Act 278 of the 1964 legislature, provided the people of the county approve. It further provides that the combined rates for all units may go up to but not exceed 18 mills.

$9,290 Bid OK'ed For Bookmobile

The Ingham county library board has accepted a bid from the Gerstenslager company of Wooster, Ohio for a new bookmobile body, which is slightly larger than the present one. The new body will hold 2,100 books as compared to the present one which carries but 1,600.

The bid accepted amounted to $9,290.15. Delivery is expected in April or May of next year.

The board rejected 2 bids for the bookmobile chassis and is seeking at least 3 bids on the chassis for the next board meeting on November 9.

Q. Hasn't a fixed millage plan been previously voted on in Ingham County?

A. Yes. In April of 1965, it failed passage by some 3300 votes out of a total of 28,000 cast.

Q. What millage rates are in the proposition being voted on November 8?

A. County, 6.55 mills; school districts, 10.25 mills; townships, 1 mill; intermediate school district, .2 mill. Total—18 mills.

Q. Supposing a unit, school district for example, requires more operating funds than the assigned tax rate provides?

A. It would go to the people for an extra millage vote the same as at present.

Q. How were rates in the November 8 proposal arrived at?

A. The rates are exactly the same as those voted on in 1965. By unanimous vote the Ingham County Tax Allocation Board decided to re-submit the same rates since they were proposed by a group of county and school representatives following considerable study.

Q. What are the arguments for fixed millage?

A. Foremost, under fixed millage, a unit will definitely know its tax rate and can manage its financial affairs without risk of losing a portion of its anticipated tax revenue.

Q. Does this mean, then, that a unit could do better planning?

A. Definitely.

Q. Are there other advantages?

A. Schools, particularly, have to go to their electors for extra millage votes. Under fixed millage they can better determine the rate required and avoid setting requests at a rate high enough to allow for the possibility of losing a portion of their anticipated tax rate.

Q. You refer to the possibility of one unit losing to another a portion of anticipated tax revenue. Has this ever happened?

A. Yes. The basic allocated rate for schools has been reduced in each of the last 3 years. Over-all this reduction represents an annual $310,000 revenue loss to Ingham schools, based on present valuations.

Q. Wasn't this the fault of the Tax Allocation Board which divides the millage?

A. This is not contended. The Board, by law, evaluates needs of the respective unit and bases its decision on this evaluation. The point is that schools, as other units, are unprepared to forfeit expected revenue.

Q. This proposal raises the tax limitation from 15 to 18 mills? Won't this result in an automatic tax increase of 3 mills to everyone?

A. No. For many years now the 15 mill limitation hasn't limited. Total tax rates above 15 mills have consistently been voted, particularly by school districts. This won't change under the 18 mill proposal. Increasing enrollments and costs will continue to force extra millage votes. The difference is that under fixed millage the amount voters are asked to provide may be reduced by the extent that this proposal increases the allocated portion of the tax rate.

Q. Agreed that under this proposal schools may be able to reduce the millage requests they would otherwise have to make, how about the county and intermediate district? Together the plan allows them about 3/4 mill more than they are now using.

A. This is true. However, remember two things: first, budgets of these units which are adopted by elected officials responsible to the people must stand the glare of public hearings and second, meeting the needs of a growing population will require some additional tax revenue in any event.

FINGERS CROSSED—Patient Wallace Van Stratt and employee Bea Rathbun at Ingham Medical hospital are keeping their fingers crossed for a landslide vote in favor of Ingham Medical hospital's expansion bond issue. Voters will decide for or against a $9.2 million hospital expansion bond issue on November 8.

Hopes Are High For Affirmative Hospital Vote

"Keep your fingers crossed" has become the byword at Ingham Medical hospital these days.

Patients, employees and visitors to the hospital have all picked up the catchy slogan. With a $9.2 million bond

Mason Girl Is Named to College Post

Miss Christen Bergland, of Mason has been appointed resident assistant for one of the college-approved apartment houses at Grand Valley State college at Allendale, Michigan. She is the daughter of Oscar Bergland, 673 E. Columbia, Mason.

issue on the ballot November 8 for urgently needed hospital expansion, they are keeping their fingers crossed that people will understand and vote "Yes".

The proposed expansion would almost double the capacity of the present hospital. At the same time, the hospital's cardio-vascular department would be enlarged into a center for coronary research and the treatment of heart defects. Ingham Medical is the only hospital in the area equipped for open heart surgery.

Another feature of the expansion would be the construction of a children's psychiatric unit. While other local facilities are available for the psychiatric care of adults, no similar facilities are available in the greater Lansing area for disturbed children.

The proposed children's unit would serve 3 counties.

Ingham Medical's expansion has been approved and endorsed by the county board of supervisors, and the Greater Lansing Chamber of Commerce in addition to other civic and professional organizations.

Michigan Resorts Ready for Winter Vacation Season

Michigan, one of the nation's leading winter vacation areas, is ready to host many thousands of skiers and other winter sports enthusiasts during the 1966-67 winter vacation season, according to the Michigan Tourist Council.

More than 250,000 skiers are expected to join in the fun, usually beginning about Thanksgiving Day and continuing into April, spending about $28 million to enjoy the thrill of a downhill run on new fallen snow.

Many more are expected to take part in non-ski activities such as ice fishing, hunting, ice skating, snowmobiling, tobogganing and the many special events that dot the Michigan winter vacation calendar.

The 1966-67 edition of the Michigan Winter Sports Map, distributed free of charge by the Tourist Council, lists 83 winter sports centers and their facilities, including two new areas, Barn Mountain in Boyce City and Paradise Valley Ski Park off M-47 near Oakley, south of Saginaw.

Skiers returning to their favorite hills and haunts will find that many major improvements have been made since they reluctantly put away their skis last season. Throughout the summer, many resorts have expanded their slopes, built lodges, added snow-making and grooming equipment, and expanded dining facilities and cocktail lounges.

New lift and tow facilities have been installed at six ski areas while two resorts are appealing to "fly-in" skiers with the addition of airplane landing strips.

For non-skiers and after ski enjoyment, two resorts have added Finnish sauna baths, three have installed heated swimming pools and two others have added ice skating rinks. Thirty-seven areas now feature night skiing, two more than last year.

In the upper peninsula, one resort has added a snowmobile trail, appealing to devotees of this fast growing sport.

Although Michigan experienced below average conditions for winter sports last season, resort operators are confident that the 1966-67 season will be a good one.

They base their optimism on the growing trend toward "northern" winter vacations and the fact that except for a few areas in New England, the Michigan snow belt consistently records more snowfall than any other point east of the Rockies.

Last year was the first in more than a decade that Michigan has experienced a downward trend in winter sports activity, but many other areas of the country catering to the ski crowd experienced similar conditions.

Progress Curbing Animal Disease Shown

Farmers, practicing veterinarians, state and federal animal health authorities, and many others have smiles on their faces these days when they look at the progress made in animal disease control work in Michigan the last few years.

R.C. Lott, Ingham county Extension agricultural agent, says the Cooperative Extension Service has aided with the educational program but the Michigan Department of Agriculture officials have carried the brunt of the enforcement of the program to eliminate certain livestock diseases.

The agent points to this progress, as reported by the Michigan and U.S. Department of Agriculture animal health leaders:

Brucellosis

Ten years ago there were 5,548 infected herds uncovered in a single year in Michigan. In the past year only 143 infected herds were uncovered. As of October 1 there were only 59 quarantined herds in Michigan. The target date for complete eradication is July 1, 1967 -- only 9 months away. Already 64 counties out of the 83 are certified brucellosis free.

Tuberculosis

In the fiscal year 1959-60, a total of 2,091 infected herds were found. In the fiscal year which ended last July 1, only 67 infected herds were found in the entire state of Michigan. Now 73 of the 83 counties are modified accredited -- that means less than 1/2 of 1 per cent infection reported in the last 3 years. This is going to be a difficult disease to eliminate, control officials say, because it can be transmitted from man to animal as well as from animal to man. Michigan State University research has made progress in developing a new test which can determine actual infection more positively.

Swine Cholera

Michigan has gone 12 consecutive months without a case of hog cholera reported. This is a new record. New requirements for vaccination and requiring swine shipped into the state to be vaccinated helped in control of this costly disease.

Dr. J.F. Quinn, veterinarian for the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Dr. C.L. Hendee, field veterinarian for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in charge of Michigan, believe the state has made real progress.

"This shows what can be done when problems are attacked with a teamwork approach. Federal and state agencies, local veterinarians, farmers and livestock men convinced legislators they needed new legislation. After the legislation was approved they set out to eliminate diseases and cut the losses to farmers and assure consumers that there was no danger in Michigan -- produced livestock marketed through legitimate channels," Mr. Lott concluded.

Top Dairyman Gives Keys To Production

Good management, breeding and feeding--it takes all three to make a high-producing dairyherd, according to Tony Cieslinski, who had Michigan's best dairy herd in 1966.

He should know--the herd on his farm near Uby was the first in Michigan to average more than 20,000 pounds of milk. The 30 Cieslinski Holsteins averaged 20,657 pounds of milk and 751 of butterfat for the year ending October 31.

Cieslinski operates his 360-acre Huron county farm with the help of his wife, Marcella, and 19-year-old son, John. Another son, Mike, is a Michigan State University student. A daughter, Mary, 11, completes the family.

Donald Hillman, MSU extension dairy specialist agrees that management, breeding and feeding are the keys to a successful dairy operation. Good practices in these three areas will result in better production from any herd, he says.

An important part of dairy management is culling, and Cieslinski uses tough standards. During the last testing year, he culled 16 animals from the herd. If Cieslinski thinks a heifer can't produce at least 15,000 pounds of milk and 500 of butterfat, she's on the way out.

Throughout the testing year, the Cieslinski herd consumed an average of 6,000 pounds of grain per cow. That's the state average for DHIA herds, says Paul Wilkes, DHIA executive secretary. Cieslinski raises his own herd replacements, with Mrs. Cieslinski caring for the calves. She also is frequently called upon as an emergency replacement for her husband or son at milking time.

For the most part, Cieslinski handles the dairy end of the operation, and John takes care of the field work on the farm's 280 tillable acres.

Cieslinski finds time to serve as treasurer of the Uby Community School board and as a director at large of the Michigan Animal Breeders Co-Op, headquartered at East Lansing.

He is thoroughly "sold" on artificial breeding. Almost all the cows now in the herd are artificial breeding progeny. His top producer, though, is not. She is one of the original members of the present herd, and produced 25,790 pounds of milk and 842 pounds of butterfat in 312 days.

Cieslinski makes sure his herd gets only top-quality hay. If a cow leaves some hay in the manger, it isn't left for her to eat later. The leftover hay is removed and replaced with a fresh batch at the next feeding time.

Besides their daily grain ration of a pound for each 2.5 to 3 pounds of milk produced, the Cieslinski cows get about 25 pounds of haylage or silage and all the hay they want.

The top ten Michigan herds in DHIA production are: Cieslinski; A. Potgieter, Allendale, 18,790 milk, 697 butterfat; Jack Kaufman, Sandusky, 18,591 milk, 676 butterfat; Wesley Parker, St. Clair, 16,497 milk, 674 butterfat; Stewart Taylor, Marlette, 18,861 milk, 665 butterfat; Jon Goudzwaard, Byron Center, 16,613 milk, 648 butterfat; R. and A. Lettinger, Wayland, 17,052 milk, 646 butterfat; N. Sandbrook, Nashville, 17,122 milk, 644 butterfat; G. Shuler and sons, Baroda, 18,940 milk, 643 butterfat; and Ionia State hospital, 18,492 milk, 642 butterfat.

State Police Seek Women Recruits

For the first time in their history, the Michigan state police are seeking recruits for state policewomen. Colonel Frederick E. Davids, director, announced.

Initially two policewomen will be employed in community relations and juvenile work. These positions were included in 5 authorized for this purpose by the legislature this year. The state police requested the additional positions, recognizing a need for them because of the growing emphasis given to community relations and juvenile rehabilitation activities.

Applications will be accepted by the state civil service department at Lansing until 5 p.m., Monday, November 14. Application blanks and position information may be obtained from the department or from any State Police post.

Eligible to apply for the state policewoman I position are women, married or single, who are 21 or 30 years old inclusive, at least 5 feet 2 inches but not more than 5 feet 9 inches tall, with weight not under 110 pounds.

Candidates must have a bachelor's degree from an accredited college, must be in good physical condition and of good moral character. They need not be residents of Michigan at the time of application but must be American citizens.

The biweekly pay range for policewoman I will be from $244 to $297.60. Any uniforms needed and equipment will be furnished and work travel expenses provided.

After two years of satisfactory service, the state policewomen will be promoted automatically to policewoman II for which the salary range would be $276 to $342.40 biweekly.

Qualified candidates will receive 11 weeks of training at East Lansing headquarters, paralleling the instruction given male trooper candidates, and there will be emphasis on training in juvenile code and procedures.

Soil Test - Don't Guess

Now is the time to collect soil samples to get ready for next spring's fertilizer needs. The soil is dry and samples can be readily mixed in a pail to obtain a representative sample of the field.

If small areas of a field are not representative, these areas should be sampled separately. Sampling soil now eliminates the last minute rush next spring. It requires a week to ten days to process the soil test, put the results on IBM to make the recommendations and to report to the owner by mail.

At the MSU soil testing laboratory, we are getting a real complete testing service for $2.00 per sample. An accurate pH test tells us the need of lime and also the need for micronutrients such as zinc, manganese, or boron.

A buffer solution in the testing procedure accurately measures the amount of lime per acre required to bring the top six inches of soil up to the pH of 6.5. At this point micronutrients are not apparently needed for most crops.

If soils are higher than pH

Recommends
Fertilizer
Use in Fall

Farmers often ask what plant nutrients can be applied in the fall and still be available to crops next spring.

Dr. John C. Shickluna says any or all three of the major fertilizer elements, as well as lime and the secondary elements, can usually be applied in the fall.

On soils relatively high in clay or organic matter, after soil temperature drops to 50 degrees, nitrogen can be applied, with little or no loss before spring. Shickluna suggests use of an ammonia form of nitrogen. He says nitrate forms are more subject to leaching and are better for spring or summer application.

Phosphorus can be applied in the fall, but should be supplemented by a high-phosphorus fertilizer at planting time on soils that test low or medium for phosphorus.

Potassium remains in the soil in an available form over winter. Crop response is just as good if treatments are made in the spring, but application of lime can be carried on any time a spreader can be put on the field. Shickluna says it is usually best to apply lime just before a small-grain or row crop.

If a legume is to be seeded, application of lime a year ahead allows it to become incorporated with the soil. Limestone generally contains plenty of calcium to meet crop needs and dolomitic limestone will help fill magnesium needs.

If micro-nutrients are needed, a small amount can be included in the fertilizer at seeding time.

6.5, 5 to 10 pounds per acre of manganese should be applied in fertilizer band near the seed on beans, wheat, oats and barley. At a pH of 6.5 or higher, 2 pounds per acre of boron is needed for alfalfa on sandy or sandy loam soils.

When the pH is as high as 7.2, zinc is needed on corn, beans and soybeans. Thus knowing the pH of your soil is very important.

The test for magnesium tells us the kind of lime, if lime is needed. Dolomitic lime contains 40 percent magnesium carbonate and is the most seasonable source of magnesium. Dolomitic lime is definitely needed when the test for magnesium is under 75 pounds per acre. We have had some soil samples testing as low as 6 pounds of magnesium.

We consider 36 pounds of phosphorus and 180 pounds of potash as the dividing points between high and low. When we receive the IBM form from the MSU laboratory, we then transfer this information into the recommended nutrient application for the crop to be grown and at the yield the soil is usually capable of producing.

Why not take advantage of reasonable soil testing service and get your soils tested this fall before the ground freezes?

New Director
To Head MSU
Short Courses

Dr. Harold J. Ecker has been named director of short courses in the College of Agriculture at Michigan State University. A member of the short course department staff since 1959, his November 1 appointment was approved this month by the MSU Board of Trustees.

Dr. Ecker, a native of Fostoria, Ohio, succeeds Dr. Harold Henneman who rejoined the staff of the Department of Animal Husbandry at MSU. The new director presently is coordinator of the agricultural industries training program.

Michigan State's agricultural short course programs have gained national reputation. This fall more than 400 students are enrolled in the agricultural industries courses and young farmer programs. Over a 70-year span, nearly 20,000 have participated in short course programs.

The new director received both undergraduate and graduate degrees from Ohio State. From 1955-1959 he was an instructor in the OSU Department of Agricultural Economics. A member of the American Marketing Association and the American Farm Economics association, he is well known in the grain marketing field and for his work in farm elevator management.

Map Safety Program To Improve Driver Behavior

Machinery is being geared up this month by the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police for a new safety enforcement emphasis program designed to improve the driving behavior of motorists and to help reverse Michigan's rising traffic toll.

Spokesmen for the chief's association have emphasized their concern over the state's worsening traffic accident situation. They point out that while motor vehicles increased 20 percent and travel increased 27 percent between 1961 and 1965, deaths have gone up 36 percent, casualties 66 percent and total reported accidents 55 percent.

Unless this trend is forced downward, the next few months threaten to make 1966 the worst in Michigan's history.

The chief's association adopted the enforcement plan at its recent annual meeting upon recommendation of its Safety and Traffic committee. Under the plan, all police departments (including the Michigan State Police and Sheriff's departments) which wish to cooperate will, from November 11 to February 10, 1967, increase violator contacts substantially to improve driver behavior and to obtain more accurate information on operator's license status and vehicle condition.

The program is being assisted by the Michigan State university Highway Traffic Safety Center and the newly organized statewide traffic safety association, Traffic Safety For Michigan, Inc. (TSM).

Traffic Safety For Michigan, Inc., has agreed to underwrite the cost of publishing and distributing thousands of defective equipment forms and instruction materials for use by patrol officers in reporting types of defective equipment noted. This is the first formal step in support of improved traffic conditions taken by TSM since it was organized July 1.

Under the plan, vehicle and license records accumulated by patrol officers will be forwarded to the MSU Highway Traffic Safety Center for statewide compilation and summarization.

Spokesmen for the chief's association said the major benefits of the four-month emphasis program will be to:

1. Demonstrate the effects of increased violator contacts and of emphasis upon safe vehicle condition.

2. Identify the percentage of violators' vehicles having noticeable defects -- and of what types.

3. Determine the percentage of violators stopped who have operator's license violations.

4. Encourage the development of needed legislation to make Michigan streets and highways safer.

With the united effort of Michigan's police and with the cooperation of the public, enforcement officials can result in improved driving behavior -- in safer vehicles, and in facts for corrective legislation heretofore unavailable.

Banks Show Interest in Crop Loans

PRICE SUPPORT ACTIVITY IN MICHIGAN

More Michigan banks and lending institutions may become interested in financing price support loans on farm crops, according to Frank Light, chairman of the Michigan ASCS State committee.

This is due, he said, to the recent increase in interest rates from 5.2 percent to 5.7 percent per annum. The increased rate became effective October 22.

The increase is in line with recent changes in the money market. Light added, he stated that the change in August from 4.9 percent to 5.2 percent and the recent increase to 5.7 percent effective October 22 was made to encourage continued participation by private lenders in the financing of Commodity Credit Corporation loan programs.

Light emphasized that the increase will not be retroactive and also will not affect the interest rate on commodity loans obtained by farmers through the county ASCS offices. The interest rate for commodity loans will remain approximately 3-1/2 percent to producers, he added.

Light reminded farmers that price support loans are available in Michigan on 1966 crops of wheat, oats, barley, rye, grain sorghums, corn, soybeans, honey, flaxseed and dry edible beans. He noted that dry edible bean classes grown in Michigan eligible for price support loans are: pea beans, dark and light red kidney, small reds, pinto and pink. Other classes such as cranberries and yellow-eyes grown in Michigan are not eligible for price support, he added.

George Parker, Program Specialist at the Michigan ASCS State Office, reported that there was increased participation in price support programs in Michigan over a year ago in wheat, oats and dry edible beans. It is also anticipated that there will be increased participation on 1966-crop corn and soybeans, he added, when these crops have been harvested.

Consumers' Week Starting Monday

Helping consumers become competent in clarifying values and needs, making purchase choices, and using purchases effectively is being emphasized during Michigan Consumers' Week, November 7-11.

During the week, sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service, local extension service offices are issuing open invitations to consumers to get acquainted and take advantage of the information available to consumers, especially assembled by the Extension home economists.

"Values" in one family will be very different than they will be in another. But in any family, the things that contribute to the kind of life and the kind of living the family wants are really that family's goals, and these things determine the values a family places upon its resources.

Clearly, the family should set its important goals together, with agreement as to what is worth working for, waiting for, perhaps sacrificing for. If it's money that's required to reach the goals, there's need for shrewd management of the family finances and knowledge of how to make each dollar spent buy its full share of satisfaction.

Dr. Margaret Jacobson, Family Life Specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service at MSU, commented recently that a person's time, money, energy, talent and needs are guides in making consumer decisions and choices.

In relating values and their influences on decisions consumers make, Dr. Jacobson noted that some authorities argue that the sphere of consumer decisions has become narrower and narrower in spite of the volume of goods produced. People who control production decide what is to be consumed and through advertising create wants, so we will consume what is produced, the argument goes. On the other hand, it is argued that consumers DO influence what is produced -- manufacturers conduct surveys to find out what we need and want. "If wants are contrived, this places all the more responsibility upon us to know what we value and need so we can exercise freedom of choice and not succumb to buying things we don't want or need," Dr. Jacobson elaborated.

In arranging values to aid in making consumer decisions, it's apparent that we need some things of great importance to give meaning and purpose to life. But we probably don't need many things at this top level, Dr. Jacobson observed.

"Below the 'musts' in ranks are higher preferences--important, but more readily given up when we have to choose. Below these we have values which are lower or lesser influences on our selections... OK, nice, but not really crucial, and more easily given up," Dr. Jacobson continued.

In a consumption oriented society, she added, it's sometimes difficult to put a price tag on such things as health facilities, education, public housing and natural beauty which do not enter the market place in competition for the consumer dollar as goods do. Therefore, we don't always spend money for these items in the amounts needed.

If you as a consumer or as a part of the management team in your family, would like a bulletin to help you take a look at -- for example -- how many of your dollars may be going to buy consumer credit, just call or write to the Cooperative Extension Office, 127 E. Maple, Mason, Telephone 677-9411. Ask for Extension Bulletin 488, "Managing Your Family's Credit." Another publication that may help keep your family finances on an even keel is the folder called "Consumer Credit--Take a Second Look."

There is no charge for these bulletins. Your request, with your name and address, will bring you this material as a special Cooperative Extension Service feature through Consumers' Week.

Pesticide Breakdown Called 'Encouraging'

A pair of Michigan State university scientists have found that some microorganisms can break down some pesticides in laboratory cultures.

This breakdown -- or "degradation," as the scientists call it -- is not complete. Furthermore, the degraded compound is often still toxic.

Even so, the MSU plant pathologists who made these findings, Drs. C.I. Chacko and John L. Lockwood, are very encouraged by the results.

"At least it's a start," exclaims Lockwood. "The next step will be to look for microorganisms that will break down these pesticides further."

"Or, we might find a way to stimulate the microorganisms in the soil so they will do a better job of degradation than they do under natural conditions."

Lockwood explains that microorganisms can't use chlorinated hydrocarbon pesticides as their sole source of food. They need other "food" for more active growth and better degradation of pesticide residues.

In their study, Chacko and Lockwood tested the effects of soil microorganisms on three chlorinated hydrocarbon pesticides: DDT, dieldrin and PCNB (pentachloronitrobenzene). The microorganisms tested were fungi, bacteria and actinomycetes (a form of bacteria).

None of the microorganisms could break down dieldrin.

But a number of actinomycetes broke down DDT to DDD. While DDD is still toxic, the scientists were encouraged that further breakdown might be made possible by somehow stimulating actinomycetes.

With PCNB, all of the actinomycetes and most of the fungi partially degraded the pesticide. Chacko and Lockwood are not sure about the toxicity of the remaining compounds, but again they are "encouraged" -- especially since this is the first report of degradation of this chemical.

Chacko and Lockwood point out that other pesticides, such as the organic phosphorus compounds, break down almost automatically in the soil.

But laboratory results in culture media indicate that chlorinated hydrocarbons are rapidly taken up by microorganisms and held there. If this also happens in soil, uptake by these microorganisms might be an important means by which these pesticides persist.

The full effect of these residues is not fully understood, but it is believed they cause some harm if consumed by animals or if washed into streams or lakes where they can come in contact with fish.

Therefore, any research designed to keep this from happening could be very important.

Attend Breakfast

DANSVILLE -- Roscoe Arnold, Warren Mueller, O.B. Cornett, and Roland Wing attended the Methodist Men's breakfast, sponsored by the Area Group Ministry, at the Munith Methodist church, Sunday morning. Dr. Leroy G. Augenstein of Holt was the speaker.

Agriculture In Action

Two new farm words are coming into increased use in Michigan -- "distressed" and "abandoned." These are emotion-packed words used by Michigan fruit and vegetable farmers to describe what has happened to many of their crops.

"Distressed" or "abandoned" are costly words too. In the case of apples, they describe a loss estimated at around $1.00 per bushel minimum, for hundreds of thousands of bushels left to rot and freeze because of non-existent harvest help.

Farm labor recruiters tried every trick in the book, but the tricks didn't help get the peppers picked or the apples off the trees. Tomatoes, cucumbers by the acre, and similar "labor intensive" crops have been left to rot in the fields in a year when weather problems had already caused substantial shortages.

Three of four million bushels of apples have been listed in the distressed category -- about 25% of the total crop, some estimate, with the loss directly attributed to the lack of harvest help. Efforts to recruit out-of-state labor have been frustrating.

Growers say that the only real solution is for the Federal Farm Labor Service to relent its policy of not allowing "off-shore" or foreign labor to come to the states to harvest crops which local, domestic labor has repeatedly spurned.

Part-time pickers and school youngsters have been a poor answer to a labor situation where professional pickers are needed. One grower points to his partially picked orchard, where workers bothered to remove only apples near the ground.

Worst of all, farmers will again be blamed for higher prices of food, a blame supported by no evidence. Housewives, perplexed by the rising costs of food, must learn that their problems do not originate either in the grocery stores or on the farms, rather that inflated food tags are attached in Washington where both inflation and restrictive farm labor policies originate.

The housewives' most effective boycott is not against supermarkets (most of which operate on even smaller margins than do farmers) but against those Congressmen who consistently vote for programs which force farmers to use such words as "distressed" and "abandoned" to describe high-value food crops.

A PREDICTION

Arctic May Become The Hub of the World

The frozen and desolate Arctic, land of the Eskimo and the polar bear, may one day become the "hub of the world," a center for transport, industry, even agriculture.

The prediction is made in the current issue of Petroleum Today magazine, in an article entitled: "The Arctic, Land of Frozen Assets." The assets include vast stores of gold, iron, nickel, oil, and other minerals that are attracting increasing numbers of settlers to the Far North.

There is more to the Arctic, the magazine points out, than ice. During summer months, when temperatures may reach 100 degrees Fahrenheit, the frozen tundra thaws, and hillsides are blanketed with flowers. Gardens produce foot-long carrots and cabbages the size of soccer balls.

In Arctic Sweden school children bask under ultraviolet lamps to compensate for the lack of sunshine in winter; Greenlanders are served by regularly scheduled helicopter flights; the Soviet Union has a dozen Arctic cities with populations of 50,000 or more. The strategic importance of the Arctic has led the U.S., Canada, and the Soviet Union to establish extensive research and military facilities above the polar circle.

During recent years, the magazine reports, one of the most dramatic Arctic developments has been the search for oil on the Arctic Slope of Alaska. The task, to find the petroleum to help meet U.S. energy needs of the future.

The investment required is substantial. A typical Arctic oil well costs more than $1 million. Men and equipment must be transported hundreds of miles into the isolated Brooks Mountain Range and maintained there for weeks and months on end. In the case of one well, drill rig and equipment were airlifted 330 miles from Fairbanks, Alaska, to a crude runway at the drilling site; it took a giant freighter 72 round trips to complete the job.

The Arctic operations have challenged the oilman's ingenuity. They have learned to use live steam to thaw frozen antifreeze in temperatures of -60 degrees Fahrenheit. Barrels of oil must sometimes be rolled into wood fires to make the oil thaw. Geologists have learned to keep dangerous wild animals at a distance; for example, they shout or sing when approaching a lake where a bear might be fishing.

Most drilling is conducted in winter months when the surface is frozen; in warm weather much of the area turns into swampy muskeg. The hard winter surface is fine for supporting a drilling rig, but the heat from the machinery on the rig turns the ground soupy. One solution that oilmen have devised is reminiscent of selling ice boxes to Eskimos. A system of tubing carrying refrigerating fluid is placed in the icy ground beneath the rig - helping to keep the frozen north frozen.

Be a Michigan Minuteman. Take a minute to tell someone how mighty Michigan is in size.

-Its rivers and streams would reach one and a half times around the world.

-Its shoreline is longer than either the U.S. Atlantic coastline or Pacific coastline.

-Its total land area of 35,494,080 acres is larger than Greece, larger than Switzerland and Portugal combined, and nearly five times the size of Belgium.

-Its area includes 57,022 square miles of land and nearly 40,000 square miles of water surface. In land and water area combined, it is the largest state east of the Mississippi and ranks tenth in the nation.

Ways To Encourage Better Breakfasts

Children, like adults, perform better when fed an adequate breakfast. Now that school is well under way and a child's performance is especially important, you should make sure your child doesn't skip this important meal, advises Portia Morris, nutrition specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service at Michigan State University.

With an adequate breakfast your child will be able to perform better both mentally and physically. This was documented by careful research studies a few years ago, and yet many children start the school day without breakfast, Dr. Morris says. Some teachers have reported as many as one-third of their pupils omit their morning meal.

Dr. Morris offers several suggestions for encouraging your child to eat breakfast. These are based on questionnaires given to school children.

A child will be most willing to eat breakfast if he is unhurried in the morning. Getting to bed early enough to be ready to get up on time may be the answer.

Breakfasts that are interesting and varied are more enticing to young children. Instead of serving the same menu, use some of your child's favorite foods and alternate the meal pattern for interest.

Together with just as important as the morning meal as it is in the evening. Mrs. Morris says your child's breakfast will seem more important to him if he doesn't have to eat alone.

Like other meals, breakfast should be a time for interesting conversation. This means pleasant and happy emotional climate.

Livestock Feed Short In North

County disaster committees from 30 counties in the upper half of Michigan including the upper peninsula, have indicated there was a severe shortage of livestock feed due to last summer's drought according to Frank Light, chairman of the state disaster committee.

Light explained that the state disaster committee consists of the chairman of the state ASC committee, the director of Farmers Home Administration and the state director of the Federal Extension Service. Representatives of this committee are currently surveying the drought area to determine the extent of need. When the survey is completed, the state disaster committee will forward their recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman. Incidentally, the secretary was in Michigan last week and flew over much of the drought area during his visit.

In the areas declared as emergency or disaster areas by the Secretary of Agriculture, Light explained, government-owned feed stocks may be sold to eligible livestock men at less than the statutory minimum price which is 105% of the price support rate plus carrying charges.

Light pointed out that all livestock owners in counties designated as disaster areas are not necessarily eligible to purchase government-owned grain at the cheaper prices.

The Livestock feed program was designed to preserve and maintain foundation herds and prevent widespread liquidation of livestock until new feed supplies are available.

Northern Pike Inland Waters, Statewide The Conservation Commission amends this order under Act 230, P.A. 1925, as amended, as follows:

One year from January 1, 1967, it shall be unlawful to take or possess northern pike from March 1 to May 14, inclusive, from any inland waters of this state except in Michigan - Wisconsin interstate boundary waters where northern pike may be taken from last Saturday in April through second Sunday in September.

Approved September 9, 1966.

Schools Get $16,500 Loan At Leslie

LESLIE--The only bid received for the purchase of $16,500 in notes plus interest was accepted from the People's Bank of Leslie by the Leslie board of education at a special meeting last week. The loan is in anticipation of taxes due in December 1967 from the building and site fund. The new parking lot at the high school is to be equipped with 4 lights as soon as the board approves the purchase of the lights and poles. This is expected to cost about $500.

Several special committees to draw guide lines on policy negotiations and school finance was discussed by the board and the following persons will serve: J.B. Hyatt and M.L. Pixley on the policy committee, Wilfred Watowski, John Frey and Norman Mitchell on the negotiating committee and Homer Snyder and John Smid on the finance committee.

The board has called a meeting for November 15 to discuss building facilities.

In other action the board tables for more study a request of kindergarten bus drivers for an increase in wages of $100 because of the increased length of routes and time involved.

MSU Buildings Are Named for Wells, Baker

Two new buildings under construction at Michigan State university have been named for two prominent 19th century citizens.

The new language and mathematics building, to be completed in March, 1967, will be named Wells Hall, and a new six-story office building, scheduled for occupancy next fall, will be Baker Hall.

Hezekiah G. Wells, a lawyer and county judge of Kalamazoo, helped found MSU and as a member of the State Board of Agriculture from 1861 to 1883 helped keep it alive and prospering.

Ray Stannard Baker, an early alumnus of the land-grant college, became a founder of American magazine, the official biographer of Woodrow Wilson and a benefactor of the university.
