SYSTEM HAY MAKING SHOWN

...makes higher qual-
...says specialist.

A saving of almost one-half in labor cost in making alfalfa hay with the Dain system has been obtained by some farmers in Michigan. R. H. Morrish, farm census specialist for the Michigan State College, told about eighty farmers at the hay making demonstration held on the W. G. Reeve farm north of Stockbridge last Friday. This saving was obtained, he explained, where there was a large enough acreage to make economical use of a tractor with a power take-off for the mower, and with a side delivery rake attached to the same unit.

"The basis of the Dain System," said Mr. Morrish, is to get the hay in the windrows with a side delivery rake as soon as possible after it is cut. Where one team is being used, hay should not be cut more than an hour, before stopping to rake it. If two teams are moving another can be kept busy with the side rake. Getting the hay into the windrows allows it to air cure rather than sun cure and saves the leaves and the green color. It will take longer to cure the hay with this method, but a hay is obtained higher in a feeding value, and higher in market value.

"This system is especially valuable during a rainy season," added Mr. Morrish. "Hay rained on in the swath always loses its color, and a good share of the leaves before it is dry enough to put in the barn. In the windrow it is only necessary after the top has dried to turn it over on dry ground with the side rake. The air soon dries the hay and it goes into the barn with a much better color and more leaves than if it had been in the swath. A few years ago hay made at the college with this system was rained on eight times and yet was graded U. S. No. 2, which is a high quality hay."

When there is good weather hay will ordinarily be ready to go into the barn the second day after cutting with this system, according to Mr. Morrish, although there have been cases where it was ready the afternoon of the day after cutting.

Agricultural Agent, J. G. Wells, Jr., who arranged the meeting, told of a number of farmers in the county who use this practice with excellent results following the demonstration at the Fred F. Fuhrman farm last June.

DIFFICULT TO GET UNDER WAY

Sometimes the present day is spoken of as a young man's age. The truth probably is that a young man has less chance of making a brilliant start today than did the young men a hundred or two hundred years ago.

The reason is that men are living longer, thus increasing the competition for the top positions.

In the last fifty years the average length of life has been extended fifteen or twenty years. Whereas most men were dead at forty they are now living to fifty-five or sixty. Not only are they living, but they are working every day. They are in harness-able efficient, and keen in judgment.

Young men are finding it no easy task to dislodge them.

Youth has energy and initiative. Maturity brings judgment, perhaps the most valuable of all qualities.

With the length of life being extended each decade it may be that the sons of young men today will be happy if they can get well under way by the time they are forty-five or fifty.

SCHEDULE FOR CONVENIENCE TRUCK

Modern kitchen to be shown at part stops

Complete schedule for the home convenience truck in Ingham County is given by J. G. Wells, Jr., agricultural agent as follows:

July 3, A. M. Frank Thompson, two and one-half miles north of Mason on the Okemos road (Geo. Gillespie farm); P. M. Wayne Runciman, four and one-half miles south of Williamston.

July 5, A. M. M. Janeeke, seven miles west and one mile north of Mason; or three and one-half miles west and three miles south of Holt; P. M. 1. S. Thorpe, four miles south and one and one-half miles west of Mason.

July 6, A. M. Ralph Walker, one-half mile east of Dancesville; P. M. Lloyd True, one mile east of Leslie.

Miss Edna V. Smith, home management specialist for the Michigan State College, will explain the arrangement of the model truck, with suitable wall and floor coverings. At the Lovejoy home there will be on exhibit a new kitchen with the equipment arranged with the cooperation of Miss Smith. Other stops where modern kitchens will be on exhibit are: Wayne Runciman, M. Janeeke, and Lloyd True.

N. A. Kessler, agricultural engineering specialist, will explain the simple water system carried, and take up any questions along the home engineering line.

Methodist Rev. F. J. Grant

Baptist Rev. H. E. Sayles

The contest between the Blues and the Reds in the Sunday school is closed. The blues were victorious, and were banqueting by the Reds last Friday evening at the church. They also gave a great program to the delight of all.

A farewell reception to Mr. and Mrs. Milo White and daughter Harriet, was given the same night. The church and congregation presenting Mr. and Mrs. White with a Coleman gasoline lantern, and Mrs. Sayles S. S. Class gave Miss Harriet a memory and picture album. They are leaving for the west coast very soon. We wish them God speed.

The pastor Rev. H. E. Sayles was at Detroit last week attending the meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention, and reported on the same last Sunday morning.

The Ministers Conference of Ingham and Livingston Counties held their annual picnic at Joslin Lake next Monday, July 2nd. Pot luck dinner at noon. Every minister and family and friends come. Each minister bring a short paper on the attendance.

It does absolutely no good to try to guess a woman's age. No man would have the courage to tell the truth if he were certain of it.

With the girls all working, young whippersnappers may get the notion that a help mate is one who will help meet the expenses.

Why Is It?

SHEEP GROWERS WATCH PARASITES

Wet Weather Increases Stomach Worm Danger, According to M. S. C. Specialists

Sheep raisers should be on the look out for stomach worms in their flocks, advises the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College. Warm, muggy weather, with frequent rainfall, is said to be conducive to the development of this parasite in sheep, and heavy losses are likely to occur if precautions are not taken.

Infestations of stomach worms are said to occur most frequently when sheep are left to graze on the same pasture year after year, although heavy infestations and losses may also occur with the flock on new pasture. This is due to the fact that a number of these parasites may be carried over in the digestive tract of the breeding ewe, and in seasons such as the present, may heavily infest a new pasture in a single season.

The presence of stomach worms in a flock is indicated by the lambs becoming dull and listless and the wool dry and harsh. The skin, which should be a bright pink, becomes pale, and the eyelids are pale and colorless when they should be a network of bright red blood vessels. Diarrhea is also often present.

When any of the above symptoms are present in a flock, or if a number of the sheep were not thrifty last season, treatment for stomach worms with copper sulphate is recommended. Full directions for this treatment may be had from county agents or from the animal husbandry department of Michigan State College.

A REAL BEAST OF BURDEN

A comparatively few years ago, before our mechanical giants came into being, it was the custom to call the mule the beast of burden. He was regarded as the extreme of patient, working energy.

Today the real beast is made of steel instead of flesh and bone, motivated by gasoline, instead of blood. It is the crawler type tractor.

How to solve farm problems is being demonstrated on 3,000 acres of wheat land owned by Mr. J. R. Whitcomb, son of a former Governor of Oregon. He runs one tractor or practically 24 hours daily to plow eight 14 inch inches, plowing to a depth of seven inches. The grade on which the work is being done runs as high as 60 per cent. And for six weeks the tractor has plowed on the average 85 acres of ground daily, without having once cooled off. It is machine methods such as this that are revolutionizing agriculture and efficiency.

30 YEARS AGO

Mary Elizabeth Bacheler died at her home here, June 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Echles were out riding on their bicycles when Mrs. Echles ran over a snake. Clarence killed it and took 6 rattles from its tail.

W. S. Kennedy built engine house and remodeled the Steffy barn near the creek to be used as a basket factory.

Was born in the township of Stockbridge, July 20, 1893, and departed this life June 14, 1928. She spent the greater part of her life in and near this vicinity. Very early in life she united with the Baptist Church at Gregory. On March 11, 1914, she was united in marriage to Fay M. Townsend. And to this union were born nine children, Howard, Rex, Loal, Helen, Dorothy, Mary Louise, Evadne, Geraldine and Kenneth L., who died in infancy. Also a host of relatives and friends. She was a devoted wife and christian mother, an active member and worker in the church and Ladies Aid Society and will be greatly missed by those who knew her. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon and the remains brought to Oak Lawn cemetery for burial.

A change of one figure often means a lot, and a "2" instead of "4" in last week's issue made the obituary of Mrs. Fay Townsend read that she was married in "1924" instead of "1914". We gladly make the correction and reprint the obituary.

Fitch C. Montague, a life long resident of Unadilla Liv. County, passed away at his home, Sunday June 17th 1928.

He was born Oct. 9th 1853. One of a family of six children born to Alexander Salisbury and Sarah Chipman Montague. His early life was spent on the old Montague farm where he always stayed until the death of his mother. He then purchased the farm where he lived until the end.

LOCAL MAN COMMITTS SUICIDE

This village was shocked again last Saturday evening when it was reported that Fred West had ended his life by hanging, in the barn back of his home on East Main St. The condition of the body showing that he had probably been dead for two or three hours before he was found.

Mrs. West and daughter, Mrs. McCune, were spending the day with Mrs. Nordman at Chelsea, Fred complaining of not feeling well, staying at home. Mrs. West returning home in the early evening and not finding him in the house went to the barn where she discovered him hanging from a rafter.

He had complained for several weeks of poor health and being unable to work, this is thought to have played upon his mind causing him to take his own life.

Fredrick West was born in the township of Stockbridge, October 11, 1869, ship of Stockbridge, October 11, 1869. He spent the greater part of his life in and near this vicinity.

On September 25, 1895 he was united in marriage to Miss Ida Bush, and to this union were born seven children: Mrs. Marjorie Gibson, Mrs. Hazel Ingels, Mrs. Dorothy McKune, of Stockbridge; Mrs. Grace Kranzfelder of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Lois Nordman of Chelsea; and two boys who died in infancy. Besides the wife and children, he leaves to mourn their loss, a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the home, Rev. J. A. Adair officiating, burial at Oak Lawn Cemetery.

GOOD FARMING PRACTICE PAYS

Livingston County can boast of many farmers who really are making farming profitable.

W. Solomon of Tyrone township still finds that on his 108 acre farm, with 13 good dairy cows and a flock of 65 ewes, he has a good yearly income. For the season of 1927 his cows brought him in $2,727.00 and his lambs and wool sold, brought him in $500.00.

Mr. Solomon is past middle age considerable, but manages to raise most of his roughage, but buys considerable grain for his cows, and with the help of his wife manages to do most of his own farm work.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear son who passed away eight years ago today, June 29, 1920.

When the evening shadows are falling

And we sit so quite alone,

To our hearts there comes a longing

If he only could come home.

Friends may think we have forgotten,

When at times they see us smile,

But they little know the heart ache

That our smiles hide all the while.

STRAIGHTFORWARD
ADVERTISING

When business puts itself public on a record in the matter of its purposes and ideals, it lifts itself by its spiritual bootstraps. Such a public declaration of decency and honesty enlists the entire community as a cloud of witnesses. The advertiser must produce as advertised or he will surely fail.

Then when a business has a genuine story of sincere service to tell, it must tell it simply and persistently.

Two men delivered speeches about sixty years ago at Gettysburg. One man was the greatest orator of his day, and he spoke for two hours and a half. No one remembers a single sentence of his oration today.

The other man spoke less than five minutes, and every school child has at some time learned Lincoln's Gettysburg address and remembered more or less of it all his life.

Advertising should be as simple and direct as the Gettysburg speech, the Lord's prayer and the twenty-third psalm.

Advertising men are constantly being called on by the heads of industries that are in a jam, who want advertising to accomplish for them in three months what they should have been working on for ten years.

Thoughtful advertising men will be responsible for the results of such an effort.

This business of public relations is a constant business. The fact that his history was told yesterday should not lead any business man into the delusion of believing he does not need to tell it today.—Bruce Barton in the Nation's Business.

WE ARE NOT DIVIDED

Because an over zealous Canadian patriot tore the American flag from an American tourists auto at Montreal, for a moment it was like touching a lighted match to an open keg of gun powder. But thanks to bigger minds, who saw the error both the American and the Canadian who were lacking in courtesy, only good is going to result from the incident. The American had he thought on entering the Dominion, would have secured a British flag of like dimensions, and placing both on his auto with the British a mite higher, he would, instead of gaining ill repute, got the glad hand of every true hearted Canadian.

at the time time exalted both his flag and himself in their eyes. And too, it was ungentlemanly and unkind for the Canadian to tear the stars and stripes from the car in the manner he did. He lacked both in diplomacy and courtesy toward a visiting guest. The United States and Canada are united by a million ties and with our great international bridges are fast leaving that the boundary line is but a line after all, for with one God above us we are in heart to ever bear our respective parts in life's great drama and bidding God speed to every cause that aspires toward the uplift of humanity. Yes, as in the World War, the flags united stood as a bulwark against a common foe, and in peace we say unite our flags, and as Americans and Canadians on either side of the line let us get better acquainted with each other's national emblems even to the remotest sections of the two great countries, and instead of engendering hate we'll cultivate respect and a high regard for each other. We are not divided.—We are brothers for world wide righteousness.—Linden Leader.

REPEATER CRIMINALS PUBLIC MENACE

Recent news item states that Governor C. C. Young of California believed that the average convicted criminal should be pardoned only after he has proved himself worthy of release.

It is this policy, he said, that has caused him to issue fewer pardons and commutations of sentence than most of his predecessors in office.

Systems designed to help and urge the criminal to reform and prepare himself for a place in society, such as the parole, pardon and commutation of sentence, are of great benefit and value when used intelligently and conservatively used. But it seems unquestionable that they have been often abused, by mawkish sentiment that has issued pardons wholesale to criminals waiting for chances to commit further law violations, with the result that crime is encouraged.

Governor Young has taken the proper attitude. Most crime legislation, such as that having to do with the sale and possession of small arms, puts the cart before the horse and defeats its own purpose, for only the law-abiding citizen is inconvenienced by the restriction. If we are to suppress crime we must act along lines of quick arrest, trial and conviction and adequate punishment, without parole or pardon until it is shown that they are eminently deserving.

Further, the law should be so amended that a "repeater" criminal would automatically increase his own sentence with each crime repetition and conviction.

COUNTY HAY-DAY

The Hay-Day demonstration held on the Jay Tooley farm, June 21st was a successful event although the weather was such that hay could not be processed in the regular manner. R. E. Barton and A. F. Bennett had the 11 C and John Deere equipment on the ground. Paul Miller of the Farm Crops Dept. M. S. C. talked on the methods used in Dain system of curing alfalfa in too soon, often it will not mow-burn but colors very badly. The best judge on the time to put the hay in, is the farmer himself.

The addition of a twelve quart pail of common salt to the load will help materially to keep the hay from burning.

The hay pitching contest at the conclusion proved rather interesting. There were four contestants and Orson Sobey of Conway, and Clyde Ellis of Howell were tied for first. Before they were finished on the tie, someone made a suggestion that a contest be taken and each contestant was given a fork. The Sutton Hard collection R. E. Barton.

Gowns, Hats, Are Summery

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

ACCORDING to the promise of the mode, the summer landscape is to be graced with just such groups of feminine loveliness and sartorial perfection as this illustration portrays. To arrive at such a "picture" requires more than wide floppy brims, sheers of frocks, with daintiest of finery and shoes, the entire presenting an entrancing study in color, which exactly describes women's dress "as is" today.

There is as significant a display of millinery in this group as there is of frocks. The first hat, per example, to the left, adopts a trimming of wide grosgrain ribbon, which spreads its pointed ends fan-shaped over one side of the drooping brim. As a matter of fact ribbon is playing an outstanding role in the way of decoration for summery straws. And there is the hat next to it which gains its prestige from several causes, chief among which is the fact that it is one of those lovely hair bodies, so thin you can see through it. Also it features a soft irregular silhouette, which is so characteristic of the new millinery trends. Then, too, it is trimmed with wide velvet ribbon and that adds several credits to its sum total of stylishness. As to the handsome huge hair hat which tops the polka-dotted voile frock to the right, the fact that it is all black assures its chic, not to mention the charm of its transparency and the correct dimensions of its brim, according to the mode's chart.

The dress worn with this lovely black hat is indeed ultra-modern, first because it exploits the dotted theme and, second, because it is trimmed with grosgrain ribbon in two tones—navy and ecru. Bicolor and tricolor striped ribbons, or several ribbons forming varicolored borderings are much in evidence as trimming both for frocks and for hats.

Many of the newer plaited skirts adopt a scalloped hemline such as adds charm to the frock of tinted voile shown in the center of this group. The lace insertion which elaborates the blouse in vertical line is dyed the same orchid shade as that of the voile of which the dress is made.

A flowered print is shown to the left and while its styling bespeaks simplicity, it carries style conviction in every detail of its widened hemline, and its engorged neckline.

OSNABURG, HOUSE FURNISHING FABRIC

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"From field to fireside" might be the slogan that heralds the appearance of osnaburg as a house furnishing fabric of merit. Osnaburg, in the South, is known as the stuff cotton picking bags are made of—bags for gathering potatoes, work clothes. In its undyed state it is similar in color to unbleached muslin or linen. It is coarse and strongly woven, in different degrees of looseness, and with some irregularities of yarn. These very irregularities make it an artistic and charming fabric for draperies and upholstery and other house furnishings.

Additional practical advantages of osnaburg are that it is inexpensive, easy to launder, easy to dye to match other furnishings, and made in desirable widths.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests, among other uses, that osnaburg makes excellent and inexpensive slip covers for furniture. It can be relieved by cordings or bands of ecrotone or chintz in gay patterns, if desired, or by using decorative pillows by way of contrast. The illustration shows a slip cover for an upholstered chair, made with corded edges of ecrotone, which give firmness and add color. The box-plaited flounce is effective. The round pillow is made from the same ecrotone as the corded edge, and other furnishings in the room where this chair is used have also trimmings of the ecrotone. When necessary such a slip cover may be laundered.

A similar cover may be made for a davenport or box couch, for a window seat or a draped dressing table. Sometimes a trunk must be kept in a bed room or hall, and an osnaburg slip cover will camouflage its presence attractively. Radiators may be concealed when not in use by osnaburg draperies plaited on a covered board which is fastened to the wall by brackets and is a handy shelf for books and magazines.

Osnaburg has body enough to be used for portieres at doorways. Its plainness makes it satisfactory for draw curtains or overdraperies at the window of a boy's or man's room.

Nellie Maxwell Recipes

Is there ever any pie better than cherry pie, the kind that mother used to make—juicy, rich and sweet? A deep pie full of the luscious cherries and baked with not a drop of its lusciousness lost by boiling over? Cherries lend themselves to many delightful dishes. Here is one which is very good:

Cherry Cream Pie.—The old-fashioned cherry pie is about as good as any that can be made; but there is one that is different: Line a pie pan with sweet cracker crumbs, cover with platted cherries and make a sauce as follows: Two tablespoons each of butter and sugar, two eggs, two thirds of a cup of milk and a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Mix the starch with the sugar, beat the eggs one at a time into the cornstarch mixture, add the butter melted, and the milk, stirring in gradually. Cook for a few minutes over water until the starch is thoroughly cooked, then pour over the cherries. Cover with a top crust and bake until the crust is browned about twenty minutes.

Cherry Souffle.—Put four table spoonfuls of flour, two table spoonfuls of butter into a saucepan and when the butter bubbles stir in the flour, mix well and add one-half cupful of milk; stir and cook until smooth and thick, cool, add four table spoonfuls of sugar and the yolks of three eggs, one by one, stirring each thoroughly; now add the stiffly beaten whites and four table spoonfuls of finely minced preserved cherries. Pour into a mold well buttered, set into a pan of hot water and bake three-fourths of an hour. Turn out and serve with cherry sauce, the juice of canned or fresh cherries, slightly thickened and sweetened to taste.

Steamed Cherry Pudding.—Take two table spoonfuls of butter, cream and add one cupful of sugar, three beaten eggs, one cupful of milk, one table spoonful of lemon juice, three cupfuls of flour, three table spoonfuls of baking powder and one-half table spoonful of salt. Mix all the ingredients and add one quart of stoned cherries. Pour into a large mold and steam two and one-half hours.

Sauce: One cupful of sugar, one cupful of cream, one beaten egg and one cupful of stoned cherries. Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter and sugar in a saucepan, add the cream and egg and then the cherries.

Iced Cherry Souffle.—Take the yolks of six eggs, the whites of four, one cupful of cherry juice, cook over hot water, whipping all the time until thick. Then beat until cold. Add four table spoonfuls of whipped cream and one cupful of cherries, dusted with sugar. Chill and freeze, or serve in sherbet glasses unfrozen.

With such a wealth of fresh green things from which to choose our menus we should have variety each day for our tables.

Did you ever slice ten der green onions very thin and serve them with a bit of salt, a dash of lemon juice or vinegar and plenty of good thick cream? If not, try it; it is a tasty dainty to serve with bread and butter for a Sunday night supper.

Vegetable Oil Dressing.—Put one egg, two table spoonfuls of dry mustard and two table spoonfuls of sugar well mixed into a deep bowl; with the egg add one and one-half table spoonfuls of salt, one-eighth table spoonful of paprika, one-fourth cupful of vinegar and three-fourths of a cupful of corn oil, but do not stir. Make a paste of four table spoonfuls of corn starch and one-half cupful of water, then add another half cupful of water; cook until thick and the starch thoroughly cooked. Add the hot starch mixture to the bowl and beat briskly with a Dover beater. Cool and put in a glass or jar for future use.

CANNING STRING BEANS AND TOMATOES

Canning String Beans at Home in the Steam Pressure Canner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Of all the garden vegetables, string beans and tomatoes are the favorites when it comes to canning a supply for winter use. They cannot be done in the same way. Because of their acidity, tomatoes may be canned by the water-bath method; but for string beans a steam pressure canner should be used. Like other nonacid vegetables, string beans should be processed at a temperature higher than 212 degrees Fahrenheit, and this is only possible under steam pressure. Either class or tin containers may be used.

String beans should always be packed boiling hot. That is, they are cooked for a few minutes, and then, while still boiling, packed into the jars, sealed, and processed the required length of time. This is sometimes called the "hot-pack" method. It is recommended by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture because the beans at the center of the container are quickly raised to the temperature required for processing, and the bacteria that cause spoilage are more likely to be killed. Also by the hot-pack method the step known as the "exhaust" is unnecessary.

These directions for canning string beans as well as most other common vegetables and fruits are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home."

Pick the beans over carefully, wash thoroughly, and cut into pieces of the size desired for serving. Add enough boiling water to cover and boil for five minutes in an uncovered vessel. Pack in containers boiling hot, cover with the water in which they were boiled, and add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Process immediately at ten pounds pressure, or 240 degrees Fahrenheit—quart glass jar for 40 minutes, pint glass jar for 35 minutes, and No. 2 and No. 3 tin cans for 30 minutes. Remove the jars from the canner and invert glass jars, placing them out of drafts. Plunge tin cans in cold water to cool rather quickly.

Label all jars and cans with the name of the product and the date when canned, and any other information you wish. Keep them at room temperature for at least a week. If any show signs of spoilage, discard them and watch others of the same lot to be certain they are keeping. Store in a cool, dry, dark place.

TRY VEAL BIRDS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When you want to serve a meat that is a little out of the ordinary, but not too expensive, try veal birds. They can be prepared from cutlets, bouillon chops, chops from the lower end of the shoulder, and short cutlets from the lower leg. The meat is cut in strips about two inches wide and four inches long, the size of the pieces depending, of course, on the cut. Further information about veal "birds" is given by the bureau of home economics:

6 strips veal, 2 1/2 tsp. pepper
1 onion, minced
5 strips bacon, 1/2 cup chopped
1 1/2 cups stale bread, 2 cups butter
1 tsp. salt

Pound the strips of veal until evenly flattened but do not break the meat. Reserve the bacon for wrapping the birds and make a dressing of the ingredients as follows: Brown the celery and onion slightly in the butter, then mix the ingredients lightly with a fork. Put a spoonful of the dressing on each strip of veal, roll carefully and evenly, and bind with a slice of bacon held in place with a toothpick.

Care of Heaters

There is danger of rust when a stove or furnace stands unused for some time. Pipes should be taken down in the spring, cleaned and stored in a dry place. The doors should be left open to keep the interior dry. A lump of unslaked lime on the grate will collect the moisture and thus prevent rust, home economic specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture say. Leave the boiler of a steam or hot water heater filled with water up to the safety valve during the summer.

Haydn's Nationality

Haydn has always been considered a German, but Rahran, the village in which he was born, changed rulers when Germany annexed it. Before then it was Croatia. His music has more of the Slav character about it than Teutonic, but no doubt some of it is susceptible to German influence.

WAYS OF BEARS

"The daddy bears are different in the zoo from which they're free," said one mother bear.

"Yes," said another mother bear. "The keeper knows that and so he separates the daddy bears for they, alas and alack, eat up their little ones when in the zoo."

"But a mother bear won't do such a thing even in the zoo," ended the first mother bear.

"How wonderful little bear cubs are," said the second mother bear.

"Wonderful is the only word for them," said the first mother bear.

"They're so chubby, and round, and cunning," said the second mother bear.

"They are absolutely adorable," said the first mother bear.

"And they come at just the right time of the year," said the second mother bear.

"Yes," agreed the first mother bear, "they love the winter and the cold weather."

"So do we," said the second mother bear, "and we feel just like taking care of them in the winter and doing things for them."

"We'd sleep if we were free," said the first mother bear, "but we'd only be dozing and half-sleeping when the little ones come, for it is really the latter part of the winter when they're born."

"Yes," said the second mother bear, "and all the little ones want at first to eat and sleep, which is just what we want them to do."

"We do get along so beautifully," said the first mother bear, "it's nice to be a bear and to have little cubs come to cheer up an old bear."

"It's a nice world," said the second mother bear, "for there are bears in it."

"That's the idea," said the first mother bear, "that's what makes the old world so nice."

"If there were no bears in the world

So Chubby, and Round and Cunning.

It would be dreadfully, dreadfully dull," continued the second mother bear.

"Now real mothers may feel that was about children, but it is the way I feel about bears."

"Just the way I feel, too," said the first mother bear. "The world would be a dreadful place without bears."

"They are so adorable and so sweet,"

"Oh, so adorable and so sweet," said the second mother bear.

"Of course," said the first mother bear, "we took at it from the point of view of bears."

"Not course," said the second mother bear.

"But sensible," said the first mother bear.

"Very," agreed the second mother bear.

ABOUT KITCHEN UTENSILS

Thrift in the choice, use, and care of kitchen utensils reduces this item of household expense to a considerable degree. The right utensil in good condition, when and where one wants it, saves time and trouble, enabling one to do quicker and better work. Unnecessary utensils should not be kept about.

Ease in handling cooking utensils depends on weight, balance, position of the lip, and the shape and material of the handle. Lips in both sides are convenient. If there is only one, it should be on the side that suits the user. An economical utensil is well made. Proper care and storage of utensils means longer and better service, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

LIVE STOCK

RAISING ORPHAN FOALS BY HAND

In case the mare dies or has no milk, the foal may be raised on cows' milk, if the attendant conducts the work patiently and intelligently. Choose the milk of a cow that has recently calved, preferably one which gives milk low in butterfat, for mare's milk, while rich in sugar, is poor in fat. Sweeten the milk with molasses or sugar and dilute with warm water. Give a little of this prepared milk at short intervals from a scalded nursing bottle and large rubber nipple. Be careful to keep the bottle and nipple scrupulously clean. Add an ounce of lime water to each pint of the prepared milk and allow hour at first; of the mixture once an hour at first. As the foal grows, gradually increase the amount of milk fed and lengthen the intervals between meals. In a few days food may be given six times a day and, later, four times daily. The foal will soon learn to drink from a pail, if allowed to suck the attendant's fingers at first.

Until the bowels move freely, give rectal injections night and morning. If the foal scours at any time give two to four tablespoonfuls of a mixture of sweet oil and pure castor oil shaken up in milk, and stop feeding milk for two or three meals, allowing sweetened warm water and lime water instead. Let the foal lick oatmeal as soon as it will eat, gradually increasing the amount and adding wheat bran. In five or six weeks some sweet skim milk may be given and the amount gradually increased daily until, in three months or so, it may be given freely three times a day in place of new milk. The foal at this age also will be eating freely of grass, grain and bran.

At all times supply pure cool drinking water. Let the foal run out in a lot or grass paddock for exercise. Accustom it to be handled daily. Feed small quantities of nutritious food often, keeping all food vessels clean, and the foal should thrive and develop well. Remember that a colt should at all times be adequately fed so as to develop it perfectly. Practically half of the full weight of a horse is gained during the first 12 months of its life. If stunted during this period the colt never develops properly; it therefore pays to feed generously.

Shipping Fever Is Bad for Horses in Transit

Horses in transit, during the course of which they are detained in yards and horse markets where animals originating in many places are apt to congregate, often contract a disease marked by a high fever, exhaustion and the development of pneumonia, writes Dr. L. Van Es in Capper's Weekly. When the animals reach their final destination, they may transmit the infection to other horses.

The disease may prove fatal if affected animals are worked or driven. The first symptom is a high body temperature. It is well to keep all horses at rest in comfortable quarters when the thermometer indicates fever. A skilled veterinarian may prevent many losses by injecting neosalvarsan.

Newly Purchased Hogs Should Be Segregated

All buyers of feeder hogs bringing such animals on their premises should have absolute knowledge, no matter from what source they purchase, that the hogs have been treated against cholera. In the absence of proof that they have been so treated hogs bought locally should be given the preventive serum treatment as soon as they reach destination. Under no circumstances should newly purchased hogs be placed with the original herd on the farm. They should be kept separate for at least 21 days, regardless of the origin of shipment.

Live Stock Notes

Hogs bring best returns when they are kept healthy and growing.

All the farm live stock should have access to pasture. Let the young pigs run in a clover or other legume.

When conditions are right, hogging down cornfields is a rapid and economical way of converting the crop into pork.

Proper attention to sanitation and general cleanliness about the hog barn and yards will prevent many of the losses in young pigs from narcotic enteritis, scours, sore mouth and parasites.

Brood sows should not be fed for at least 24 hours after farrowing. If fed, the sow may become restless and trample on the pigs and the little pigs may scour or acquire other digestive disorders.

Age is not a factor in the production of immunity against hog cholera. The United States Department of Agriculture finds after six years of investigation that pigs one day old were immunized as successfully as pigs of other ages ranging up to twelve weeks.

Guardians of "Free and Independent States"

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

S JULY 4 comes round again this year and most of us take a day off to celebrate that historic event 152 years ago, when a group of men met in Philadelphia to sign a document declaring that "these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states." It finds several thousand husky young Americans taking the steps which help guarantee that these commonwealths will continue to be "free and independent states." For, with the slogan of "Let's Go!" on their lips, they are entering the citizens' military training camps (or have already entered some of them) to take advantage of an opportunity for mental, moral and physical improvement which will make them guardians of these free and independent states in peace time as well as war, for a training which prepares them for the duties of a good citizen as well as the duties of a good soldier.

Here are the statistics on the 1928 citizens' military training camps, as given in a recent issue of the United States Army Recruiting News which shows the "where," "when" and "how many" of this year's program:

The history of the citizens' military training camps goes back to 1913 when the first college training camps for officers were organized by the late Gen. Leonard Wood, who will always be held in grateful remembrance by Americans as the "father" of the movement for adequate preparedness by voluntary military training. In 1915 he inaugurated the Plattsburgh training camp which prepared several hundred officers for the services which were soon to be so badly needed when the United States broke off relations with Germany and entered the World War.

But it was the lessons learned in that great conflict which brought about the citizens' military training camps as they now exist. In 1920 the National Defense act was passed by congress and in that same year the Military Training Camps Association of America, an organization made up of men who had themselves enrolled in preparatory camps in the four years from 1913 to 1916, appealed to the War department for the establishment of camps for the voluntary training of young men, authorized under the National Defense act. The secretary of war, the late John W. Weeks, approved the request and a preliminary item was included in the budget for the next fiscal year. When the proposal was presented to congress by the military affairs committee it was heartily supported by James W. Wadsworth, chairman of the senate committee, and by the late Julius Kahn, chairman of the house committee, both of whom remained ardent friends of the camps during succeeding years.

The first appropriation was sufficient for the training of 10,000 young men at ten different centers throughout the country. The minimum age of admission was fixed at sixteen years and plans were made for a series of three courses—the Red, the White and the Blue, giving one month's training in successive years. Later the minimum age was placed at seventeen and a preliminary course, the Basic, was added. Congress made the graduates of the last, the Blue course, eligible for examination leading to a commission in the organized reserves.

The citizens' military training camps have uniformly received favorable consideration by congress, which year by year has granted larger funds for their maintenance. The only difficulty has appeared in the estimate by the house and the senate of popular demand for this training. A constantly increasing appropriation for this purpose has been insufficient each year to provide room for all the young men who desired to enroll. Camp capacity has grown from 10,000 in 1921 to 39,000 in 1927, but even in this last year there were 20,000 more applications than places. In fact the total for the six years show the amazing fact that 158,000 young men have enrolled in these camps since their establishment in 1921. Ninety-six thousand more, an average of 16,000 each year, applied for admission but could not be trained for lack of room. The "call of the camps" drew a quarter of a million young Americans to seek admission!

There can be no doubt that the growth of the camps and the numbers seeking admission each year has come about through a greater appreciation by our youth and their parents of the opportunity that their government, in providing four weeks' training course with all expenses paid, is offering them. For the attractions of the camps are varied and many and the thousands who have enrolled have done so for any one or more of the following reasons: A desire for change, for physical development, for athletic training, for greater capacity, for advancement as students or employees, or because they responded to the judgment of men whom they respected and to the wishes of their own parents.

Athletics, no doubt, bring a large part of the enrollment, for one of the features of the camps is a chance to participate in a large variety of sports and games under skilled instructors. The government furnishes much necessary equipment and this is supplemented by donations from the Military Training Camps association and other patriotic societies and civic committees. Many of the training camps are located on the seashore or on inland lakes and rivers with ample opportunity for bathing and water sports. At other camps the War department has established adequate, hygienic and attractive swimming tanks. The Red Cross arranges systematic courses of instruction, leading successful candidates to final credit as life guards.

Baseball diamonds and equipment are provided for all men who seek to qualify for the company teams and to take part in intercompany and regimental games. Tennis courts are to be found everywhere; boxing is taught for men of every weight; volley ball, pushball and fencing are equally popular. Each year an increasing number of high school, normal school and college football teams, sometimes with their own coaches, find in the summer camps a fine opportunity for preliminary practice for their regular schedules.

In the daily program they find means to greater physical vigor and control. Military drill brings proper carriage, quickness of response and exact co-ordination of nerve and muscle. Mass calisthenics emphasize these qualities through rhythmic movement. Adequate, varied, nutritious and appetizing diet for thirty days contribute its share to a bodily growth, measured by inches of height and chest expansion and many pounds of weight. Regular hours establish a proper habit of life. Systematic medical inspection wards off any danger of undue exertion and it is supplemented by hospital care in case of need.

Academic credit and rewards are a definite incentive for thousands of high school and college students who always make up a large percentage of the enrollment. Boards of education in many states have authorized high school credit for camp enrollment and a considerable number of higher institutions have recognized this training toward graduation. In addition, many military schools, public secondary schools, colleges and universities offer for competition in the citizens' military training camp of the various corps these scholarships bearing free tuition. Most of these are renewable, on the basis of good scholastic record, to the successful winners throughout the course. Sixty or more institutions have united in this patriotic plan with a forecast of a total annual value of fifty thousand dollars in these scholarships within the next two or three years.

Economic considerations lead many young men to the summer training. A large and increasing percentage is made up of young men from offices, stores and factories, who go to the camps under the expressed approval of their employers and with the sound conviction that a good record in the training center will be a factor in future pay and advancement. Some companies grant an extra two weeks without wages; most give the full month with pay and a few allow attendance for four weeks with pay in addition to the usual two weeks' vacation.

Six years have demonstrated the value of the citizens' military training camps, for which there is no better proof than the increasing desire of young men to return for a second year, coupled with the unanimous approval of parents.

The government stands today firm in this definite policy of voluntary training—physical, civic and military—of young men. It offers in the citizens' military training camp no vacation in the sense of purposeless squandering of time in idle pursuits or useless diversions, such as indifferent youth may fancy. The camp schedule is not arduous, but for every hour there is a definite aim and occupation. Military drill fills the mornings with short intervals for rest and for the ever-welcome milk period, wisely ordained for those still fast-growing youths. Afternoons are devoted to a wide variety of sports and games, in one or more of which each candidate must take his part. After a long day of outdoor work and play, men welcome eagerly the recreation of the evening hours. The hostess house, under the direction of sympathetic and experienced women, affords the comforts and quiet enjoyment of a home or club—chess and checkers, billiards and card games—all many a happy hour. Dances are organized at every training center with partners furnished by committees and clubs of neighboring communities. The Liberty theater offers moving pictures, wit, professional and amateur concerts and plays. Most camps have their own citizens' military training camp band and sometimes their own orchestra and dramatic and debating clubs. From reveille to taps the program is full of earnest work and wholesome recreation, inclining each candidate to full performance of duty through the day in order better to enjoy the resulting leisure of the evening. What was a dream in the mind of Leonard Wood in the days before the great war and an experiment in the citizens' military training camp of 1921 is now a reality in the citizens' military training camps, the call of which is written large in the history of the past six years.

So-Called Trial Marriage Really Poor Imitation of the Real Thing

By DR. NATHAN KRASS, New York Rabbi.

MARRIAGE is one of the oldest of human institutions. It dates back to prehistoric times. It was not in its earliest stages, as many people erroneously believe, merely a convention, but rather rooted in universal and eternal value. Matrimony was not a mere bargain or an experiment in sociology or a frivolous, ephemeral union. It was a tie that bound not only physically but spiritually. Throughout the ages, marriage has undergone all sorts of changes. Varieties of matrimonial experiments are recorded in the pages of man's progress through the centuries.

Some of the suggested modern substitutes were tried long ago. The idea of companionate marriage, with particular stress on mutual consent to dissolve the union, was also known in ancient Roman days. Trial marriage and free love were tried in days gone by. Yet, these substitutes for traditional marriage have taken on the color of the present age and have added to the social problem features derivative of the modern environment.

The highest conception of marriage is reached in the realm of religion, which not only dignifies wedlock but invests it with divine sanction. Religion divests marriage of purely selfish considerations and lifts it to the high plane of co-operative responsibility.

While happiness is a great desideratum, it was never made the cornerstone of the matrimonial structure. To make personal pleasure the foundation of marriage, to discard the doctrine of responsibility, to evade grave duty, is not to clothe marriage with high significance.

Like all human institutions, marriage is imperfect. Its flaws and defects, its shortcomings and disillusionments, do not, by and large, outweigh its positive values for good. Marriage is the plinth of human society, and no unit has as yet been discovered that surpasses the family

Too Little Attention Given to Home Economic Courses in Public Schools

By MRS. JOSEPH C. GAWLER, Women's Clubs Official.

Ninety per cent of the girls in this country are destined to be home-makers. Yet only 16 to 50 per cent of the girls are enrolled in home economics courses in the public schools.

One of the chief reasons for this state is that the facilities are not great enough to accommodate all the girls who would enroll, and school officials frequently prefer to spend their appropriations upon what they term cultural courses rather than upon home economics.

Another unfortunate circumstance is that many mothers will not allow their daughters to put into practice in the home the principles taught them in school because of the personal inconvenience, expense or annoyance to the maid.

Another circumstance which has led to the curtailment of courses in home economics has been the high requirements for teachers of the courses, with only low salaries available to them. If any money comes to the hands of the school board for salaries, it goes to increase the general staff and not to provide highly trained experts in home economics. Most schools employ as teachers practical women in preference to trained ones, for salaries are seldom commensurate with training requisites.

Immigrants Too Prone to Follow Bad Examples Set by Some Americans

By RABBI JACOB KATZ, New York.

America cannot be blamed "in a way" for closing her doors against immigration. The foreign elements, instead of taking an example from those who are righteous leaders in the various walks of life would rather follow the path of least resistance and take as models of American life those who figure in the higher circles of the government and figure high in the estimation of the various European generations, know the connotation when the foreigner says "this is America," and by that he implies, "Get all you can as long as you can get away with it."

Sewers, oil reserves, street cleaning, census, Chicago; what a spectacle of American life! And I would say that because America felt that she herself is not healthy and clean, she could not undertake to absorb into her midst the newer elements without detriment and danger to herself. Not being stronger she could not take on to her main branch the newer saplings.

Day of Educating Children Through Instrumentality of Fear Has Passed

By HERBERT C. PARSONS, Massachusetts Penologist.

Spanking is passe. Fear will not make character in children. The child who has learned to be afraid of persons faces the world with a tragic handicap. I was never spanked in my life, nor were my children. I don't believe in it.

Parents who come into juvenile courts frequently should be punished instead of the children. They haven't been on their job as parents. For instance, parents who worry about their children lying frequently are to blame. Love of truth comes about naturally in children surrounded by adults who welcome their ideas. Talk to your child and get at his views and listen to his joys and sorrows.

Massachusetts was the first state to pass a probation law. That was in 1878. There hasn't been an additional cell built in the state for five years, thus proving, in my opinion, the value of probation.

Labor Unions Controlled by Communists Are Not to Be Tolerated

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

Communist control of any union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor will not be tolerated. When the Communists gain control of an international union, then that union will be wiped out of existence and a union formed to take its place and fight it.

The Communists believed that the emotional temperamental makeup of the members of the unions of the Needle Trades industries was such as to make them easy prey to the teachings of the philosophy of Moscow. These clans would have succeeded but for the American fighting spirit of our leaders and the backing of the American Federation of Labor. We succeeded in stopping this movement by revoking charters of the unions controlled by the Communists and expelling from membership the leaders.

"A Female Stranger"

IN THE little burial ground of St. Paul's church at Alexandria, Va., there is an inscription on a monument that never fails to attract the interest of alert passers-by. What's more, the identity of the woman whose resting place it marks has eluded all attempts to solve the mystery for more than a century of time. It reads—

"To The Memory

Of A

whose mortal sufferings terminated on the fourth day of October, 1816—aged 25 years and 8 months. This stone is erected by her disconsolate husband in whose arms she breathed out her last sigh, and who, under God, did his utmost to soothe the dull, cold ear of death."

It appears that a brig, en route from Halifax to the West Indies, put this couple ashore on July 25; that they secured hotel and physician service; that the woman's face was kept heavily veiled, despite the hot weather; that two hotel guests only were permitted by the man to help him care for her and they only after being sworn to secrecy concerning what they might learn; that he prepared her body for burial, ordered the stone marker with the above description and disappeared after the funeral; that unusually for some years he returned and inspected the grave and then his visits ended.

Many years later, as the story goes, an elderly man and woman appeared, ordered the stone replaced by a more costly monument and the following verse added:

How loved, how honored once, avails thee not—

To whom related or by whom begot;

A heap of dust alone remains of thee;

'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be.

Then, they too, disappeared, leaving the identity of "The Female Stranger" forever shrouded in mystery.

The Tournament of Roses

IN CELEBRATION of their appreciation of the climate and environment in which they live, the residents of Pasadena, Calif., some thirty-odd years ago, founded the Tournament of Roses—having conceived the idea from a floral fête in Nice, France, which since has been held annually on New Year's day.

In the beginning there was no thought of the elaborate floats of this day and age—the good folks merely trimmed their buggies and wagons with flowers and drove through the streets in parade formation. A marked success from the start, the tournament has been elaborated upon and enlarged until it has grown to unbelievable proportions and world-wide renown—the product of the combined efforts of the civic, social and other organizations in constructive co-operation.

Used to be there are a hundred or more entries. As many as 100,000 cut blossoms have been used on a single float. The labor of some 5,000 persons, working the major portion of the night before, is necessary to decorate the float as the five blossoms necessarily must be put in place within a few hours before the parade starts. The cost of constructing and decorating the floats approximates $50,000.

Many of the flower-bedecked creations, filled with beautiful girls in fancy costumes, representing southern California towns—each vying with all others in friendly but earnest competition, to present the most elaborate or outstandingly unique float.

It is estimated that some 200,000 persons, in addition to those residing in Pasadena, come to witness this gorgeous spectacle which required two hours in passing.

Larger Than Capitol

The Capitol at Washington is 746 feet long and 270 feet wide. The palace of the Dalai Lama at Lhasa is 1,000 feet long, four stories in height, surmounted by a large dome covered with gold, as are also the peristyle pillars in front. It contains 400 rooms and 1,200 windows. The building was commenced 1,200 years ago and the most recent addition is 200 years old. A lamaserie nearby shelters 7,500 lamas.

Golden Gate Amenities

To a certain San Francisco newspaper's assertion, in alleged verse, that "this paper's large and quite enough for any person's need," the Argonaut of that city retorts: "It is quite enough for wrapping an old pair of shoes, or for a few books, or even, perhaps for the laundry; but suppose it is needed for all three purposes on the same day?"

First National Stamps

The first United States adhesive stamps were issued July 1, 1847. Previous to this there were stamps used in certain cities such as New York, St. Louis, Baltimore, Providence and others, but these were not United States stamps.

Inventor's Name Lost

The name of the inventor of the game of dominoes is unknown but he was probably Italian; the game appeared in Europe in the Eighteenth century.

The Colfax Bookplate

By AGNES MILLER

to tell you, some of it as good news as you have just heard. But first I must ask you to forgive me for the suffering you have undergone since your cousin came in a few minutes ago. I had to let him talk; and you'll talk some more, Maelvor, and to better purpose, in a moment!"

"What is the good news, Mr. Almy?" interrupted Julia, feebly.

He seemed to choose his words cautiously.

"When I went to the telephone," he answered, "I learned something I had not expected to hear so soon. I will just tell you now in a word that the person suspected of attacking your grandfather has been arrested. The evidence on which he is detained clears you entirely of suspicion. Details will be available later; just remember, now, you are cleared. And now," he added abruptly, "what you want to know, and are entitled to know, is the story of that bookplate Out with it, Maelvor!"

For the first time since she had seen the certificate, Julia looked at her cousin. He was vindictive and sulky in his defeat; but Julia was such an appealing figure in her solitude and suffering that he actually spoke with a trace of shame, forced to obey his orders:

"It was your mother who drew that bookplate, Julia."

"My mother!"

"She was a gifted artist—"

"She must have been—oh, far beyond what I am! Why have I never known this? Why haven't I seen any of her other work, all my life?"

"Grandfather destroyed it."

"How did he dare?" flamed the girl.

Then she quieted down. "Well, what does it matter after all? She left this bookplate; it was by that that she saved my birth certificate for me! Why are you startled, Charles? Of course I know that! How? Simply because she was my mother, and no one else would have done it for me. You may tell me how she did it!"

Charles had indeed been startled by the unerring divination, and began nervously:

"I was here visiting grandfather a couple of months after you were born, Julia. I was nearly nine years old—old enough to notice lots of things. I sensed there was some kind of trouble about Aunt Mary, your mother. She was very sick, for one thing; she hardly ever went out. Then grandfather seldom spoke to her. Some times, when she felt well enough, she would draw a little. I liked to watch her. One of a number of sketches I saw her working on was that bookplate. Of course I didn't know then what it was."

"One day she asked me to mail a letter for her. It was addressed to a Mr. Edward Case, whom I remembered having seen at the house more than once, during a previous visit I made. I had liked him; he was friendly, and had shown me some little attentions such as a small boy enjoys. In fact, he had made some impression on me, and as you know now I recognized him last Thursday night. It certainly was a shock, especially as he seemed to have changed scarcely at all. And the most amazing thing was that, in a minute, he appeared to recognize me!"

Charles had not known then, of course, what Mr. Case had told Julia an hour or so ago—that he had seen him off and on, in the neighborhood, undoubtedly, during the course of the years which had passed since his boyhood. Nor did he realize, probably, that his boldly formed features, his dark complexion, were of the type which changes least during growth. But he did suggest the immediate cause of the recognition, as he went on:

"I suppose the presence of the book, in the desk which I was apparently engaged in searching, stimulated Mr. Case's recollections violently. Well, to continue: The night after I had mailed my aunt's letter, I woke up suddenly. I was sleeping in that little room right alongside here; that's now the reception room; the noise that woke me came from this room. I peeped in, and saw my aunt opening that French window, which had creaked. She went out on the balcony. Full of curiosity, I followed her."

"Leaning over the railing, she spoke to some one down in the street: 'You'll give it to Rosali?' I recognized Mr. Case's voice in answer: 'I promise!' I saw her drop a small book over the rail. Then I had just time to get back into my room and shut the door before she came back into the house."

"Six weeks later, she died. After a few days, of course, I got used to her absence, and took interest mainly in what happened around me from day to day. I noticed, especially that grandfather kept searching, apparently in vain, through her papers for something he wanted very much. Then one day he missed something of his own, an old medical book that had belonged to his father the doctor. He accused me of having taken or mislaid it.

"I knew absolutely nothing about it and disclaimed all knowledge of it, but he wouldn't believe me. He was very stern, and frightened me. Finally it came back to me that I had seen my aunt drop a book over the balcony that night. I had never told anyone of that experience; I liked knowing a secret that was none of my business, and, though I can't claim much credit, I was fond of Aunt Mary, and would never have done anything to hurt her. Still, now she was gone; and grandfather persistently accused me of having taken that book, so finally, in the hope of placating him, or at least distracting his attention from me, I told him what I had seen that night. Not one word did he say as I told my tale; but at least he never asked me for the book again."

"Well, years afterward grandfather told me what the story revealed to him. The paper he had been searching for was your birth certificate, and when he couldn't find it, he knew your mother had hidden it somewhere, for she would not have destroyed it. He realized, therefore, that she had hidden it most cunningly. She had chosen one of his most valued books for its hiding place. The bookplate would easily conceal the certificate, the book gave a convenient means for finding it, and if she had died before she could dispose of the book, the certificate would probably never have been disturbed."

"But in removing the original bookplate in order to conceal the certificate, he thought she must have torn the former. Hence the need to make a copy, as I had seen her do. Incidentally, grandfather was much vexed that that original should have disappeared. For it was a real Colfax engraving, the only copy he had of his father the doctor's bookplate."

If Mr. Almy hadn't interrupted, I should have had to, I was so bursting with curiosity, and I should have not been able to compel the answer he received.

"One minute, Maelvor. How did your grandfather happen to own a Colfax bookplate?"

"Hugh Colfax made it just before his death—it was, in fact, his last work—in gratitude for the doctor's having saved the life of Colfax's son, who was a British naval officer, when he was stricken with yellow fever in South America," answered Maelvor, briefly, merely whetting my curiosity; but he had to go on with his story. "But the main thing was that the birth certificate was missing. Grandfather knew Case had it, and Case had gone abroad directly after your mother's death. Julia, and Prof. Royall Harrington, to whom your mother had referred by name—Have you ever heard of him?"

"I think I've seen his name in the paper," said Julia, reflecting.

"Well, he is your father's elder brother."

"What?"

"Yes, your uncle. He had gone to Oxford the previous summer, on a year's leave from the university. Grandfather knew Case must have taken him the book, that your mother must have told Case the secret. In it, he knew Harrington would try to trace you, so he sent you away and kept you away all those years."

"And took my name from me, so you might claim all the property?"

"Well, partly, not altogether."

"What other reason could there have been?"

"Your name was Harrington."

"I don't understand!"

"Maelvor pointed to the certificate. 'Your father came from Elliot's Crossing, Virginia. So did the Grosvenor family. There was a feud between those families for decades—'

"No!"

"Yes; and it started so long ago that even grandfather had only a vague idea of what began it. He thought it was a political duel, around the year eighteen hundred, in which a Grosvenor was killed. Of course his father, a boy at that time, hated the very mention of the name Harrington. Grandfather was a hidebound conservative, you know, knew the family traditions and held to them fast. So when he learned that his daughter had
