Adrenaline rush: Stage fright.
Nerves before the big test.
Butterflies on the first date.
Pride after performing.
Compassion when showing support. Success after preparation.
Triumph with graduation.

What gets your heart beating?

We've Got Spirit, Yes We Do

We've Got Spirit, How About You?

Excited. The dance team, led by junior Mallory Lyons, freshman Alexis Doyle, sophomore Stephanie Button, senior Kelsie Schafer, juniors Haley Livingston and Holly Eastman, and senior Tori Rueckert-Boettger get the crowd pumped. "I try to give it my all in every performance," junior Haley Livingston said.

Going To Work. Blue collar workers was the theme of the day as seniors Adalena Garcia and Abigail Cottom, junior Marisa Dumond and senior Chloe Henley dressed for the job.

Coach Rarick? On dress like a teacher day, sophomore Cade Butch imitated Coach Jack Rarick.

Tropical Island. Dressed for a luau, seniors Haley McFarland and Jason Zioikowski show their hula attire on Hawaiian Day.

King For A Day. Showing his Holt-Ram pride, Senior Nathaniel Haering shines in gold and brown.

School spirit comes in many shapes and forms. Senior Haley McFarland showed hers by participating in spirit week. "It was my last one and I really just wanted to go all out," McFarland said. To her, school spirit can be shown by going to games, joining sports, and cheering. Sophomore Mallory Weil's favorite spirit day was brown and

To sophomore Kristi Harless, school spirit is "supporting your peers and supporting what it means to be a Holt Ram." During the pep assembly, activities bring classes together. Senior Samantha Myers participated in the tog-of-war. "It got me more enthusiastic, making me want to win for my class," Myers said.

Smile. Regardless of the weather, seniors Chloe Henley and Eric Dawdy smile as they are crowned prince and princess.

One Last Dance. The homecoming court completed their busy day with one final dance. Jordan Mata, Lauren Potter, Eric Dawdy, Chloe Henley, senior Aaliyah Oliver, Nathaniel Haering, junior Sanda Vazgec, senior Anthony Reis, and sophomores Dalton Gibson and Megan Kelly.

Keeps Getting Better

The Winterfest tradition grows through the years.

When compared to last year, most students enjoyed this year's Winterfest activities more. At the pep assembly, the dance team, step team and cheerleaders all participated in events to entertain the crowd in an orderly fashion.

"The pep assembly was more organized," junior Tanner Beachnau said. "Everything went smoothly, and the pep assembly kept everyone interested for the whole hour."

Not only was the assembly a show of pride, the week of Winterfest was filled with people who had spirit. Every day of the Winterfest week was devoted to displaying a certain theme.

"The best part of spirit week was seeing people participating. It's always something that I look forward to," senior Erin Bureau said. "It's a good excuse to be goofy. And as a senior, I feel I should put forth the effort and spirit."

Following the assembly and both the boys and girls basketball games on Friday night, the Winterfest dance took place on Saturday.

"The dance was better because more people went," sophomore Emily Krueger said. "Most of the school was there and having fun." Royalty. After being crowned King and Queen, seniors Sawyer Mcfadden and Jessie Golden walk in front of fans before the boys varsity basketball game. "It's just cool to know that your classmates voted for you as king," McFadden said

Royalty. During the basketball game, seniors Patrick Carrier and Monique Bailhe walk across the court as prince and princess. "I liked walking with Patrick, but it was a little embarrassing because everyone was looking at me," Bailhe said.

Giddy Up. Becoming a favorite event during the pep assembly, senior Christopher Mee, junior Hailee Butler, senior Blayne White, junior Allison Nastally, junior Marcus Loveless, and senior Tori Rueckert-Boettger perform the boy/girl dance team routine. Being an experienced performer, Nastally didn't have any nerves, "We like to just go out there, have fun, and perform."

Sky High. At the pep assembly performance senior Mikalin Schlee completed the cheerleaders stunt. "I was thinking I need to focus," Schlee said. "I wasn't scared."

Seeing double. For twin day seniors Tailor Kuhn and Ashlee Bowden wore old Halloween costumes. "It's senior year. We wanted to go all out," Bowden said.

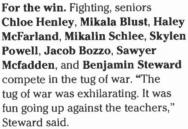

School spirit. On brown and gold day, juniors Hannah Marsh, Rachel Dillingham, Emma Webster, Gabrielle Campos, Katelyn Danford, and Terese Dragonetti show their pride.

Go team. Participating in spirit week, junior Alexander Hadick, senior Joshua Rios, junior Andrew Middleton, and senior Jordan Mata support their favorite teams.

When in Rome. At the basketball game, seniors Michael Ramer and Benjamin Majeske cheered on the team while wearing togas.

Triumphant Return.

Light Love. As they were planning a romantic evening together, Mortimer and Elaine, played by senior Amanda Viges and junior Jake Hitchcock, discuss what the evening entailed.

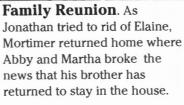

Chain of Events. Merideth Harper, played by sophomore Chelsi McMahan, enjoys a cup of tea with her neighbor Abby Brewster played by Andrea Krueger as the play started.

A Standing Ovation

Arsenic and Old Lace Proved to be a Smash Hit

Precision and dedication gives the actors of 'Arsenic and Old Lace' the ability to steal the show with an outstanding performance.

The plot of the play started out with Martha and Abby Brewster who were two elderly sisters living alone in a house that they inherited from their family. Within the community they were seen as charitable. However, they had a hidden secret. They kill men.

With extra rooms in the house, they decided that they should rent them out. But the rooms never got used because Mortimer, one of the nephews, returned to stay with them.

The plot thickened when Mortimer found out that his aunts had killed a man, which brings their total body count to 12. In a twisted turn of events, Jonathan, the second nephew returned after being away for some time.

When Jonathan returned, aided by his assistant Dr. Einstein, he had one goal set in mind –to take out Mortimer and to be the only Brewster left in the house.

Multiple things occurred over the days after Jonathan had returned, with one incident being Dr. Einstein indirectly lured Mortimer into a trap so that Jonathan could kill him.

Having fate side with Mortimer, the police show up which lead to the fall of Jonathan. This also gave way to the aunts confessing to poisoning 12 men, as well as burying them in the cellar. This allows them to go to the Sanitarium with their last nephew Teddy.

The curtain closed with the superintendent of the sanitarium drinking one last glass of wine, becoming number 13.

Reflections

The last play of your high school career:

"I am going to miss the close connection with the cast, the sense of family. And I'm also sad that I only got to work with the freshmen for a small time." -Amanda Viges

What is expected with being in the play:

"You are expected to "Memorize your lines, gain the character and to put aside all the drama in your life. You're expected to help out. You have to make the play number one, make it the most important." -Andrea Krueger

Being in character:

"It was like being angry and scary when I really wasn't. But it was a lot of fun. -Brian Thering Bad Tastes. Abby and Martha tried to increase the number of men they killed by serving their guests homemade elderberry wine while they stayed in their available rooms.

Reality Check. Abby, Mortimer and Martha share a celebration together with the news that Mortimer will be marrying Elaine as they are preparing for dinner.

Fateful End. With help of his assistant, Dr. Einstein, Jonathan plotted to rid of Mortimer once and for all to become the last Brewster.

Outside of the Classroom

Students gain experience and responsibility in real life situations.

Some students have a tough time juggling school, homework, and extracurricular activities; but many of our students also have to balance a job.

"I enjoy working because it gives me a sense of independence," junior Sanda Vazgec said. Vazgec is employed at Rue 21 working an average of 13 hours a week, also having tennis and school work to fit in as well. Some may work to save money for a car, save for college, help out the family financially, save up for something special, or just for extra spending money.

With these tough times, students are finding themselves having to finance things that aren't necessities. "I had to get a job to help pay for my trip to France," junior Hannah Marsh said, a hostess at Red Robin.

Grossman works as a server to earn money for the things she doesn't want to ask her parents for.

have to worry about making their mortgage payments, or even know what they are. Senior Haleigh DeRose knows the ins and outs of mortgage payments and makes calls reminding people to pay them.

Bring smiles to kids. Not all high school students can deal with being around kids everyday all day. Senior Scott Reid has the personality to be handle little kids and not get stressed out. Working at Chucky-E-Chesse and being around kids has helped him prepare for his future by working with children.

Compassion. Smiling, senior Raymond Clay serves coffee to a resident at the Delta Retirement Center. He has been working there for a year-and-a-half. His job includes serving food and visiting with the guests. It's easy to tell he really loves what he's doing "I feel so good after work because I know I made a difference," Clay said. Not many young people have the personality to work a job like this.

e and Shine. At 5:00 a.m. when ple may be just getting up, junior erra Carthell-Nick is already ing Burger King ready to open. "I e to pay for my own phone bill," thell-Nick said. Dressed in her superbowl favorite attire, Carthell-Nick takes an order from a hungry former Holt Ram customer.

Working vs. Nonworking

Commitment. Some students find it hard to fit working into their schedules. Senior Jordan Wood plays for The Lansing Capitals, a travel team that takes up most of his free time traveling to places such as Texas, California, and Massachusetts. Having such a big commitment makes it difficult for Wood to have a job. "I have practice everyday and games on weekends. I hate having to ask my parents for money," Wood said. Many student athletes have the same difficulties.

Hard work. Being in high school and finally being old enough to get your own job and help support yourself is a highlight to some students. For many, it's their first opportunity to work for someone and make their own money. "I'm saving all my money for the French trip over spring break," senior Kaitlyn Johnson said. With the tough times, students are finding they need to work to pay for fun trips that aren't always in the parent's budget.

Breaking Away From the Desktop

THEY KEEP GETTING SMARTER

Devices shrink in size but still have the same functions that are available on desktop computers. Whether it was in the hallways, commons, or possibly hidden under binders, these new inventions were used throughout the school. The devices brought internet, music, and e-mail in the hands of students while they were on the go. No more sitting in front of a desktop to get what was desired. Frequently used desktop features were now squeezed in pocket-sized devices.

Internet, e-mail, and navigation broke away from the stationary computer, shrinking in size and easily accessible.
These wireless wonders amped up the 20th century.

Biggest. It's bigger than a phone yet smaller than a laptop. Junior Emma Webster used her IPad to record her daily schedule.

"Class assignments, homework, and due dates are saved in my I-calendar,"Webster said.

Apps like the calculator and dictionary made homework easy and organized. Not only did it make getting help effortless, it also added enjoyment with the numerous games and music available in the ITunes store.

Read. Skip the step of ordering books on your computer and waiting days for them to arrive in the mail. The Kindle revolutionized reading. Junior Maria Williams used the kindle to its fullest capabilities. "I can make side notes in the margins and can even highlight important information," Maria said. "I can even borrow books through an online library."

Creative. Bigger than an iPhone, the Android quickly became a hot item. The Android market supplied users with free apps, music, and widgets. The ability to customize the organization of organization of your applications and widgets was the favorite feature of the Android. The Google search bar allowed you to get information whenever, wherever! "There are so many useful features on the phone. "I'm constantly using it, which, unfortunately, makes my battery die very quickly," senior Victoria Frailey said.

Advanced. The iPhone set the bar for smart devices. The iPhone had its own world separate from any other device; iTunes was the home to apps, movies, and music. The iPhone seemed to supply it all. "I can use my iPhone to type a paper and access it from any computer," junior Ashley Marroquin said. "Instead of calling or texting someone, I can FaceTime other iPhone users," Junior Sean Bulkowski said. "I like this because we can see each other while we are talking."

The iPhone made magazines and newspapers available on the go. "The News Stand is an app on the phone where you can buy magazines and flip through the pages like you would in the paper version," senior Erik Flasky said.

Tiny. The Blackberry is the smallest smart device, while packing numerous features into its dainty size. BBM (black berry messaging) separated thi phone from the rest. Students used this messaging system to send other Blackberry users free texts. "The messages use a mailing system, only available to people who have a Blackberry," senior Margaret McKay said while describing her favorite thing about the device. "BBM chats are free, they are not part of the service plan, they are part of the phone."

Breaking the Bank Vs. Saving Savvy

Students get inspired with the latest trends set by celebrities and fellow classmates

No matter the trend, there is money to spend.
Some students splurged on the latest brands which included Polo, Victoria Secret, and Hollister. Kick starting the school year, these brands were the most worn. When winter came around, many students splurged on brands like Ugg, NorthFace, and Columbia. While some were spending full price, others were searching for sales, exploring the thrift stores, and even borrowing sibling's clothes. No matter the season and no matter the style, students were ready to take on the new trends displayed on TV, magazines, and online.

Luscious Locks

Length. Inspired by celebrity Kim Kardashian, senior Aaliyah Ollver took on the extremely long hair style. "I've been growing my hair out for two years," Oliver said.

Jersey. From the MTV show Jersey Shore, to students, gelled fohawks were popular. "I ask for longer length on the top, and buzzed on the sides," junior Dominick Trevino said.

Vibrant. Colors of the rainbow became the new "it" hair colors of the hallways. "Vibrant hair colors are a nonpermanent way to change your look in a drastic way," sophomore Jennifer Shallman said.

Flow. It was about the curls, the body, and the natural volume. "You want lots of hair, something you can run your fingers through," senior Tyler Mariage said. "We call it lettuce or flow. The more lettuce the better."

Grenade. The only two freshme in the show, Jackary McClain a Sam Lagunas perform an amaziduet. Lagunas later performed a solo, singing "Hey There Delilah"

I Will Survive. Filling in for an a Mrs. Joann Weil sings for Holt students. She thanked parents, performers, and students for the success of the show.

Feeling Good. Finishing the short senior Evan Fischer melts the crowd with his voice. The show entertaining right to the finish.

Pray For The Plagues. Completing his solo, sophomore Dominic Mosher shows the crowd his skills on guitar. Mosher performed one of the more unique acts, but still kept the crowd entertained.

Down, Down, Down. Finishing her dance routine, senior Emma McLaughlin strikes a pose. She started the second act with enthusiasm, which kept the crowd engaged for the remainder of the acts.

Talent Transformed

tudents reveal talents while helping raise money for Challenge Day here I Stood. Performing gether, seniors Alison Sluiter companied by Christianna Blain piano serenade the crowd with their music. The show included 23 acts, which displayed talent from every grade, and in several different forms.

The Variety Show gave students the same opportunities to perform, but also raised money for a good cause-Challenge Day.

The mission of Challenge Day is to give our school the opportunity to better understand the power of love, diversity, truth, and expression.

"Challenge day is an eye opening experience," sophomore Megan Kelly said. "I think everyone should try and go at least once."

Fund-raising was needed this year in order to save money in the school budget. To keep Challenge Day a recurring event at Holt, Mrs. Joann Weil created the Variety show to earn the necessary finances.

The Variety Show proved to be a success by earning $1150, which was $300 more than last year. "It is awesome to watch students perform and share their talents along with raising money for challenge day, Weil said.

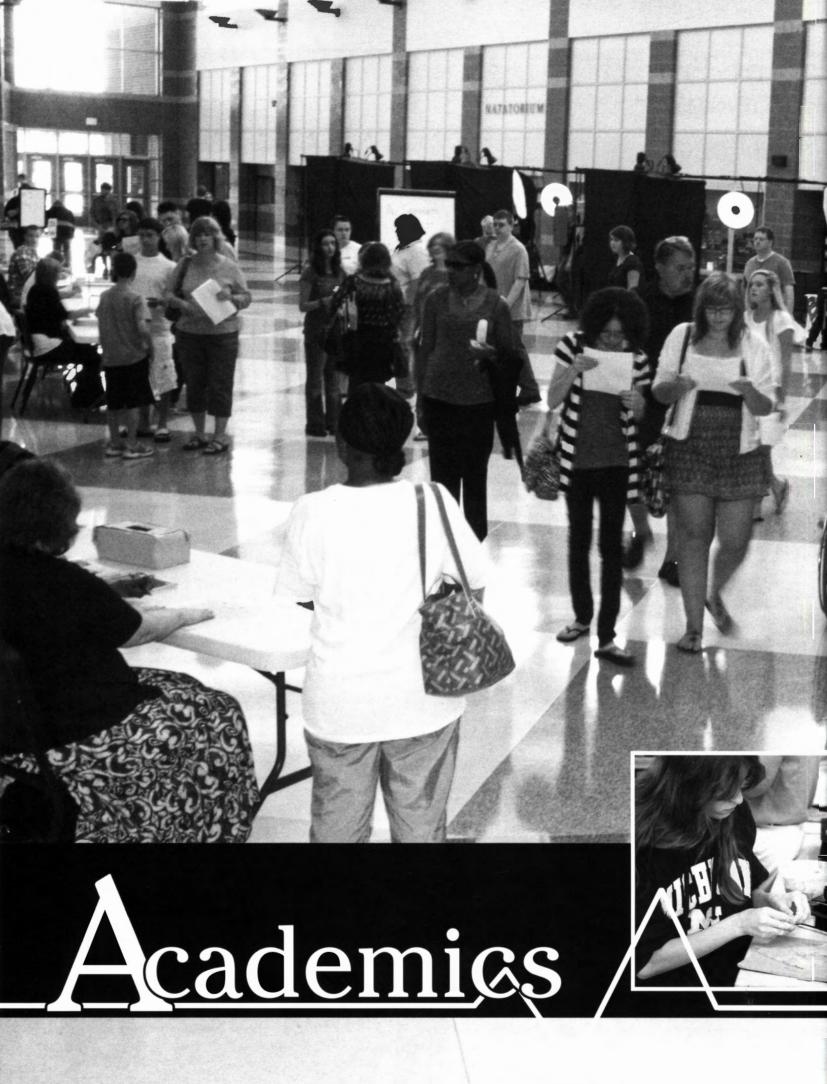

Four Chords Song. Making the crowd think, the "Medley Men" demonstrate that almost every song uses the same four chords.

Listen. Outperforming Beyonce, senior Adrianne Fleming sings a popular song from the movie Dreamgirls. Fleming executed a graceful performance while showing off her 3-inch heels.

Seniors William Schneider, NathanielHaering, Brian Thering used their musical talents and humor to keep the crowd amused.

Reading between the lines

Holt High School students take advantage of English electives.

Tower of knowledge. Collected over the years, students are required to read books such as The Kite Runner, Animal Farm and Fallen Angels throughout high school.

Doing well is more than getting an 'A' on a test, it's the work that went into that 'A'. Grade level English classes offered students opportunities to read, write and communicate, but students who wanted more, took alternative English classes and went beyond the core curriculum.

HHS offered classes such as Pacesetter, Speech and Journalism that gave students a more hands on experience.

"Taking speech allowed me to be able to speak in front of a crowd and be more formal in my writing," junior Taylor Hull said. "I also gained more confidence in my abilities."

Each class allowed students to explore English in different ways, but still gave them the fundamental concepts of literature and language.

"Journalism is different from other English classes in the sense that you have different responsibilities," senior Cody Shattuck said. "Everyone sees what you write, so you really have to work a lot harder to create the best work possible."

Breaking away from books and essays, students participated in English electives in different ways. Raising awareness, performing speeches and reporting school events all counted toward English credit.

"English electives are good for students who are strong with visual learning and speaking," Speech and Literature through Film teacher Anne Russo said. "It gives them an alternative to reading and writing."

took advantage of silent reading time in class by reading and taking notes on their books.

Helping hand. English teacher Jennifer Jones helped junior Shelbi Prebble work on her persuasive writing skills and edit thesis statement she had written.

Writing done right. Preparing short stories and discussing writing styles, seniors Gillian Goldblatt and Sara Delgado meet weekly in a student led writing club. Delgado started the club to give students more freedom to write than a class setting. The club hoped to form a collection of short stories to publish together.

Hot off the press. Pen in hand, sophomore Dalton Gibson read through a fresh issue of the Ramparts newspaper.

He voted for his fellow classmates/ staff writers for monthly awards, such as "Best Headline" and "Best Story" in the new issue.

Teamwork. Asking English teacher Forest Tate for assistance, juniors Ashlyn Dormer, Nicole Clark and Taylor Bunker work together to complete their assignments.

Add to Your Knowledge

Applying math to everyday activities.

Doing the math. In Algebra II class, teacher Marty Schnepp helps juniors Timothy Edmond and Jacob McCormick understand the process to perform functions of parametric rules. These rules are used to compare velocity and height of falling objects.

Smart teaching. Using the Smart Board technology, teacher Grant Melville shows his Algebra II class how the values of a graph relate to a parametric equation.

Explaining the curve. Pointing out the asymptote on a parametric graph, junior Marquise Wilson tells classmate Donte Jackson how the equation relates to the curve.

"We All Use Math Everyday" the poster in Algebra teacher Heidi
Misaras' classroom reads.
The fact that the poster's
theme is the hit detective TV show "Numb3rs" is spot on with what high school students learn in their math classes.

"The math seems like it will be useful, and I enjoy learning it," junior Jacob McCormick said.

Holt offers many different math classes, especially senior year, that can help a student in the future.

"Taking an alternative math class, such as Accounting is very helpful because unlike other math classes, the stuff you learn in Accounting is actually useful later in life," Dylan Clifton said.

Math is used everyday, whether it's a teacher using it, a statistician, an accountant, architect or even a waiter.

"There are many students who use problem solving continually throughout their day that relates to mathematical processes," Math teacher Brian Vessel said. "A key component in mathematical understanding is the ability to justify their responses."

Team work. Tackling a difficult task in Advanced Placement Calculus, seniors Mikalin Schlee and Skylen Powell work together to finish their assignment.

Functions of X and Y. Demonstrating a relationship between costs and revenue in a profit function, students in teacher Sandra Callis' Algebra 1 work with their intern to find the line where a business would break even. The grid where students stood was a value of X and they plugged that into their function to get Y. Students displayed on the X grid were: Marco Reyes, Martise Quesada-Pereida, Skylar Jones, Angelique Brooks, Nicole Smith, Alejandro Whitehead, Jermaine Parker, Christopher Vogan, Mitchell Martin, Aurora Alldafer, Adelia Slocum, Calob Vinton, Rebecca Kisor, Intern Allison Wagner, Tyea Duffy, Robert Eicher.

Applying the knowledge. Using calculus, algebra and trigonometry, senior Nathan Wollensak turns 1/8" aluminum into parts for designs made on CAD software at the Capital Area Career Center.

By Quinton Kustasz

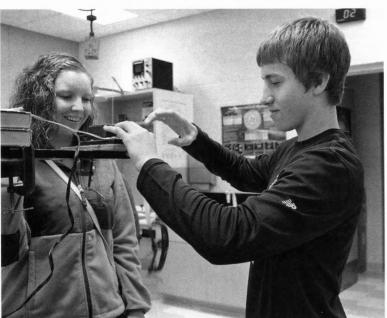

Magnetic Attraction.

During a visit by elementary students, senior Ashlee Bowden demonstrated the science behind magnetic pull.

Dissecting knowledge.
Investigating the innards of a frog, sophomore Paige Farrington learns what it ate the day before. "My partner was too scared to do the dissection, so I had to," she said. Some students are scared when doing labs, especially involving dead amphibians.

Applying the knowledge.
In college prep physics, seniors
Patrick Carrier and Madison Hayes examined how mass affected the velocity of an object. "I like when we do labs because it helps us apply it to real life, not just reading it out of a book," Hayes said.

Keeping it together.
During Human Physiology class, seniors Eric Fiasky and Heather Raynor constructed connective bone tissue with pieces of foam and pipe cleaners. These models helped students visualize what ou bones are made of.

Academics Darion Brown

Science Gets You Fired Up

Lab experiences make learning science fun.

Labs are common occurrences in science classes. "Doing things hands-on in class is very important. You get the kinesthetic learning out of it. Hands to brain,"

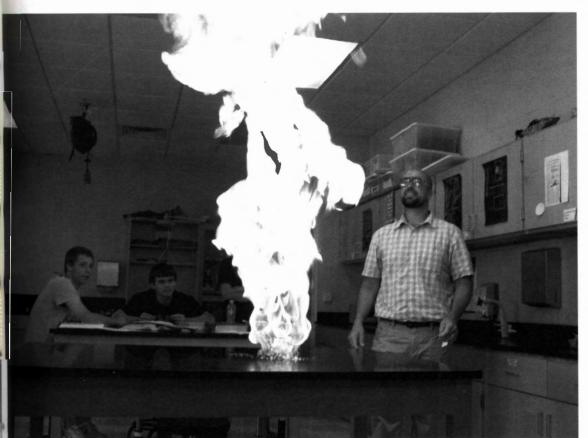

Foy said.

From measuring the mass of an object to investigating what a frog ate the day before dissection, kinesthetic learning helps to make all the connections. "Labs help students reinforce concepts," Foy said.

Learning things like how our nerves work are reinforced by the experiences, not by reading about it in a book.

Unique style. You know that you're in Heather Peterson's Biology class when you walk in the door and see the tie-died coat-wearing skeleton.

Sparking an interest.

During the "Methane Mamba" lab, teacher Mike VanAntwerp shows his Physics class, what happens when you combine methane filled bubbles with fire, while seniors Matthew Zajac and Daniel Kalchik watched from the back. Why do this? It demonstrates chemical reactions and creates an unforgettable learning experience that students are sure to remember.

Genotype. Assisting in karyotyping and genotyping to make traits of a baby, Biology teacher Amanda Tabbert helps sophomore Darion Brown.

Learning by pinching.

Using woodpicks to see how the touch receptors in skin react to pinching, junior Kimberly Le and senior Kevin Lentz experience something that cannot be learned on paper.

All in the Works

Holt government students benefit most from required assignments that provide real life experiences.

Social study courses consisted mainly of in-class notes, movies, and readings. Although a majority of the work was completed either at home or in the classroom, government students were also required to participate by attending local or state board meetings.

Sounding like another boring homework assignment, students were astonished when these meetings proved otherwise.

"The Holt Board of Education meeting was surprisingly interesting," senior Tara Williams said. "To see the people that make our school district's rules and regulations is cool."

While some students participated in local events, others went the distance and attended a campaign rally for a potential President.

"Attending Ron Paul's rally was cool," junior Sean Bulkowski said. "Seeing the material we've learned during school in a real life situation was more beneficial than any other assignment."

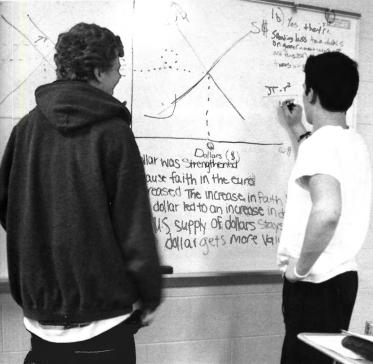

GDP. Using a diagram, Economics teacher Alex Mann described basic economics as it related to GDP to seniors Lea Schafter and Jeremy Pollok.

Pu'ulo. Presenting a lesson in Global Studies, senior David Herron explained the history of Pearl Harbor. Pearl Harbor was known by Hawiians as Pu'ulo.

Economics. Students are required to find the Equilibrium for price and quantity, in the supply and demand of a given product.

Seniors, Jeremy Pollok and Dalton Litwiller courageously show their hard work to the class.

By Rachel Dillingham

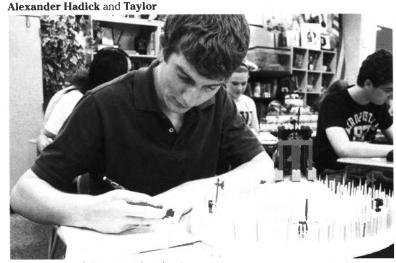

Observation. Students gathered to take part in the Holt Board of Education meeting. Listening in, junior Tara Williams took notes on the many fascinating things she learned.

History. Researching the historic times of the Ottoman Empire, students were required to create a poster. Sophomores, Mallory Weil, Cypress Bell, and Megan Kelly teamed up and completed the project for their ancient civilization class.

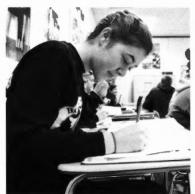

Campaign. Government students used different campaigning strategies to fill in their U.S. maps. The goal was to win the most electoral votes. Juniors, Ballard argued that they should win the tie for the state of Texas. Both were very determined to win as they kept track of their scores.

Fort. Building a 3-dimensional civilization was a fun way to incorporate knowledge and creativity. Using Styrofoam for the base, bamboo sticks for the walls, and a variety of Leggos, junior, Connor Brown built a model of what he liked to call a, "Roman Donut Fort."

Guten Tag. Staying focused, junior Brook Centofanti writes a story in German using a comic strip of pictures. "The hardest part about German is the grammar," Centofanti said. "But I love learning about European culture!"

A Taste of Culture. With a plate full of Mexican cuisine, students earn points for bringing in dishes to share with the class.

Traditional Treats. Trying something new, senior Son Ly, and juniors Marc Hildenbrand, Troy Delong and Michael Welch take a break from French class and enjoy Spanish rice that another student made for an annual food day. Students from the different language classes brought in food to share with their peers. The experience gave students a taste of what different cultures might eat.

Creative Learning. Teaming up with the art class, the Spanish 5 club took a trip to the Detroit Institute of Arts. "The students researched the artists and learned information on specific painters." Spanish teacher Karen Holman-Cervera said. The students then presented the information on the artists and paintings that they studied. After the art museum, the Spanish students also took part in the Heidelberg Project, a project that dedicates their time to educating neighborhood kids on art, the community and the environment.

Hola. Practicing pronunciation, sophomore Jenna King and junior India Heard-Benford have a conversation in Spanish. The students prepared the conversations on lined paper to recite and work on with each other.

Keeping Beat. Dancing to traditional music, senior Jonah Brown presents a Mexican folklore dance in the center commons.

What's your language?

Exploring new cultures allows students to gain knowledge and experience.

Learning to speak another language is a way for students to open doors for themselves and find new opportunities. Taking these classes challenged students, but also offered a lifetime of knowledge.

"You have to study to do well," junior Daria Tarasova said. "But it will help you in the future."

Most students take modern language courses to prepare for college and careers.

"In college, many study abroad programs are offered," junior Maci Palmer said. "Opportunities are also open to you when you can speak another language, like different career options."

Language students are also offered to take a class trip to their language speaking country. Students who took advantage of this opportunity expanded their knowledge and experienced new cultures with other classmates.

Holt High School also hosts foreign exchange students every year. These students attend regular classes and attempt to learn more about American culture.

"I studied English for nine years," exchange student Ana Livia Moncao said. "English was hard to learn because it's really different from my language."

Moncao's first language was Portuguese, Brazil's native language, and worked hard to transition to English when she arrived in the States.

"Taking a language wasn't just an easy 'A'. I've had to study hard," junior Brook Centofanti said.
"But learning a language is interesting and a great way to open doors for your future."

Learning the Steps. After learning the steps from Spanish teacher Karen Holman-Cervera, the French class performes a traditional dance on stage at World Language Week. During the special presentation, students kept track of activities they completed in their World Language Week passports. After the dance, students earned points for their performance.

Staying on Beat. In the spring, the three languages come together for World Language Week. During the assembly, guest speakers came to talk to the students and share different cultural traditions. On stage, juniors Christopher Gillespie and Aurelio Quintero tried to keep up with the guest Zumba instructors as their classmates cheered them on.

Skills for the Future

Students work hard in the classroom to save time and money for college.

The Business
Department once offered classes that were considered "Electives."
Today, students who take classes such as Photoshop,
Retail Management,
Accounting, Computer Programming, Computer
Applications and Web Publishing gain much more than just elective credit.

A student could receive as many as 30 college credits at LCC or Davenport College by taking a collection of business classes. In addition, many of these same classes counted towards the high school senior math credit. Some students also got jobs after high school because of the skills they learned in various classes.

Students who enrolled in Photoshop learned skills required for careers in photography, graphic design and industry. "The class teaches you how to manipulate photos. It is the same software that the industry uses," Photoshop teacher Margo Strong said. "Former students have come back and told me that they've gotten jobs because they knew Photoshop. It's really exciting for me and the student knowing they got a job because of courses they took in our department."

As an alternative to regular math classes, several classes fulfill the math credit required by all students their senior year. "I like it because instead of learning math that I may not use in the future, Retail Management helps me learn skills that I would need for a job and helps me gain people skills," senior Dakota Brown said.

Tax Time. Learning concepts such as interest rates, loan payments, and income taxes were just a few things

Business Math. "The most valuable thing I learned was how to do my own income taxes," Martin said.

Paying attention. As class began juniors Marisa DuMond and Carson Polakowski listened to instructions about T-Calc. "It's a device that helps us calculate how much a monthly mortgage would be," Dumond said." It really does come in handy."

Students decide to take classes that will help them in the future.

As an opportunity to study more in a specific direction, students took health and consumer science classes. These electives helped students learn more about jobs in this field of study, guiding them toward future occupations.

By taking Introduction to Health Occupations, junior Allison Pingston learned she was interested in the health field of study. "I think taking the class will definitely help me out in the future because it helped me figure out what I want to do ahead of time."

Other students signed up for Parenthood Education. A class designed to teach students the real life situations involved in parenthood. "I knew that I would learn stuff that would help me be a good parent in the future," junior Ashley Marroquin said.

Soaking up the Sun. Getting ready for their outdoor performances, the band takes a break from the classroom to practice in the school parking lot.

Showing Spirit. Putting down their instruments, the band starts a wave through the student section to celebrate a Holt Ram Touchdown.

During the halftime show junior Mackenzie Lane twirls her batons to the band's performance of Aerosmith's Dream On. "Twirling is important because it gives variety to the show" said Lane. "Other schools around the area don't have them, so it adds to our schools show."

Jazzing it up. Performing at various events in the Holt area, some band students choose to take part in jazz band which meets before school. "It's a group of kids who you know actually want to be there because we have to meet at 6:30 in the morning, which makes it a group of students who are determined to make good music" senior Anna Strong said.

Band Camp helps students get ready for the season

As summer vacation turns to August and students are trying to get the most out of the last few weeks of school, most marching band students are back in school preparing for the upcoming marching season.

They spent a week attending band camp. This was the first time band camp was held at the high school. This helped reduce costs, making it more affordable so that more students could attend. "It's really important that you come to band camp" senior Joe Listing said. "It not only helps bring us closer together, but we learn all of the music and the routines. If you miss band camp it's really hard to catch up."

Students learned the music they would perform during football games, practiced their new routines, learned the marches and became closer with their fellow classmates.

After spending a week together, most students felt really close with each other. "Band Camp helps students become closer as a band and bond with their section," band director

Michael Emerson said.

Band camp isn't only about music. They play team building activities and have a skit night. On skit night, the teachers and staff always do a few performances for the students. Some students like to perform as well.

On the last night of camp they have senior night. All the seniors made crowns to wear and celebrated with a toga party.

Practice makes Perfect. Getting ready to perform, junior Martin Welch warms up on his tuba before the show. "I like being apart of the Tuba section because we have pregame Tuba rituals" said Welch. "We always go out as a section to a Tuba Dinner to a local fastfood place, and when we get to the school we all run a lap around the building with our tubas."

Leading the way. The drum line, made up of David Travis, Tyler Stelljes, Robert Hull and Mitchell Noss, sets the pace for the rest of the band as they perform the halftime show. "Drumline the most fun section to be in" Hull said. The instrument is fun to play, we go out to dinner before games and have weekly practices. Its the best section.

Practicing in the school parking lot senior, Mikhale Mojica gets ready for the performance during the half time show at the football game later that night.

Piecing Together the Chorus

The choirs coming together as one.

Having the dedication, hard work and energy for every performance allowed the choirs to unite and stand as one this year. Choir director, Monty Bishop, had many goals for the choirs this year. One of those goals being for them to achieve more than they think is possible.

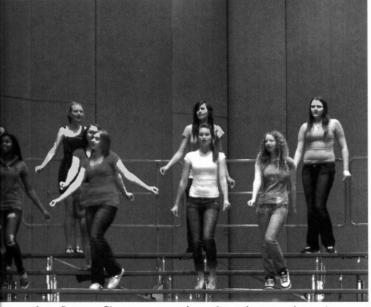

"I really want to see the group grow not only as a group but also as individuals. Being part of things like Solo and Ensemble or Midwest Music Conference (MMC), shows that you are capable of achieving that shining moment," Bishop said. "It's great to see the students do the best that they can do, to have dignity. I'm really proud of all the students."

With the reformation of Chorus Council, a student organized and run group, the choirs were able to form together and work on what they knew was needed to reach the top, above and beyond the goals and expectations set.

"I wanted to see the choirs do excellent, and to really take in what Bishop says. He is really good at what he does. I have been in choir for four years, and it is everything to me," senior Adrianne Fleming said.

Under the leadership of Monty Bishop, the choirs were able to take in all his teachings to become better and outstanding singers. Chorale was featured in Grand Rapids as part of the MMC, an honorable and prestigious performance for the choir.

For many of students, choir is like home, a place where you can be you. "Not only does choir make me feel important," sophomore Betsy Anderson-Borton said. "It gives me confidence to be me and show my true colors."

Preparing For The Outside World

Students push their education outside of the classroom to prepare for their future.

When students begin to think about their future, things may start to seem surreal and scary. Many students have taken advantage of the Career Center to help them prepare for their life after high school.

Programs offered varied from Medical Technology to Automotive Technology and Cosmetology to Culinary Arts. Students enrolled in programs that they felt may lead to a career after high school. Others participated because of the handson, skills-based learning experience.

"My class at the Career Center definitely prepared me on how to work in a professional environment," junior Leah Taylor said, who took the Cosmetology course

"My favorite things are the different people. There were students from a bunch of different high schools and it was easy to make new friends."

High School, Career Center AND a Job?

Students learn to juggle high school classes, Career Center and a job.

Creating and Constructing. Installing an electrical outlet is one of the many skills junior Kiel Oates has learned in his Construction Technology class. Oates has learned skills in plumbing, electrical, wall building, roofing, siding and finishing, which helped him get a job. "I do all essential construction except masonry," Oates said.

Engaged and Enthusiastic. In their Automotive Technology class, seniors John Krohn and Mathew Vainner practice changing the oil of a car. The skills they learned from their career center training has helped them both get jobs in the field.

Beauty. As part of the Cosmetology course, senior Emilee Dent styles senior Tara Williams' short locks. "Cosmetology is a fun activity and hobby. I think it will be a great job," Williams said. Students learned how to do pedicures, facials, hair cuts, styles and hair colors. When finished, they qualify to take the state test to become certified stylists. "I think that taking this cosmetology course will help me get a job after I graduate and even help me pay my way through college," Leah Taylor said.

Perfect Precision. In the Automotive Technology class, junior Jordan Collins concentrates on repairing the break system of a car. Collins learned breaks, basic engine repair and customer skills. The experience has been great in learning by combining book work with hands on experiences," Collins said.

Lunch Time. Preparing lunches for the Career Center, Senior Dylan Clifton and juniors Krysta Braman and Lauren Voss prepare the salads. In the Culinary Arts class, the students learned about preparing menus and food, inventory control, and running restaurants. They also catered for outside groups and special events. "My favorite thing to make is cheesecake," Voss said. "I'm also interested in studying dietetics at a university after high school."

Master of Accuracy. With all focus on his computer, junior Kevin Gardner uses techniques he learned in his Computer-Aided Drafting and Design class to create parts for automotive. The class gave him opportunities to understand computer engineering.

By Erin Self

Still Life. Students work on their drawing techniques by sketching a crime scene. "It helped me practice drawing more realistic things," junior Allison Pingston said.

A-R-T. Showing off their artsy side, teachers Mrs. Heidi Irvine, Ms. Patricia Pisano, and Mrs. Brooke Peiffer spell out their favorite Color Wheel. Putting a new spin on the color wheel, junior Haleigh Ammon paints clouds as primary colors.

Brush Strokes. Painting a cloud, junior Shalanda Baldwin also puts her own take on the color wheel.

Repetition. Patience is key to drawing as senior Matthew Snay uses pencil to create his work of art.

Turning to Your Creative Side

Art students find creative uses for art class

While students have a hectic day going from math class to science class, art classes can help calm the day down and let students express themselves. Because of the endless possibilties, art classes were stress free.

For ceramics teacher Brooke Peiffer, it was important for students to take an art class. "It allows the use of parts of the brain that are not used in other subjects. It's not just one answer."

Art helped to expand the way students interact and work with visuals. "While taking art, you find yourself," junior Wyatt Andresen said.

In ceramics, students made things that could actually be used at home.
"Some kids take anger or problems and turn them into art pieces,"
said.

Being able to naturally express yourself and feeling comfortable with sharing something passionate or fun, is a way to connect the art classes.

Whether it's making something you can use at home or something you can be proud of, the art classes give you the ability to create what you want, when you want.

To Andresen, it's a way to do what you want, to get your ideas out while following the guidlines given.

Precise. Contributing to the Holt High School haunted house, sophomore Chase Duncan works on the visual artwork of what would go into the haunted house.

Getting inspiration. An opportunity to create outside, senior Taylor Schavey-Feldpausch and junior Alexis Dorer sketch.

Fit for Life

Physical Education helps students form healthy fitness habits.

Taking a break from the classroom, students were given opportunity to participate in a variety of physical education classes.

Classes such as Team Sports, Coaching and Officiating, Aerobics, Aquatics, Weight training, Personal Fitness, or Lifetime activities, Pushing to the Limit. In physical education class students did things that were outside of the box, like exercise videos. "I like the Aerobic gave students several opportunities to learn how to become physically fit.

"What we're trying to do is establish a lifetime of fitness," teacher and coach Al Slamer said. "We're looking for students to use these skills over their lifetimes."

videos because it's something different than just running or lifting," junior Marquise Wilson said.

One stroke at a time. Working on his form senior Jacob Zajac hits the pool. In aquatics class, students improved their swimming and learned new strokes.

Fly High. In Aerobic Exercise, sophomore Alec Greene participates in the vertical jump. Students strived to do their best, hoping to get their name on the school record board.

Focus. Giving it his all, junior Ryan McCune tries not to let anything by.

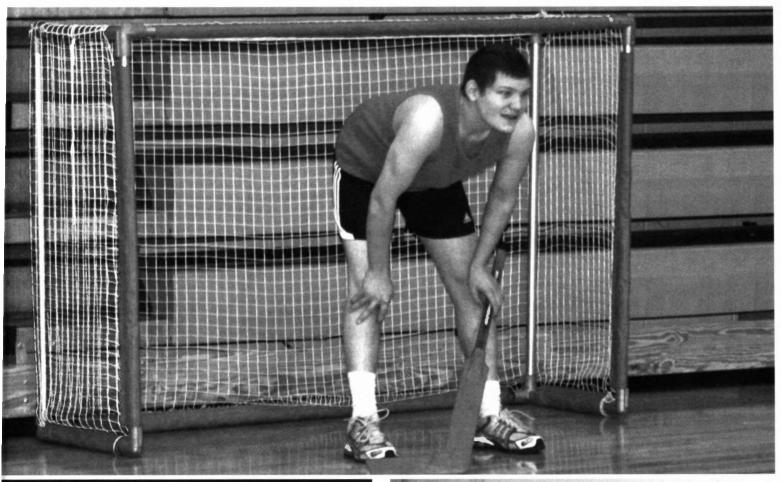

"We can always count on Ryan to keep the ball out of the net," sen or Monte Jackson said.

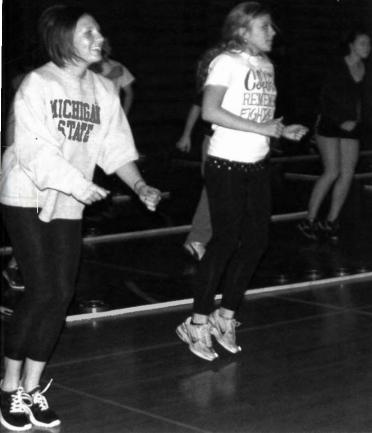

Getting Competitive. Competing in the famous "Coach Slamer two-day floor hockey tournament," senior Christopher Seyka and junior Robert Hall face off.

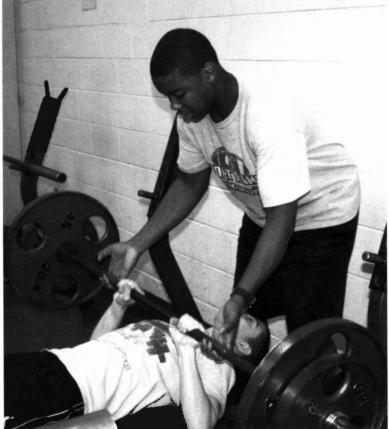

By Emma Webster and DaVon Harris

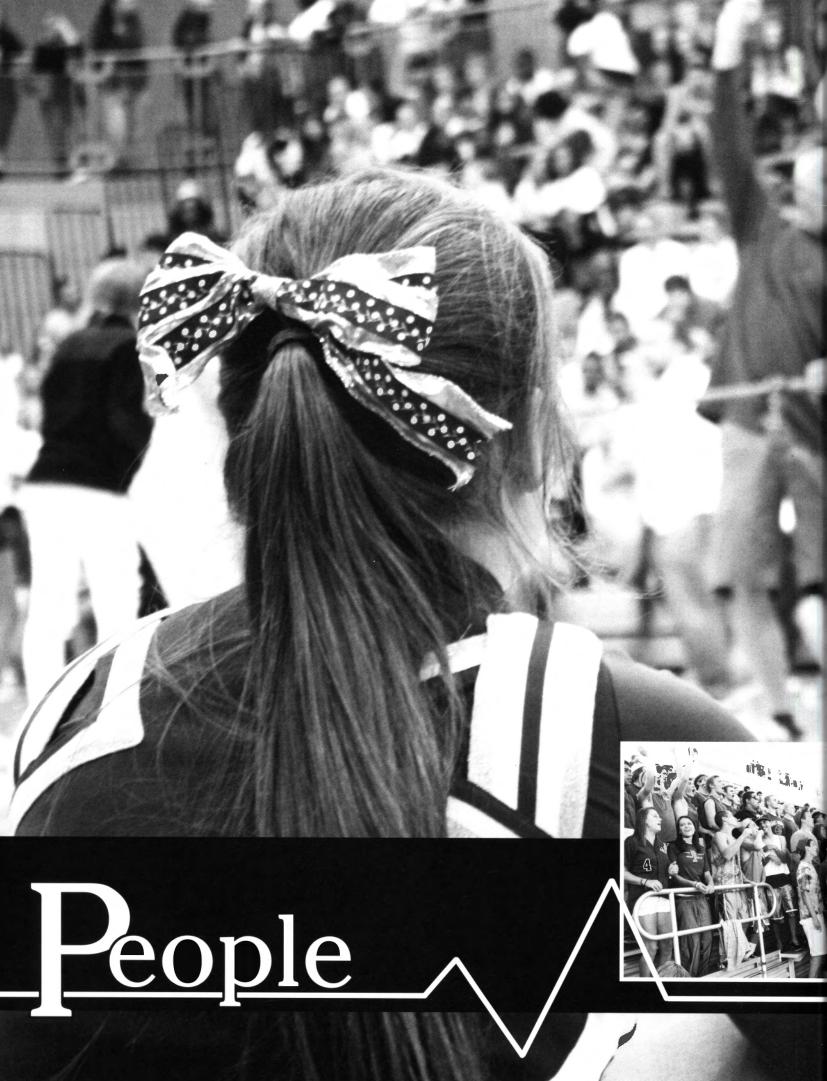

Jumping into shape. Jumping along to an aerobic video, junior Alexis Dorer and senior Morgan Burton work up a sweat. "I never thought they would be as hard as they are," Burton said. "I get my sweat on."

Support. In Aerobic Exercise, junior Marquise Wilson and sophomore Thomas Collins lift weights and learn to work as a team.

SENIOR'S CHOICE

From most athletic to most artistic, Holt High School has them all. Each person at our school has something unique about them, and everyone is different. Our peers voted for the seniors who they believed showed certain qualities more than others.

Most Athletic

Class Clown

Next American Idol

Most Likely To Make Your Day

Winning is everything for the Most Athletic seniors on and off the field. "I feel proud. My hard work paid off," said Haley Mcfarland, when asked about winning. Justin Alleman gives his all to stay athletic, "I work out, usually running, to stay in shape."

The class clowns know how to bring the silliness and fun. "I'm proud that I won, and I think it's cool because my dad won this when he was in high school," Lauren Strong said. "I think I won because people think I'm a funny guy and I just like to make moments awkward," Jared Kinne said.

Every class has those few people who have so much singing talent that they could audition for American Idol. "I've thought about being a professional singer, but I mostly do it for fun," Evan Fischer said. "It feels cool that I won, because I can look back 30 years from now and remember my high school years" Alison Sluiter said.

There's always the one person who can make your day ten times better. "To make people's day, I like to make people laugh or simply give someone a high five," Mark Dudley said. "I'm reall wacky and silly all the time. It's cool to know that I can make someone's day better," Shannon Kraemer said.

Best friends always have something special about their friendship. From inside jokes to things they might have in common. "We met in sixth grade through hockey" Tyler Mariage said. "We fish together almost every day in the summer," Jordan Wood said.

Most School Spirit

Ve have spirit, yes we do, we ave spirit, how 'bout you?!? Thloe Henley and Andrew eguin's spirit for Holt High chool shines the most. "At very game I go all out. I don't are what other people think if me," Chloe Henley said. When asked about winning, andrew Seguin said, "I think is because of the student ection. It's important to me. I ove to support my friends."

Best Smile

A smile is one of the first things you notice in a person. Senior's Alex Hrapkiewicz and Jenna Payne smiles are the brightest of them all. "I floss," Payne said. "Two of my teeth got knocked out because of a bad pass in football," said Alex. He gives credit to his two fake teeth for his famous smile.

Best Laugh

Everyone's laugh is unique, but Joshua Rios and Alexis Akers laughs stand out the most. "My laugh is really loud," Akers said. "Mine is really high pitched, even though my voice is really deep," Rios said.

Most Artistic

From sculpting to painting a portrait, artistic people can do it all. "I like to draw the most," Abigail Cottom said. "I didn't think I'd win," Matthew Snay said. "I'm really surprised."

Closest Friends

There's nothing better than knowing there's that one person you can lean on. "We've been best friends since kindergarten, Lauren Potter said. "It shows that we can still be friends even through high school," Lindsay Strong said.

Seniors look back on the year, and talk about what they'll remember.

If you could relive any moment what would it be?

Senior Victoria Frailey wished she could relive the moment in her sophomore year when she attended a varsity soccer game. "After the game, I just wished I would be that attached to my friends and teammates like those boys were." Friends like family, something Frailey now has with her friend senior Lauren Strong. "She knows exactly what I'm thinking," Frailey said.

Senior Harrison Ammon would like to relive the moment he made his first basket in a varsity basketball game against Fowlerville. "I made my first shot and the crowd erupted. Anthony Harris started a chant of Har-ry Ammon – that is something I play over and over in my head on a daily basis," Ammon said.

What will you remember most about your senior year?

Senior Abigail Cottom will remember all her AP homework. "I'll remember being super stressed," Cottom said.

Senior Jordan Mata will remember taking it easy. "I am going to remember not doing anything in school my senior year," Mata said.

Who is Rudy the Ram?

#1 Fan. Leading cheers in the student section, Rudy is always a fan favorite.

Pumping up the crowd, showing school spirit and supporting Holt athletes has been Rudy's job for decades. Holt High School's loveable mascot is a symbol of spirit to many students.

"Between the band, student section, Holt families and Rudy, the games are fun," junior Emily Danks said.

Traditionally the mascot is not allowed to reveal who he/she is during the course of the game, but senior Danielle Ott shared with us the privilege of being Holt's mascot.

"Little kids come up to you and people ask who you are," Ott said. "But it was fun and high energy."

The varsity cheerleaders have the important job of choosing the right person.

"There really aren't any requirements," senior Mary Daoust said. "You just have to be fun."

Born to Race

Building, repairing as well as racing cars is what senior Mathew Vainner does.

Lap after lap, the final flag falls. Victorious, the sweet smell of a win.

The fun of racing can be seen to others in a variety of ways. Some see it as a sport. Some see it as a hobby. But to senior Mathew Vainner it's more.

Vainner began watching racing when he was twelve and he was immediately hooked from that point on. Knowing the challenges of being a driver, he was prepared and ready. One main challenge that went into racing, according to Vainner, was that respect was hard to obtain. Veterans of the track want to keep their reign as being on top.

Vainner, having been a racer for six years, raced at Spartan Speedway as part of the modified racing series. He didn't just race. He worked at O'Neils Auto repairing and fixing cars. He also built his own cars that he raced. Working at his side were his dad, grandfather and some close friends. The team built the engines, the body of the car, brakes and anything that needed repair.

Vainner was enrolled in the auto technology program at the Capital Area Career Center where he obtained skills to diagnose and repair auto problems.

In 2009, Vainner was involved in an accident that resulted in a concussion. His car was t-boned on the track, his head hit the cage inside of the car and Vainner was sent flying through the air doing 360's. He didn't know what was going to happen, but he crossed his arms and prepared for the outcome.

Vainner had been in multiple accidents on the track throughout the years, but they didn't stop him from racing. With the help of sponsors and his job, Vainner was able to continue racing.

HONT RAMS NOVE THE CURE

Holt High School athletes came together this year to help good causes. Both the girls volleyball team and cross country teams worked hard to raise awareness and funds to help support foundations for cancer.

Holt athletes aren't afraid to show their love for others. Both the girls volleyball team and cross country teams worked hard to raise awareness and funds to help support foundations for cancer.

The girls volleyball team held "Volley for the Cure" for the biggest game of the year: Holt vs. Grand Ledge. Hundreds of fans poured into our high school gym-all wearing pink.

"It's exciting to look up into the crowd and see all of our fans supporting us, and a cause we believe in," junior Julie Shallman said. The team sold t-shirts for five dollars each, prior to the game. All proceeds went to the Susan G. Komen Foundation.

Both cross country teams received a generous donation of brand new purple uniforms to pay tribute to the loss of Coach Ruth Pridgeon. Both teams also participated in "Ruth's Race", a run to raise money for pancreatic cancer.

"I know I'm not wasting my time with things that don't matter," junior Elizabeth Haubert said. "We're running for Pridge. It's hope."

Their Spirit, Our Support

Every Friday night you can find seniors Andrew Seguin and Chloe Henley leading the student section in chant. This year they took the important role of becoming co-leaders of the student section. As seniors, contributing is something important to them.

"Sophomore year, I was the loudest one. I like being a leader and being involved." Seguin said. Henley also started showing leadership before her senior year.

"I knew some of the past leaders and was associated with them," Henley said. " I became known as someone with school spirit."

Henley decided to switch some things up this year. "I created a group on Facebook for the whole school to follow." Henley said. The group posted the themes for each game, and created an

What is your biggest fear about becoming a senior? By Terese Dragonetti

Up Close

Sprint car racing becomes an expensive vet successful hobby for Junior Clayton Sanders

"Before a race I get nervous and I get butterflies," junior Clayton Sanders said. He races sprint cars. "I've had about six cars."

On average, a sprint car costs approximately $15,000. "Once in a while I have to buy parts too," Sanders said. His grandpa helps pay for things but Sanders also has other sponsors. He gets sponsorships by either asking businesses to sponsor him or they see him race and offer him a sponsorship.

He has been racing since he was ten. Sprint cars race on dirt tracks. "I have to wear a fire suit and special shoes and gloves," Sanders said. He has raced in Fort Wayne, Indiana and Columbus, Ohio. "I go to the track and practice every Saturday and I get one practice before each race," Sanders said. One race Sanders made $800. "You pay $40 to enter the race and the first half of the field wins money," Sanders said.

Champion. After winning a race Sanders holds up the checkered flag.

Airborn

Student Seeks an Adrenline Rush

In Flight. Ten seconds of airtime gives junior John Murphy a brief moment of fame.

Flying through the air, performing a trick and landing back on the ramp within 10 seconds. It brings a thrill of danger and gives an adrenaline rush that makes junior John Murphy return to aggressive in line skating.

He started skating about six years ago when a friend introduced him to the sport. He learned and improved by watching videos of professional skaters.

He purchased custom built skates, which are very light weight. In the last six years he has gone through about ten pairs of skates, each costing him nearly $300.

While skating can be a dangerous sport, Murphy has not had any serious injuries. He has broken one toe, and battered his knee. He said that he wears out a lot of jeans skating, but his body is not worn out!

"The best feeling is when they announce that I'm the winner" Murphy said. That desire to win and the thrill of the game has kept Murphy skating.

Running toward the goal-\lambda

Moving his feet and clearing his mind, junior Christopher Gillespie runs his problems away.

Running is not only exercise. Junior Christopher Gillespie runs to clear his mind of problems.

"When I was younger, I was called names. I needed something to get me through that," Gillespie said. That's what started his running. "It helps with every day life."

For a good run, you need proper running shoes and appropriate clothing for the season, then you are ready for a long run. "Running is my time, Chris and God time."

Gillespie's Uncle Josh stood out in his life as a strong motivator. "He showed me that to be tough, you have to fight through all possible circumstances," Gillespie added.

Gillespie runs every day. He either takes a trip around Holt, or he gets on the treadmill to get his mind and body into shape. He uses running as a time where he can just think and clear his mind. Gillespie is always in season.

Steady speed: Competing in a cross country race, junior Christopher Gillespie keeps a steady speed and a clear mind to defeat the competition.

A Dream Come True

Students have once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to dance in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

Students who perform in company at Karyn's Dance Place are used to dancing in the pre-game show at Detroit Pistons games, halftime shows for the Detroit Shock, and the Capitol One Bowl. But this time, the bar was set much higher. Seniors Alison Sluiter, Erin Biel, junior Allison Pingston, and sophomore Claire Roberts danced in the 85th annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City.

When Sluiter found out she had this opportunity, she was so excited. "It was the best day ever, Sluiter said." Five studios from each state were selected. The girls said it was hard to learn the dance because their instruction was from a video posted on-line.

On Thanksgiving day, they had rehearsal at 6 am, then danced in the parade, and ended their day with Thanksgiving dinner at a fancy restaurant. Sluiter said that she will "feel rich for the day." "I'm not nervous, I'm excited," Pingston said before leaving for New York. "I practiced a lot and have the dance in my head. If you mess up, just keep smiling."

Not only did they dance in the parade, but they also did some sight seeing. They saw the Radio City Rockettes and some Broadway musicals. "I've always wanted to go to New York and see the Rockettes, and to be able to dance in the Macy's Day Parade and this made it a dream come true," Pingston said.

For a Song and a Dance

More than just a triple threat.

Singer. Dancer. Actress. Athlete. Since the age of three, sophomore Emily Hadick has been chasing the feeling she gets while performing.

"I just get a rush when I'm on stage," Hadick said.

She began dancing at age three and joined her first childrens choir at age six. Currently she takes part in ballet, tap, jazz, modern, and lyrical dance.

Also, Hadick is always sure to be involved in any chance to perform. This year she sang at Holt High School's variety show to support Challenge Day.

"I always get nervous no matter what," Hadick said about performing. "But then I get into it, and just fade into the moment."

Hadick plans to attend a performing arts school to major in musical theater.

"I definitely want to be doing this in the future. I'm good at it."

One Heartbeat →

All 81 hearts of the football team come together to make one.

A football team is more than a group of guys playing on the same field. They're one family. One BIG family. 64 players and 17 coaches.

"We have to all work together in the weight room, at practice, and on the game field in order for us to be one heartbeat," senior Evan Harless said. "Everyone has to contribute to the same thing. Every player has to have that ONE focus in order for us to be ONE heartbeat."

To every player it may mean something a little different, but having one heartbeat means you have to work together.

"To me one heartbeat basically means having that brotherhood and everyone being on the same page when it comes to players and coaches. Everyone has to have the same desires of wanting to succeed at the same level and having the same train of thought," Harless said.

Harless also said it took awhile for the different grades to get along together. Despite their differences they were able to become a real team. It resulted in friendships they'll take with them outside of high school.

"Our last few games we looked like a completely different team all because we finally realized everything that it takes to have that 'one heartbeat'," Harless said.

"When the team was down, we had people that helped pick the team up. We were a great team that had come backs," senior Benjamin Steward said.

The team supported and encouraged one another when they needed it the most.

What's the Play? On his toes, senior Justin Alleman listens for Coach Anderson's play.

Push it. Before the game gets started, the girls push up their traditional 'Kick Off Stunt'.

Pyramid. During their performance at the homecoming pep rally, the stunt groups pull up a pyramid. "Stunting is one of my favorite aspects of cheerleading," senior Lauren Potter said. "It's really thrilling and we love trying new and more advanced stunts."

Holding up. Flyer, Lauren Pottei, hits an elevator for their routine cheer, "Give me an H."

Entertainment. Enthusiastically, the girls yell as one with the crowd. "We like to cheer with the audience, instead of at them," senior Cara

Darbor, said. Two favorite cheers to do with the student section are 'Mortal Combat' and 'We Believe.'

Trample the Trojans. A favorite banner made by the cheer team for the East Lansing game. "Everyone puts in the effort to come up with clever sayings," Tailor Kuhn said.

Teamwork. A tradition that the cheer squad did every wednesday before practice was making banners to promote spirit for that week's football game. "I love coming together for banner making and becoming better friends with everyone," senior, Kaitlyn Barrer said. These banners decorated the commons upper stair wall for all to see.

Nerd-out. Following the theme "nerd-out" set up by the student section, cheerleaders join the fun. "It's our way of participating with our fellow students," senior, Ashlee Bowden said.

Fire up. Junior Erin Self and seniors Hannah Johnson and Mikalin Schlee all cheer on the football team towards the spirited student section.

Spirit Fingers. Shaking their pom poms, the girls wait for the boys to try to score the extra point after a touchdown. "The entire time we are full of anticipation, especially if the scores are really close," senior Cara Darbor said.

Cheer Teams Put in Extensive Training Time to Perform at Events

Every year the Holt cheerleaders attend a summer camp. This year UCA Cheer hosted the camp at The Great Wolf Lodge. The girls cheered, danced, stunted and jumped for eight hours each day, all while being evaluated by cheerleading experts.

"We train. We lift athletes ten feet in the air, and we've done 300 or more push-ups in one game," junior Maci Palmer said. "Cheer is a lot harder then it looks."

During the three day camp, the girls also became really close and learned more about being a team.

"You know you're a real team when you start to act like a family. We honestly care about each other and always work together to reach success," Palmer said.

Be attentive. The team lines up with their right hand over their heart and left hand behind their backs, for the national anthem. "I find it funny when the student section starts to sing along," senior, Ashlee Bowden said.

Family. Sticking together is the number one priority for Holt ram cheerleaders. "We all have each other's backs," senior Lauren Potter said. "When I won homecoming queen, all the girls supported me in every way."

Gaining the Experience

Players take pride in keeping Holt a soccer power in the state of Michigan.

For the first time in four years, the varsity team started their season not being considered one of the top two teams in the area.

A roster composed of 13 freshmen and sophomores was predicted to weigh down the squad. But coaches, students and spectators were proven wrong.

The boys ended the season with a 10-2-4 record, and finished first in their league.

"Having such a young team only helped us this season," junior Alexander Hadick said "I feel like we can only get better from here."

The boys have already set new goals for next season. They hope to work hard in the offseason to continue their success.

"For those who are coming back next year, remember why we expect so much from our teams," coach Aaron Smith said. "Underclassmen, the job of next year is to continue the tradition that has been passed to you."

Score Board. Celebrating after a goal, sophomores Alec Greene, Maurice Santamaria, and Jacob Dowling congratulate each other.

As one. "We might have been young but we worked as a tear¹, overcame obstacles and came up cn top," junior Zachary Dowling sai¹.

Hidden Talent. Most people only know senior Jordan Herron as a basketball star, but he shows his talent with his feet returning for another season on the varsity team.

One of many. Reaching for the ball, Jacob Dowling touches it just enough to get past a defender. Dowling is one of many sophomores on the varsity team, "It really helped me having an older brother on the team to look up to," Dowling said. "I knew what to expect."

ingle goal. Finally pulling ahead of rival Eastern Quakers, senior Kenneth Kruger, and juniors lacob McCreery, and Zachary Dowling celebrate a goal. "It's hard to explain the feeling of working so hard and then finally having it pay off." Dowling said.

Not Afraid. Winding up for a goal kick, sophomore Jacob Welch strikes with power. "Being on the back line, I can't be scared to mess up," Welch said.

Serve It Up

Teamwork and perseverance help the varsity volleyball team take first in their conference.

Bump. Set. Serve. Spike. Dig. The varsity volleyball team can do it all. But not only did they have skill this season—they had heart.

"Working together really helped make us the team that we are," senior captain Tayler Peiffer said. "We got a new setter this year, which was hard to get used to at first, but she stepped up and we all worked as one. I think it helped us become a better team." By working together, the team accomplished a main goal: they won their conference.

"We were expected to get only third place but we ended up surprising everyone and won first," senior Haley Powers said.

"We also beat Okemos, which was really exciting. Even though we didn't win districts, we achieved a lot and showed everyone what we got."

Concentrate. With all her strength, junior Marisa Dumond sets the first serve of the game. "Volleyball is a mental game, if you can believe it, you can do it." Dumond said.

Focused. Preparing for the serve, senior Tayler Peiffer, junior Marisa Dumond and senior Haley Powers stay focused. "I love being part of a team and traveling," Peiffer said.

Team effort. Celebrating a point, junior Marisa Dumond, senior Haley Powers and junior Nicole

Smith show their excitement on the court. "Being discouraging isn't an option," Dumond said.

Huddling up. Before going back out on the court, the team joined together to talk about their strategy for the next half of the game. "In the huddle, we try to figure out what we need to change," junior Julie Shallman said. "Being supportive and positive is important. One negative thing can bring us down."

Christianna Blain tries to block

Smith and senior Tayler Peiffer look cn. "No other sport compares

Last night. Gathering for their final match as Holt Rams, seniors Michael Hua, Daniel Yu, Brian Cobus, Jeffrey Chronister, and Nicholas Jenks wish each other good luck.

Newbie. A new-comer to the sport, Jason Damon proved his skill as a first year player by making the varsity team.

Boys tennis team reaches States for the second year in a row.

Through efforts in preseason and summer practice, the team was able to perfect their skills to reach states for the second year in a row.

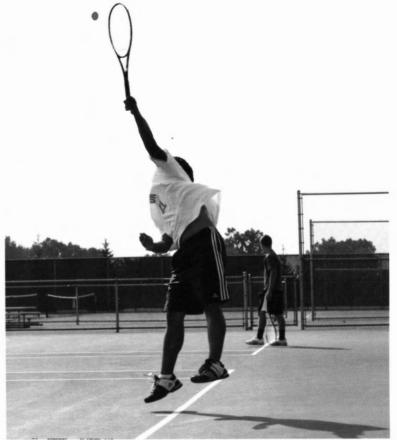

"You have to place first or second, or get ten points at Regionals to get invited to States," senior Michael Hua said.

They enjoyed working together on the court as well as off the court. "This is the closest team I have had in five years," coach Russ Olcheske said.

"They really like each other."

The team believed in each other, pushed each other, and stood by each other the entire season. Every member put in the energy to reach their goal.

"Our seniors this year got everyone together in the winter and summer and we worked really hard," junior George Edelman said. "Coach O pushed us to be our best, but we all pushed each other too."

Ability. Tennis takes more then just strength in your arms; it's a full-body game. You have to be able to jump, run, cut, and hit all at once.

Commitment.
Repetition. Dedication.
Success.

Over the past four years, the girls golf team has developed into one of the best in the state of Michigan. Every year the girls golf team's goal is to win regionals. The girls trained to reach this goal, in order to reach their expected results.

"We work hard," senior

Casey Harkema said. "So winning is our reward."

The girls worked well together, which contributed to their victory. By always supporting each other, they created a team like a family.

"They are really good people," sophomore Pade Her said. "It makes the team more like a family."

Casey Harkema proudly hold up their trophy. The girls varsity golf team has won regionals four years in a row.

Best One Yet. Looking back on the season, senior Lauren Strong described this year as her favorite. "It's another round of golf. If we stick together, we'll win together."

Concentration. Sophomore Alexxis Van Pelt focuses on hitting a good chip.

Together. "An important way for us to continue to win is by not focusing on the player, but to emphasize on the "we", sophomore Pader Her said.

Force. Senior David Batterson ran with strength and endurance to finish.

Strength. Striving to finish the race, freshman Patrick Johnson pushed himself hard to pass an opponent and beat him to the finish line.

Setting an example. Senior Patrick Carrier saw the finish line in sight and pushed himself harder to help his te^{am} secure a win. "I am going to miss cross country because the team is like a family and we come close each year," Sal Carrier.

Focus. Senior Matthew Snay, junior Andrew Middleton and sophomore Grant Colligan picked up their pace to make a strong finish for their team.

They're off. Some runners take a quick start at the beginning of the race while others pace themselves to save energy for a strong finish.

Dedication. Junior Andrew Middleton paced himself in order to finish the race "I say to myself, in through the nose "" out through the mouth," Middleton aid

In Through the Nose, Out Through the Mouth

Crossing the finish line, hard work and determination lead the boys cross country team through a successful season.

Running cross country takes a certain amount of determination and perseverance to keep going. Performance at meets is a direct result of performance at practice.

"We were second place in the CAAC Blue Division," cross country coach Dave Foy said, "we were not surprised. We worked very hard to achieve that goal."

The boys on the team build up running endurance. They must be able to run long steady distances as well as short intervals. If they aren't working hard, they won't be prepared and won't deliver at meets. By August the runners must have conditioned themselves to be able to run 50 miles a week. Constantly practicing and constantly working, the runners prepare themselves for success with good, old fashioned hard work.

The runners set goals for themselves that they work hard to achieve. A goal they had for the 2011 season was to qualify for the state meet, and while they didn't meet the goal this year, they plan to use it as motivation for the upcoming season.

Power. Focusing on the race and what was up ahead, junior Kevin Caron paced himself so that he could have a strong finish.

Team work. Before every race, the team gathered together to share a prayer and strategies for a successful race. "We pray to protect us from anything harmful that could happen to us during the race," said senior David Batterson.

Striving to win. Sophomore Grant Colligan and junior Andrew Middleton pushed passed their opponent.

Effort. Running in sync, senior Matthew Snay and sophomore Grant Colligan completed the race within steps of each other. "Matt and I run together and we usually see who will win, said Colligan. Matt usually does," said Colligan.

Breathe. "Getting to the finish line and beating the opponents is what I focused on when I ran," senior Patrick Carrier said.

Power Through. Pushing herself, junior Stacie Dexter powers herself for a strong finish to beat a competitor at the finish line.

Sky High. Before their race, senior Abigail Cottom and Courtney Masseau bond together.

Just a Little Bit More. Only a few steps away from the end, sophomore Mackenzie Dudek pushes herself to the end, with junior Caroline Fredline just behind.

Fight To The Finish. Giving it her all, junior Amanda Becker makes her way towards the finish line. She explained how she pushes through the pain at the end because five minutes after the race, the pain is gone.

Together. Hugging her teammate to keep warm, freshman Shayana Blust waits for her race.

Ahead of the Pack. Leading the way, sophomore Courtney Masseau and junior T'Lonie Babcock set the pace for the runners behind them. "You start out fast and you don't want to be passed so people behind you push you forward" Masseau said. "You can't win the race in the first mile so you have to pace yourself" said Babcock.

More Than A Team

The girls who run cross country are more of a family than a team.

Some people join cross country to get in shape, some join for something to do, and some join to be with the people they love. Sophomore Courtney Masseau wouldn't call the girls she runs with a team; she would call them a family.

"No matter how our day at school was, when we go to practice it's just time to forget about everything else and just run together," sophomore Emily Krueger said. For senior Autumn Baker, caring about each other outside of cross country is what makes them a family.

"I'd say coach Stafford could be described as our encouraging, over protective mother," said junior Amanda Becker. "That's true even during the off season."

The girls bonded by carpooling and going to sporting events together. They also spent lunch time together. The girls always had opportunities to support and encourage each other, both on and off the course. A simple "good job" or "keep it up" made a big difference.

"We spend a lot of time together," Becker said, "Including many early mornings, countless hours after school, and several long Saturday afternoons so I think that bond that we have comes from all the time we spend together."

By Gabrielle Campos

Get Moving. During warm up, Stacie Dexter gets her blood pumping by skipping. "We do a series of drills to warm up our muscles before we run." Dexter said.

Hard Work. It was Emily Krueger's first year running cross country. She had just recovered from an injury. "Coming off an injury was hard because I couldn't always push myself when I wanted to," Krueger said.

Support. Each meet, someone is at the end of each lane to cheer the swimmers to victory. "It boosts their confidence," senior Aaliyah Oliver said.

Tradition. Working together, seniors Abigail Cottom and Emily Washabaugh complete the final step in making the Holt swimmer's famous apple pies. The fundraiser helped earn money for the swimming program for the 18th year in a row.

Natural Talent. Executing a perfect dive, junior Courtney Kingsley flies through the air. "I have a blank mind," Kingsley said. "I just think to myself: stay tight, kick, look and reach."

Overcoming illness and injuries, focusing on personal goals and encouraging each other motivates swimmers to focus on the future.

This season was different than most for the Holt girls swim team. A season full of injuries created the challenge of improving individually, rather than beating other teams in the league.

The girls faced this challenge head on by training hard and preparing for next season. Spending time in and out of the pool pushed the girls to their highest potential.

"We did well considering all the injuries." senior Tara Williams said. "The sophomores made their best efforts and we are very proud of them."

Each girl focused on reaching their personal goals and breaking personal records.

"It shows a lot towards the character of the girls overcoming the adversity that we did," coach Marty Pohl said. "We will be better for it."

Training. Challenging. Rewarding. Wrestling is more than just a physical sport. "You need mental thoughness which many people don't have," senior Andrew Dyer said.

Seeking Competition

Holt wrestlers travels out of state to prepare for State Finals.

Taking advantage of traveling opportunities, the boys wrestling team competed against wellknown programs outside of Michigan.

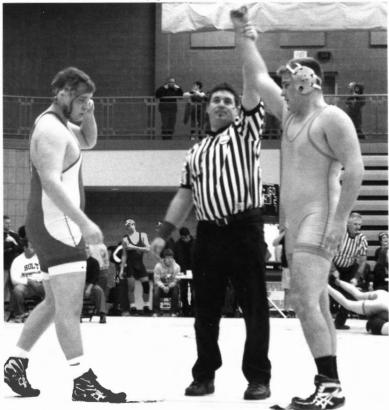

Challenging teams in Indiana and Ohio helped the boys prepare for their future competition—the state meets.

Although the wrestlers met tougher competitors, traveling the extra distance also caused trouble for some. Each state has different regulations and order in which they do things.

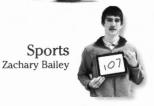

"By going outside of the state, we can run into different weigh-in or wrestling times. This can cause problems if you're used to something different," senior Andrew Dyer said. "But we can't always get the same competition inside the state."

One Step. At the Holt Invitational senior Dallas Davis gets closer to the final match. "It feels really good to get the win after having such a hard fight," Davis said.

What Makes a True Team?

Teamwork. Practice. Communication. Support.

It's all about the team. Every girl played an important role on the varsity squad this season. Although the team consisted mainly of underclassman, seniors Shaleen Williams, Autumn Baker, and Haley Powers led the team to a season filled with communication, friendship, and success. The three seniors, with their experience, made sure the team worked as a whole.

"Each girl makes a contribution to the team."

Baker explained.

Constant efforts were made to keep the bonds strong.

"We work really well together," junior Sarah Gray said.

Working well off the court, was just a warm-up for the chemistry that was displayed on the court.

"We know each other's skills, therefore our plays are carried out better," senior Haley Powers said.

Quick in Quickness

The varsity basketball squad consisted of scoring, stamina, and lots of speed.

It's all about speed. The basketball team's newly found speed made their season a success.

"Our speed makes transitioning from defense to offense easier," senior Dennis Hull explained.

This year the team was made up of mostly underclassmen, causing some differences in experience, height and ball control. "Our guards may lack in height but they make up for it in speed," senior David Herron said.

Since speed was a crucial part of their game, the team really focused on running. Practices consisted of sprints and team work. "We have good chemistry, which makes it easier to carry out plays," sophomore Colin Jones explained.

Determination. Being careful and aggressive, senior Blake Darling puts the pressure on Grand Ledge. Making sure not to draw a foul, he prevents a scoring opportunity by keeping his hands up and body in contact.

Learning Through Leadership

Gymnastics coach inspires athletes to keep improving.

Leadership and selfmotivation. Those were two of the key components to the gymnastics team.

"I really try to teach the girls how to self-motivate. We try to focus more on achieving personal bests than on beating the competition," coach Kristyn Stierley said. "Offering cookies never hurts either."

Coach Stierley helped each gymnast improve their individual skills. "I do a little bit of everything especially during meet season. I spot girls on new skills, give advice on changing routines, scrutinize the score sheets from past meets, and work with the girls to better their performances," Stierley said.

Between self-motivation and the coaches pushing the girls, the team felt it helped them achieve what they wanted and needed.

"It pushes us to achieve our highest potential," junior Taylor Hull said. "There was always something new to learn."

For sophomore Samantha Sarata, it was a good way to better your skills. "I love the challenge. There's never an end of how good you can get," Sarata said.

Being a coach, Stierley felt that it was a way to see them grow and build long lasting relationships.

"The best part of coaching is the relationship with my athletes," Stierley said. "Watching them grow as gymnasts and as people is the most rewarding feeling."

Up in arms. Pulling herself up, senior Chloe Henley flies through the air on the bars. She had to get her feet just right to be able to maneuver to the next bar.

Split. During a routine performance freshman Angelica Turrubiates does the splits on balance beam. Practice was the key thing that made their performances go well.

Senior Driven

Holt Ram seniors motivate teammates to compete, grow and achieve.

Leadership. Experience. Persistance. Passion.

Competing with ten seniors, the team had their most successful season this year. For the second time in Holt Ram history, the athletes reached the Regional Finals.

"Our seniors really led the team to our success," junior Erick Sundstrom said. "They were always encouraging and pushing the underclassmen to higher potential." The team participated in pre-season work outs three times a week to push themselves before their season. The athletes became closer while also getting fit for their season.

"Working out together gave our team the ability to play more shifts at high intensity level," senior captain Tyler Mariage said. "But it also brought us together and gave us the chemistry to be successful."

One in the Same

The boys and girls bowling teams compete separately but come together and practice to form one.

"There's no 'I' in 'TEAM'" are words to live by when you're a part of a special team. The boys and girls varsity bowling teams believe in this.

Coach Cliff McClumpha explained, "During practice all of the bowlers, boys and girls, practice together. Very rarely will I have them work apart."

The two teams share their skills and work with each other on improving their game. They both receive different input and with the teams put together, there are more people to help.

Another advantage the teams have gained from have learned to be there with moral support.

"If someone was down, there was almost always another teammate there to pick that person up," coach McClumpha said.

The teams got along well and used each other as assets.

"The guys are really funny, they know how to keep our spirits up. Everyone has become a lot closer and we all give each other a lot of support," senior Victoria Frailey said.

technique from others. "The guys will come over and tell us what we're doing wrong. They're really helpful." Victoria Frailey said.

Recreation or team sport? A lot of people do bowling just for fun. They'll go out on a Friday night with their friends, eat a lot of food and not care what scores they get. But these two teams take it seriously.

"Bowling is the most competitive and intense sport I've ever played, senior Scott Reid said. "You never really know until you actually ply competitively."

Two in One. Both the girls and boys team come together before every match to do one last chant. They then go their separate ways and compete in different leagues. "We practice together, travel together, and cheer each other on," senior Lauren Strong said. "We might not compete together but we are one team – The Holt Bowling Team."

Intense Discussion. Gathered for a pep talk, senior Benjamin Majeske, junior Jordyn Thill, junior Abraham Flores, Zack Hanson, Adam Peturwitts, and Adam Doody get ready for their big game against Okemos.

Dominating the waters

"No matter what...keep your head up and keep your intensity," senior Benjamin Majeske said in the huddle before every game.

The team is complete with a combination of East Lansing and Lansing Catholic Central students. Though the schools combined students, the number was still not enough to complete a JV and Varsity team.

Though they had fewer people, it didn't stop them from competing against their biggest rival, Okemos.

"Other schools often have enough players to fill up two complete teams, so we end up playing two full games," senior Collin Harris said. "We have to work twice as hard."

Back to the basics. Recovering, the Rams defend after a missed shot. "One of our strengths is how well we defend. We work hard to get back quick to find our man so that they don't get a shot off," senior Benjamin Majeske said. "Defense is an important part in any sport, so when you can perfect your deferse, you're golden."

Under the Waters

Playing a physical sport beneath the water leaves many fouls unknown to officials.

"Kicking, grabbing, breaking fingers and dunking are all things that happen under the water," senior Dharbi Hicok said. "There's so much movement that it is difficult for refs to call fouls."

By taking advantage of the limited vision of the refs, they were able to increase the physicality of the game. Anything under the water was legal, unless they were caught.

Working hard and staying physical led the team to a successful season, and also helped them beat their biggest rival-Grand Ledge.

The team, composed of girls from Holt, East Lansing and DeWitt, understand that the objective of water polo is unknown to many, but only because it isn't very popular in our area.

"We don't seem to get many spectators," Hicok said. "So we understand why everyone asks us how to play the game."

Working toward a season of excellence.

Focusing on their main goal, the swim team practiced hard this season in order to achieve success at the conference meet. Every day, they had a three-hour practice composed of lifting weights, doing various workouts and swimming.

"We are one of the top teams in our area," senior Erik Fiasky said. "We had to work hard with long practices. We had to have more commitment within the team."

Claiming the conference title, the team proved their determination for the season. Although winning first in the CAAC conference was the team's main honor, they also excelled at every meet.

Staying on track

Always in season, always in training. True track stars work on keeping fit inside and outside of the school season.

The key to a successful season is staying on track. In and out of season it's important to stay fit and stay sharp. Track runner Christopher Gillespie runs everyday to keep his body in condition. Some athletes compete in various sports to stay fit for track when the season's over. "I run cross country when track is over," senior Jacob McGill said, "I try to run at least two miles five days a week to keep in shape."

Track is a mixture of many things. Not only is running a great way to stay fit, it also serves as a fun hobby and a therapy session. Some runners use track as a way to clear their mind and think.

A successful track season comes from hard work. Achievement stems off of self discipline. A runner can't stop training and expect to do well in the season, they have to always be in training.

"I run all the time." Christopher said. "It's always running season for me."

Perseverance. Keeping a steady pace, junior Charles Waits rounds the bend and pushes forward in the relay.

What keeps them it is really what matters, and they don't need to do much more than that to keep up in track. "I also run every day, except the weekends, so that helps me stay in shape", Golden said.

Not only is the runner important, but so is the gear that they sport. "I usually wear Under Armour, spandex, and track spikes", Golden said. Rainy days, cold days, and hot days all change up what is worn. Whether it's sweats all day or just shorts and the running shirt, it's all dependent on the weather.

During the off season, they can't just sit around. To keep fit, some of them run up to every day of the week. A few days of no running won't hurt, but they can't just be couch potatoes. They have to keep it going, and keep their pulses racing.

A Season of Firsts

Baseball team set two records

Goal setting and working to achieve those goals was the action plan of the ram's baseball team. Their goals? 1) To become the Diamond Classic champs and 2) become state champions.

What would it take to become the Diamond Classic champs and state champions?

Determination, hard work, and practice. The ram's took runnerup champs in the classic as well as runnerup champs in the districts.

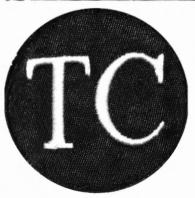

These efforts were not their "Firsts." Though the team was not successful in their two main goals, they exceeded their goals by breaking two school records.

The rams went down in history by pitching the first one-pitcher no hitter against Okemos, which was pitched by junior Andrew Sabrosky. "It felt awesome to throw one; I wasn't aware until about the fourth or fifth inning. I was struggling but it felt good to come out on top," junior Andrew Sabrosky said.

Their second season highlight and record was for their first "team" no-hitter, which was the first district game against Battle Creek Central in which pitchers Blake McHenry, Andrew Sabrosky, Kaleb Benjamin, and Josh Rios shared the win and the record. "It felt cool knowing that I was a part of Holt baseball history. I was neverous because I didn't want to be the one to mess it up," junior Blake McHenry said.

In The Stretch. Looking toward the catcher to get his sign at williamston, senior Justin Alleman focuses on how to get the batter out.

Always Remembered. The tragedy between close friends gave strength to the team.

T.C. The team showed remembrance to former player and long time friend, Taylyr Scott Cochran, by wearing a T.C. patch on their right sleeve.

Rallying the Troops. Before the first pitch of each game, the team huddled for one last team cheer.

Batter Up. Loaded and ready to hit, senior Jasmin Bird swung to hit the ball to score a run for her team against Grand Ledge.

Line up. Starters discuss lastminute strategies before facing their opponents on the field.

Follow Through. Finishing his swing, junior Ryan Polin keeps his eye on the ball. He has been a member of the varsity golf team for two years "It doesn't just require physical strength," Polin said. "You have to be mentally tough."

Poised. Following through with his swing, junior Austin
Carr keeps a good form. "Golf requires concentration and mental toughness," Carr said. "And there's always new challenges because you can always get better."

On the Edge. Practicing for his final shot senior Tyler Mariage focuses for a good putt. "The final putt can be the most stressful," Mariage said. "You could miss the hole by just an inch."

#1. Finishing first, the boys golf team poses for a final picture. "Golf is primarily an individual sport,"

senior Hiland Tuttle said. "But we have to be a team as well if we want to be successful."

Fore. Bringing up dirt, senior Joi Sanford makes his shot. "Golf is laid back and really fun to play," Sanford said.

Winning Moments

Wind up. Throwing a wicked pitch, junior Erin Chapman pitched during the season as one of the starters for the softball team.

Bunt. To gain advantage, Erin Chapman bunted the ball in an effort to score a run against Grand Ledge.

Pregame. Before the game, the team warmed up before they hit the field. This was a routine that the team did before every game and during the week.

Caught Stealing. Prepared and poised, Jasmin Bird readied for the ball as the opponent attempted to steal.

Running the Fields

Softball team records three times the champion

With a record of 11-1, the Holt Varsity Softball team was able to be named District Champions for the third time in a row this year. Looking forward to facing off against big rivals such as Grand Ledge and Jackson, it took strengths and the right kind of attitude to achieve the goal.

Every team has expectations and goals when playing. For the softball team, coaches and players needed to know what to do and when to do it, so that everyone could be counted, called and relied on when it was time. The individual expectations for softball were to do your job as a teammate, whether it was making a play or keeping a positive attitude in the atmosphere of the dugout.

With that, it took the ability to know what you were doing in the field, believing in yourself and a good positive attitude with the game.

"The one thing that I enjoyed was being able to play the games and being able to make mistakes without anybody judging me," senior Lauryn Stubblefield said.

For a softball fan, joining can mean many different things. Members on the team have said that they play because it is a passion that they have. It's also a great way to make friends and a way to have fun with something that they love to do.

Staying Focused: On the Course and in the Classroom

Iolt golfers must work hard outside of the classroom to keep up on heir school work.

Finding time to omplete school work as been the main truggle for golfers luring the season. They nissed 15-20 school lays this year due o their tournaments being scheduled in the norning.

Repeated absences reated a lot of makeip work, but also the olfers missed lectures hat were important to heir learning.

"It's hard to get aught up," senior Tyler Mariage said. "Trying to learn things out of school and on your own is harder than having a teacher explain it to you."

Teachers also have a hard time working around the athlete's schedules. The team had practice every day, and tournaments during the week as well.

"It's a big problem in computer classes," Photoshop teacher Margo Strong said. "Some come in early to get caught up. The ones who are organized do okay."

Even though the boys had to put in the extra effort, they still enjoyed the season. Being ranked as high as fifth in the state proved that the boys have practically mastered the skill of balancing their two responsibilities.

"It's hard to stay focused," senior Hiland Tuttle said. "But eventually you learn how to manage your time between school and golf."

Relax. Battling the sun, senior Jon Sanford completes his shot. "I started playing when I was young," Sanford said. "I play for the fun and the competition, and it helps to relieve stress."

Final Shot. Making the putt, senior Hiland Tuttle finishes up the hole. Tuttle has been playing golf for 15 years but will always dislike the mental aspect of the game.

PRACTICE LIKE A CHAMPION

Out of season commitment and hard work in practice help Holt players overcome the expectations.

Holt players anticipated the upcoming season by working hard off the field. Team work-outs were held three times a week, but also other players worked on their own to improve their fitness.

"I went to work-outs but also spent a lot of time running on my own," junior Brook Centofanti said.

"You have to take initiative and put in the effort."

Improving team chemistry was one of the main goals for the girls. The team arranged times when they could scrimmage together and also had preseason dinners.

"We wanted to get close before the season started," junior Emma Webster said. "Being a team helped us be more successful on the field." The girls team lost nine seniors last year, forcing the young team to work together to compete against other teams in the area.

"I'm confident that we can prove how hard we've worked," junior Haleigh Ammon said.

Oh Say Can You See. Holding hands, the Holt girls line up for the National Anthem. "It's a pre-game tradition," junior Gabrielle Corbin said. "We're all part of one team. There's no individual."

Quickness. Using her speed, senior Amy Benitez dribbles around an opponent.

Experience. Shielding a defender from the ball, junior Emma Webster proves her strength on the field. "I've been playing soccer since I could walk," Webster said. "Having so much experience makes the game easy. It's like... natural."

Steal. Slide tackling, senior Skylen Powell steals the ball from an opponent. "Soccer is my life," Powell said. "I love it more than ood."

Last Defender. Punting the ball, junior Kori Ramirez releases the ball after making a save. "How I play can decide the outcome of the game," Ramirez said. "But my team is always working to support and encourage me."

Taking the Shot. Charging toward goal, junior Haleigh Ammon sprints past a Waverly defender. "The final seconds before you score a goal can be nerve-racking," Ammon said. "But you have to be confident and just put the ball in the back of the net."

Strength. Fighting off an East Lansing defender, junior Brook Centofanti makes a pass to a teammate. "You have to be physically tough on the field," Centofanti said. "You don't want to get pushed around."

On Your Toes. Getting a touch on the ball, senior Jenny McClumpha strides past a Mason defender. "There are no set plays," McClumpha said. "You have to use your skills differently for each game." Coming together. The girls varsity team comes together one last chant to end of ever practice.

The perfect serve. Concentrating on her swing, senior Abigail Cottom works to add power to her serve to catch her opponent off guard and score a point.

Focus, place, achieve. When returning a serve, senior Alexis Pridgen anticipates the type of return needed to make a good placement of the ball. "I like to depend on my self," Pridgen said. "I know if I mess up it's my fault."

For the Love of the Game

Girls tennis love the game and the time they spend working together.

Having fun on and off the court was the main highlight of the girls tennis season. Being close and having good chemistry played a big role in having a successful team.

"We pick on each other, teach each other, play around and just have fun," senior Lea Schafer said.

The girls bonded the most on the bus rides to away matches. They laughed, sang and told jokes the entire time.

"Jamie Hulteen would dance on the bus to and from games, then the entire team would follow her," senior Abigail Cottom said.

By playing team building games at practice, the team was able to become closer while still having fun. Every member of the team worked hard and made sure everyone was involved.

"Even though I was one of the younger players, I never felt out of place," junior Sanda Vazgec said.

The team finished the season with a 5-5-3 record, proving that they could still find the time to be serious and practice hard.

"We know everyone tries their best all the time, senior Lea Schafer said. "Win or lose, we remain a family, not just teammates."

A Repeat Season

Practice after practice, the lacrosse team pushes hard to make regionals for the third year in a row

The boy's lacrosse team had a clear goal for this season—qualifying for regionals.

Commitment, perseverance, hard-work and winning were all aspects to reaching that goal.

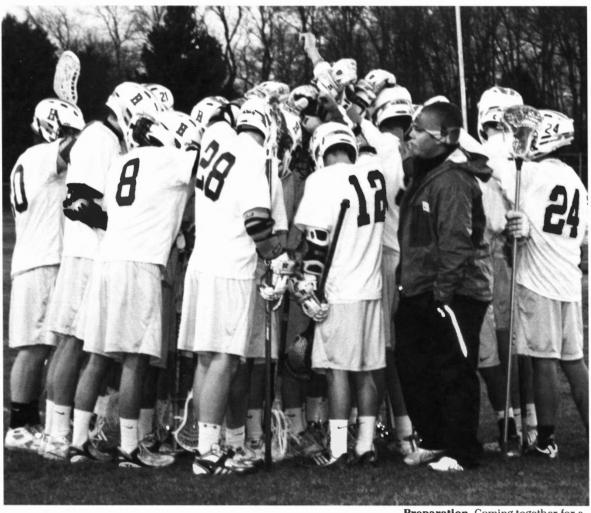

Being an experienced team—with many returning seniors and juniors—the players were able to use their familiarity with each other and the game to push each other towards their goal.

"We know each other's roles on the field," sophomore Paul Schalau said. "Having the experience will help us reach our goal."

Leadership is key to having an effective team. "As a senior, I like to lead by example," senior Steven McKee said.

Winning at regionals would be a prestigious accomplishment.

"It would be really exciting if we won this year," junior Erick Sundstrom said. "It would be the farthest Holt's ever gotten."

Preparation. Coming together for a final huddle, the lacrosse team gets ready to head out onto the field.

Dominating. Senior Steven McKee prepared to make a goal against Forrest Hills.

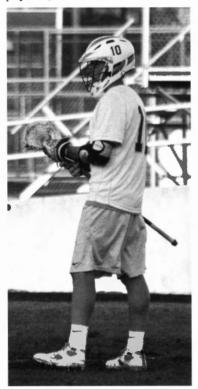

Dedication. In celebration of the win agains Rockford, the team rushed the field.

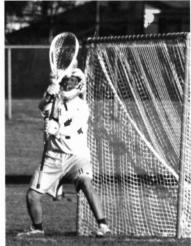

Sprinting. Sprinting with the ball, junior Erick Sundstrom ran to the opponents goal to try and score. "The game is fast paced and physical," Sundstrom said.

Preparing. Walking to the center fo the field, senior Alex Hrapkiewicz prepares for the face off.

etting your mind set. Seniors latthew Snay and Nicholas Payne id their drills to get ready for their ame that was coming up.

Teamwork. After blocking an attempted goal, both teams rush for the ball hoping to regain possession. As a player from Battle Creek catches it, seniors, Victoria Baker and Jenna Payne work together to get the ball back in Holts control.

Starting it right. At the start of the game, senior Alexandra Caldwell lined up next to her opponent ready to sprint down the field when the whistle blew. The team improved its record to 9-10 from the previous year 1-10.

By Samantha TenHove and Emma Webster

On the defensive. Getting the ball away from the goal, senior Lauren Maier sprints down the field chased by her opponents. "I think it would be nice to play offense and be able to score and get my name in the paper," Maier said. "But defense is an important part of the game too, and it's more physical."

ompetition. Going head to head ith her opponent, senior, Lauren laceachern starts the play by imping to gain possession of the ball. "I play lacrosse because it's a lot of fun. I love how physical it is," Maceachern said. "I love the adrenaline rush I get while playing."

Aggressive. Trying to intercept the ball, senior Jenna Payne jumps in front of her opponent to catch the ball first. "I love playing offense because it's more aggressive," Payne said. "And let's be honest scoring is always fun."

Gaining Momentum

Girls lacrosse continues to become more popular in the Mid-Michigan area.

The girls lacrosse team is growing not only in Holt but at other schools as well. The team went from only playing 11 games to playing 19, meaning that eight more schools found the numbers to roster a varsity team.

Last season the girls had many challenges they couldn't overcome with a record of one win and ten losses.

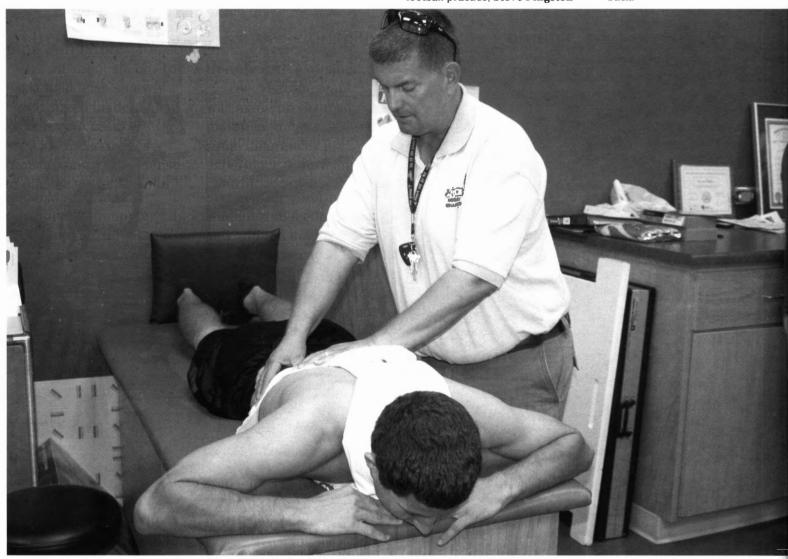

When the girls came back this season with new faces and new leaders, the team accomplished nine wins and ten losses which was a big improvement for a program that is still growing. "This season compared to last was night and day," senior Mikala Blust said "We were more focused, more organized, and we worked as a team better than in years past."

Determination. Chasing after her opponent, senior Victoria Baker trying to help her team clear it from there defending end. Using sticks to cradle the ball makes lacrosse different from most other sports, which use their hands to control the ball.

They're not only lelping the school and the team, they're helping me out," Athletic Trainer Steve Pingston said.

Pingston enjoyed the company of his student athletic trainers but he also liked the help he got from the teenagers.

He teaches his student athletic trainers basic taping skills, simple tasks around the athletic training room, how injuries occur, what they look like and how to help them.

"I learn how to treat, prevent, and rehabilitate sports injuries," student athletic trainer Allison Pingston said.

Working with Steve Pingston gave students an opportunity to explore different job ideas and also helped the students learn essential tasks that they can use later in life.

"I might do this program in college so l can become a Physician's Assistant when I'm older," Allison Pingston said.

The small things like learning how and when to stretch correctly and how to care for minor injuries will also help the high schoolers in their future.

"I learned a lot of things that will come in handy playing sports and it's also cool knowing the little facts because it makes me look smart to other people," student athletic trainer

Students have an opportunity to be competitive: the athletes rise to the occasion.

"Let me win, but if I cannot win, let me be brave in my attempt," - Special Olympics Oath.

In this program athletes are brought together to show their true potential.

State and area tournaments were held for these athletes at public schools. Holt was fortunate enough to host the swimming portion of the Olympics.

"It's really exciting to know our school hosts something like the Special Olympics," junior Kaitlyn Holmstrom said. "It's cool to know we're giving kids opportunities to be involved in things such as sports."

Going out, working hard and having fun made this year's Olympics successful. Each member was given the chance to be involved in multiple sports and also to have fun together.

Having a coach willing to do anything for her team is a building block to a successful program. Coach Valerie Suszko worked hard to inspire her athletes.

"The athletes all practice very hard and work well as a team," coach Suszko said. "It has been an honor to represent the Special Olympics and Holt public schools."

The Show Must Go On!

How the cast and crew pulled off the show with hard work and commitment.

Dressed to Kill. Posing during her dream scene, junior Megan Myers playing the role of Judy for the musical, '9 to 5', dances over to junior Colin McCarthy, who played the part of Hart, to try and coax him towards her. The idea was to get revenge on Hart for how he has been treating the girls at work.

Practice makes perfect.
Perfecting their parts junior Megan Myers and senior Cody Shattuck rehearse their scene together during practice. During the scene, Myers had to coordinate singing and acting simultaneously.

Cowgirls' Revenge. Singing one of Dolly Partons' song from the musical, sophomore Emily Hadick and senior Karel Zuidema take revenge into their own hands against Hart. "It was really fun to be a main role. Trying to memorize lines was pretty difficult and stressful at times," Hadick said. "The musical itself was kind of chaotic at times, especially at the end. But overall, it was really fun and definitely worth the hard work."

Showtime. Working with the actors and chorus members to perfect music, the orchestra pit gave it their all when it was performance time.

Keeping tempo and rhythm was a key factor in making the show run smoothly.

With pending budget cuts of the 2011-12 year, the spring musical was one item that was on the list to be removed. The senior choir members along with other students wanting a participate in the musical formed together and went to the school board meetings to protest the actions, resulting in the einstatement of the musical. This year it was decided as '9-5'.

Hard work and weeks of dedication went into the roduction to reach the superior otential. The four main leads were made up of juniors Megan lyers and Colin McCarthy, ophomore Emily Hadick and with the third female lead reshman Makayla Kost.

"I had a mixture of different eelings with being a freshman and having a lead in the musical," Kost said. "I expected oget ensemble or a small peaking part, not a lead. Having a lot of lines was definitely a oad of work., It was hard to believe."

What helped pull the show ogether was the bond the ast and crew had during the ractices.

"This experience for me was life changing, and the people I met were amazing and all beautiful," sophomore Natalie Baker said. "I thank every one of them for being caring and understanding to each cast member. We are a family."

Not only did dancing and learning music take a lot of work. Getting the character down took some time as well for some of the cast members.

"Getting the character wasn't too hard to do, but the hardest part for me was getting a southern accent for my character," senior Karel Zuidema said. "I had never really used one before. And I grew up riding horses on a farm so, being a cowboy was pretty easy. Dancing was a little hard."

Along with work, props and set pieces were a major component to making the musical what it was. The Tech Crew had to spend long hours in getting everything done.

"It was fun to work on the sets and learning to use the different types of tools. All the things we work on took effort," senior Sarah Morgan said. "It was a lot of work to get it all done. But was worth it."

Finishing Touches. Putting the last details to her costume, sophomore Natalie Baker gets help from Assistant Director Amanda Nolen to fix the sash to her dress.

"Everything took a lot of work. Pulling outfits for everyone and every scene, with hair taking forever. Makeup was easy. But all in all It was worth it," Baker said.

Around Here. Working on getting the songs perfected, the ensemble members of the musical '9-5' practice 'Joy to the Girls' for the show. The song involved higher notes and ranges that pushed the vocals of the singers.

poisoned her boss, Violet, played by freshman Makayla Kost, converses with sophomore Emily Fadick, Doralee, and Megan Nyers, Judy, on what she should to.

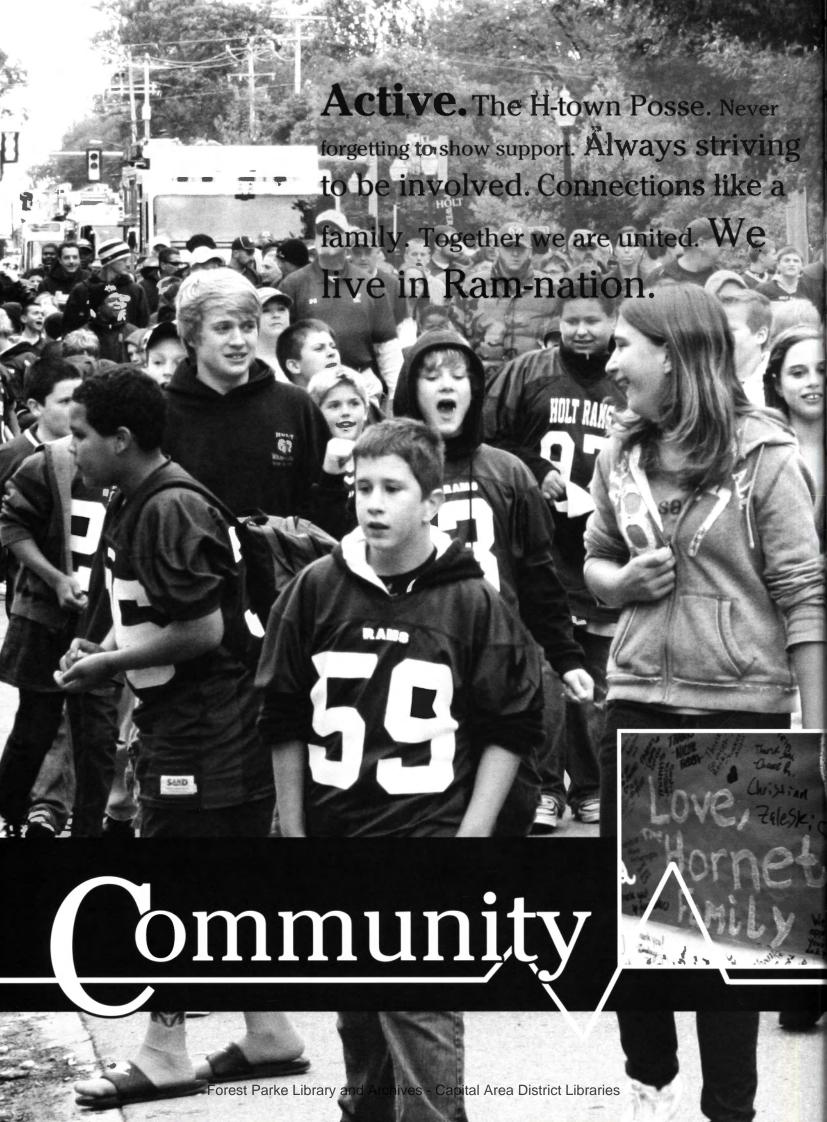

Behind the Scenes. During the microphone check, senior Alison Sluiter and junior Colin McCarthy practice their character roles with each other. Sluiter and McCarthy who play Roz and Hart, conjured up a plan, to frame the girls for poisoning Hart.

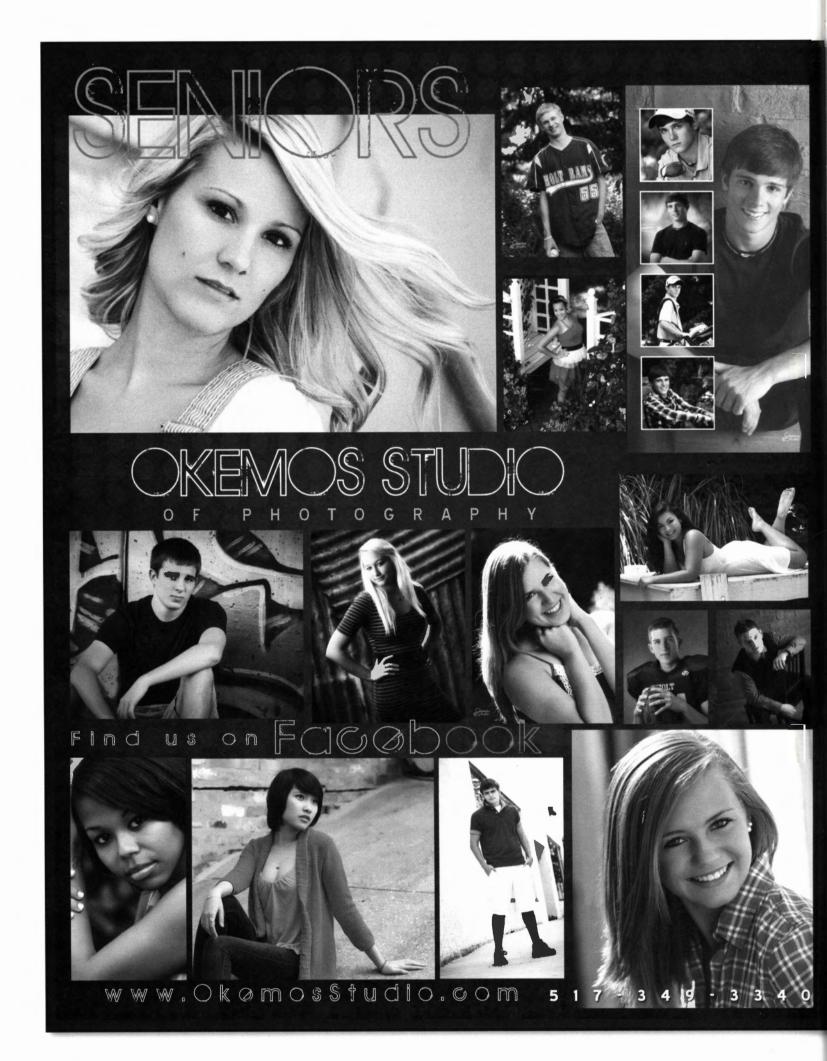

Kidnap. Trying to figure out what they are going to do with Hart, the girls decide to take him hostage and keep him in his house.

"I was just thinking like, gotta get out of this carpet, stuff my character would think about like how he hated the girls," junior Colin McCarthy said. "It was kind of hard to stay like that through the whole song."

Tyler, I am truly the luckiest to have you as my little brother. Over the years, you have grown to be such a kind, smart person with a GREAT sense of humor. You are always fun to be around and truly have a heart of gold, never failing to be there when someone needs a helping hand. I am very proud of who you've become and love you so very much. No matter what path you take in life, I know you are going to do great things and make a huge, positive impact on everyone and everything around you.

Grant,

Ve are very proud of what an mazing young man you have ecome! Believe in yourself and nere is nothing you can't achieve!

We love you very much! Mom, Dad and Kenny

Dear Dallas,

You're an amazing young man with a world full of opportunities ahead! Embrace those opportunities with the same excitement and determination you have everything else up to this point in life and success will be yours!

We wish you the strength to face challenges with confidence along with the wisdom to choose your battles carefully. We wish you adventures on your journey and may you always stop to help someone along the way. Listen to your heart and take risks carefully. Remember how much you are loved...... we are so proud of you.

Love, Mom and Steve

Collin,

You're the best big brother that any little sister could ask for! Everything you've done and accomplished throughout high school has encouraged me to be a better person. We may have our fights and disagreements but that has only brought me closer to you because I know that in the end you'll be my best friend when I need one most and when I just need someone to talk to about my problems. I'm going to miss our times together when you go off to college but I know that we will not grow apart and you will always be my big brother! I love you so much and I wish you the best with everything that comes your way! I know you'll do great!

Love, Averie

Collin,

It's been wonderful watching you grow from a happy,energetic preschooler at Horizon to a handsome and well rounded young man now graduating from high school. We are so very proud of who you are, and look forward to your continued journey and successes. May God continue blessing you in all of your future endeavors.

WAVES OF CHANGE Former Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who had been in power since 1981, was ousted in 2011. He was later put on trial for allegedly ordering the killing of protesters. EGYPTIAN PROTESTERS Waving their national flag and shouting slogans, thousands crowded Cairo's Tahrir Square to demand political change as anger grows with the military rulers over the slow pace of reform. TOGETHER IN PROTEST The flags of Syria, Tunisia, Yemen, Egypt and Libya were painted on participants' palms during a demonstration in Yemen.

PROTESTS ACROSS THE MIDDLE EAST brought changes to Arab nations large and small. Uprisings began in Tunisia, where, as 2010 ended, a young vendor protesting the confiscation of his wares set himself on fire. Discontent spread to Egypt and Yemen as 2011 began, and in the months that followed those governments and leaders from Bahrain, Libya and Syria were under siege. By year's end, the presidents of Tunisia, Egypt and Yemen had stepped down and Libya's Moammar Gadhafi and his son Mutassim had been assassinated. Tunisians went to the polls in October 2011 and the Egyptian election took place just a month later. The protests continued despite high costs: thousands of lives (5,000 in Syria alone) and billions of dollars were lost.

THE END OF AN ERA Harry Potter's movie franchise came to an end with the release of its final installment in July 2011. The series became the highest grossing franchise in domestic box office history, accumulating $2.4 billion in America and $7.7 billion worldwide. Though we have to say good-bye to Harry and friends as the Potter films come to a close, Muggles can continue to enjoy the world of Harry Potter through the additions of the Wizarding World Theme Park at Universal Studios in Orlando, Florida and JK Rowling's new online experience, Pottermore.

ADELE Billboard's Artist of the Year released her second album, 21, which immediately topped the charts and remained there for 13 weeks to become the year's best-selling album. An October vocal cord hemorrhage required microsurgery, forcing the 21-year-old Brit to take a break from performing, but she sang at the Grammys where her six nominations turned into six wins.

IT STARTED SO INNOCENTLY. IT consultant Sohaib Athar (@ReallyVirtual) had moved to remote Abbotabad. Pakistan to escape the rat race. On May 1, 2011, he tweeted about a late-night military operation involving helicopters hovering over the city. While Navy Seals were involved in a firefight on Osama bin Laden's compound, Athar was lightheartedly complaining that the copters were keeping him awake. Unknowingly, he was the first to report the mission using Twitter. The attack on the 38,000-squarefoot compound was followed by bin Laden's burial at sea.

Uh oh, now I'm the guy who liveblogged the Osama raid without knowing it.
