WILLIAM C. NICHOLS.

William C. Nichols was born he was a ruling elder in the at Ann Arbor, Michigan, Janu- Presbyterian church of Stockary 25, 1834, and was the eldest bridge.

In 1863 he joined the Masonic order, of which he has been a faithful and energetic member. He was also an Odd Fellow. His fitness for public service and integrity of character have been recognized by his townsmen, and he has been frequently honored by a place on the ticket. He has held nearly every office in the township. He was elected county treasurer in 1902, which office he held four years. He was a man of great executive power in business. No stain of dishonor ever sullied his name. He died loved by his children and honored by the community in which he has long lived. He was a christian whose religion was manifest in his deeds. With him at the eventide it was light. His end was peace—He died Sunday, May 1, 1910. His funeral was conducted at his home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. J. A. Adair officiating assisted by Rev. H. J. Johnson.

January 12, 1858, he was married to Mary Elizabeth Westfall, and for more than forty years they shared in common their joys and sorrows.

He is survived by six children, George Walter, William J., Irene Elizabeth of Stockbridge, Emory J. of Highland, Mrs. Alida Sperry and Mrs. Emma Kinnie of Ludington.

He has been for many years a faithful member of the Presbyterian church, and active in the advancement of its influence and good. At the time of his death

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Cornelius Church, April 27, 1910, when Miss Jane Heeney was united in marriage to John D. Humphrey of Jackson.

The bride was tastefully arrayed in pearl moosehead silk with hat and gloves to match. She was accompanied by her cousin, Miss Emma Wood of Jackson, who wore cream silk.

The groom and best man, Peter V. Olk of Muith, wore the conventional black.

After the impressive Catholic service, which was performed by Rev. James E. O'Brien, the bridal couple, followed by about 75 invited guests, repaired to the home of the bride's brother, Patrick Heeney, where a delicious four course lunch was served by the Misses Marion Burns, Mae O'Brien and Ethel Suylandt.

After doing full justice to the viands, the guests repaired to the parlor, where the remainder of the afternoon was spent in listening to vocal solos by the Misses Marion Burns, Anna Brannick, Elizabeth Stowell and Emma Wood and Messrs P. V. Olk, Lewis Olk and Patrick Heeney and also showering the bridal couple with rice.

The presents were many and beautiful including a dining table and chairs, 108 piece china dinner set, a Persian rug, $65 in money, silverware, linen cut-glass and crockery.

After viewing the presents the guests departed wishing, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey a long and happy life.

The bride has many warm friends in Stockbridge and Bunkerhill having spent her entire life in this township. The groom is our estimable young man, whose former home was in Leslie, tho' he is now employed in Jackson.

Guests were present from Lansing, Detroit, Jackson, Leslie, Muith, Stockbridge and Grass Lake. Regrets were received from New Mexico, South Lyon, Whitmore Lake and Pontiac.

Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey will make their future home in Jackson where they will gladly welcome their many friends after May 1.

BALL GAME.

One of the fastest games ever put up by High School teams was pulled off at Williamston on Saturday, when the local High School team took that team into camp to the tune of 1-0. The story of the game follows, by innings.

1—McArthur was out, Sweet to Rice. Garris singled to center but was forced by Moffat. Standish was out, Barton to Rice. Gorsline singled, Rice sacrificed, Barton struck out, Gorsline stole third. Randall fanned.

2—Kennedy was out, Randall to Rice, Dancer singled, being helped by poor throw from third. Kutt flied to center and Poxson to the pitchers box. Barrett fouled to Berry, Sweet singled to right but was forced by Cobb who was caught trying to steal second.

3—Berry and McArthur both grounded to third and Garris to Randall. Biers and Lockwood fanned, Gorsline singled to center, Rice fanned.

4—Moffat singled to center but was forced by Standish who stole second and went to third on Kennedy's out to right. Dancer fouled to third. Barton singled but was caught trying to steal second. Randall flied to McArthur, Barrett walked and stole second and third. Sweet grounded to Standish.

5—Kutt singled, Poxson followed suit, Berry flied to right. McArthur forced Kutt, Poxson going to second. Poxson and McArthur executed a double steal, Garris flied to center, Cobb popped to short, Biers fanned, Lockwood walked and stole second, Gorsline flied to McArthur.

6—Moffat was out Barton to Rice, Standish singled to left, going to third on Kennedy's single to right. On a fake attempt to steal Kennedy drew the throw from Barton which was wild, Standish scored, Kennedy going to third. Dancer fanned, Kutt popped to third. Rice was out, Standish to Kutt, Barton fanned, Randall raised an infield fly to Standish.

7—Poxson singled to center, Berry to left, McArthur flied to third, Poxson was caught off second, Garris fouled to Gorsline, Barrett fanned, Sweet was out to Berry, Cobb walked and stole, Biers fanned.

8—Moffat and Standish fanned, Kennedy walked but was caught off first. Lockwood was out, Dancer to Kutt, Gorsline and Rice each singled to left and executed a double steal. Barton flied to Moffat and Randall to Poxson.

9—Dancer and Kutt fanned, Poxson sent a long fly to Lockwood. Barrett popped to Garris, Sweet grounded to Kutt and Cobb to Standish. Time of game 1 hour and 15 minutes.

Next Saturday the boys play at home against Jackson High. Be sure to be on hand. Lansing beat Jackson 3-to 1. Williamston beat Lansing 6 to 2. Stockbridge beat Williamston 1 to 0. According to dope we should win Saturday. Come and show the boys you appreciate the quality of ball they are putting up.

HOME OF VENOMOUS SNAKES

Deadly Reptiles Have Pre-empted Island in the Center of New England Lake.

One of those strange freaks of animal and reptile distribution that puzzle the naturalist is found on Rattlesnake Island, in Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H. The lake contains 57 islands of all sizes, from a few square feet to hundreds of acres, but only on Rattlesnake is there to be found anything more alarming than the harmless and pretty garter snake. The country surrounding the lake is mountainous and well wooded, but it is free from snakes. Rattlesnake island has a monopoly of rattlers.

The island is one of the largest in the lake as well as the most picturesque. Its name forbids trespass and it remains today as virgin as when the Indians gave the lake its musical name.

Just why the snakes should have chosen this particular island for their abode is a mystery, although an event of a few years ago made it clear how they might have reached it. Rattlesnake island is several miles out from the mainland and several hundred yards from any other island. Some years ago a fisherman, bolder than his fellows, landed on the island and there cooked his lunch.

Perhaps he was a bit nervous, for he forgot to put out his fire and the wind fanned it into a blaze. A large part of the island was burned over and during the next few days many rattlesnakes were found on the mainland and the neighboring islands. Within a week, however, the snakes were gone from the mainland and not one snake of a venomous kind has been found outside of Rattlesnake Island since then.

Dragged to Death by Kite.
A boy named William Fletcher met a fearful death in a most singular fashion at San Francisco the other day, being dragged off his feet by a kite he was flying and pulled over the precipitous heights above a quarry, dropping a distance of 250 feet and meeting instant death.

The kite was a monster affair and soon threatened to break away. The youngster, loath to lose his plaything, held on firmly, using all his strength to haul it down. In his efforts to do so he became entangled in the string. The huge kite, helped by a strong wind, began to drag him over the ground. The boy dug his heels into the earth in a desperate endeavor to save himself from the impending death, but the toy was too strong for him. He was dragged inch by inch over the ground to the edge of the precipice. There he hung for a brief moment, and an instant later was dragged into space. Then the twine snapped and the boy went crashing down the side of the cliff to an awful death below.

Gardening Under Difficulties.
Mrs. Lenora A. Hamlin in 'The Survey for April' tells about a small boy in South Chicago who became interested in a little garden planted near his tenement house. In the same way that the neighbor's chickens often bother the town gardener, so the neighbor's cat held back the aspirations of this young Chicago agriculturist. Here is the way he got around the difficulty:

"I had my garden in a box and I have planted four kinds of seeds; they are China pinks, sweet pea, parsley, wild cucumber. The parsley was fairly well, China pinks and the sweet peas did not blossom. Wild cucumbers I planted in our yard and began to come up on the string and a cat that always comes in our yard pulled it out of the ground for me. Then I planted it over and it did not grow any more."

Rest in Pneumonia.
No greater mistake is made than constantly to disturb a child suffering with pneumonia. To give medicine every hour night and day, and keep the child awake, is to retard convalescence. While food may be necessary to stimulate subnormal vitality it should be given with due regard to an infant's requirements, and if the heart's action is good it is poor judgment to awaken a sick child to give food or medicine.—Dr. Louis Fischer, Medical Record

Extraordinary Surgical Feat.
A wonderful surgical operation was performed recently at one of the principal hospitals of Berlin. A patient was suffering from an attack of paralysis following an accident, the muscles refusing to perform their functions. Dr. Katzenstein removed corresponding muscles from the lower part of the patient's back and transferred them to the shoulder. The experiment completely succeeded, and the patient is now able to use his arms with the same ease as formerly.

Change of Fashion.
Was that a complimentary banquet you attended?
"No," replied the statesman. "Complimentary banquets have gone out of style. Banquets are now given for the purpose of roasting things or people of whom you disapprove."

Of Course.
"There is one man who no matter how enterprising he is, wishes to keep his business on a dead level."
"Who is that?"
"The undertaker."

FREEZE WILL DO FRUIT CROP GOOD

KILLS PESTS, STRENGTHENING BUDS IN EARLY PLOWED ORCHARDS, SAYS GEO. E. ROWE.

LARGE FRUIT UNHURT BY LATE FROSTS IN GRAND TRAVERSE AND WASHTENAW COUNTIES.

Big Meeting of Northern Michigan "Boosters," Representing Twenty Counties, Held at Petoskey.

Discounting the reports that the recent frost has greatly damaged the fruit crop in Michigan, George E. Rowe, reported to be the best posted man on the subject in the state, has entered a vigorous protest to the statements that 75 per cent of the fruit crop has been ruined. He said: "Michigan will have more than $6,000,000 worth of fruit to sell in spite of reported damages by cold winds and frosts.

"Orchards that were plowed early so as to give time for the small rootlets to heal before the buds opened will have the advantage over neglected orchards and those plowed later in the season. The new feeders starting out before the buds opened in early tilled orchards will help greatly to give food and vigor to the young fruit buds and help to carry them through the cold shock.

"The early warm weather started the propagation of scale and scab, as well as other orchard pests, and the recent cold winds and frost came in time to destroy them while they were yet very young.

"Michigan fruit will be better and cleaner this year than ever before, and it is quite likely that the frost and cold that have frightened so many will do more good than harm."

If the Grand Traverse fruit buds do not freeze later they will have withstood this storm successfully. A canvass of the growers this week showed that there has been practically no damage since that of a week ago, when one-third of the crop of sweet cherries and two-thirds of the sour cherries crop were reported ruined. The weather continued cold, but heavy clouds precluded the possibility of a killing frost.

The long spell of cold, wet weather that is reported to have worked millions of dollars of loss to the fruit growers in other localities, seems to have done no harm to the fruit growers of Washtenaw county to speak of and the little harm that has been done has been to the strawberry crop.

Meeting of Northern Michigan "Boosters."
Over 200 business men, representing 20 counties, attended a banquet given at Petoskey by the Western Michigan Improvement Bureau. E. E. Gilbert, of Petoskey, was toastmaster. The speakers included Mayor Reynolds, of Petoskey; Mayor Gaffney, Cadillac; John Hilder, of Grand Rapids; board of trade; Judge Duell, Harbor Springs; Judge Shepherd, Cheboygan.

Talk of Warrant Causes Her Death.
Deserted by the man she trusted and threatened with arrest because she was not married to this man, Bertha Sears, 25, from the country near Charlotte, drank carbolic acid and died four hours later in a hospital.

The young woman and the man lived in a local boarding house, and she did housework for week's wages. After the man left, she tried to collect her wages, but the landlady told her, the police say, that a warrant would be asked for, alleging illicit cohabitation.

"They'll never find me," she said, and left, ostensibly to take a train. In the Grand Trunk depot she drank the poison.

6,000 March in Big Candle Parade.
One hundred cripples and invalids, accompanied by over 6,000 other pilgrims, formed a great candle procession to the shrine at Carey, 12 miles from Findlay, O., to pray for the cure of their ailments before the famous statue of the Virgin at the Church of Our Lady of Consolation.

The statue, which is known throughout the country for the miracles which are said to have been performed through its agency, is a fac-simile of the celebrated statue of the Virgin and Child at Luxembourg.

Defy State of Collect.
Two big corporations taxed under the Michigan ad valorem system threw down the gauntlet to the state to attempt to collect the taxes assessed against their property under this law. They charge that the tax law is unjust and inviolation of the state and federal constitutions. On the result will depend the destruction or upholding of the ad valorem system which the state has built up at big cost and much effort.

Auditor General Fuller received from the Western Union Telegraph Co. $20,673.31 in payment of taxes assessed at $31,009.97 and from the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. $7,762.49 in payment of taxes assessed at $9,302.99. With these checks the companies sent a statement that they had forwarded their just amount of taxes, but that the law was in violation of both state and national constitution. The basis for their figures is not known.

The matter has been referred to the state's legal department, and some supreme court litigation is in sight.

Saginaw Elks 500 Strong.
At the meeting of Saginaw Elks in the committee having in charge the grand lodge parade reported that present indications were for a delegation of 500 uniformed men in the line of march. The lodge is trying to secure even more than that number.

The official lodge of the Saginaw delegates will be a big gold medalion with a class showing an Elk's clock with hands turned to the hour of 11 and sketches of the varied industries of the city. The badge proper will give the number and the picture of the magnificent Elks' temple that Saginaw boasts.

Food Plant Burns at Oxford.
Fire early destroyed the Standard Pure Food Co.'s plant at Oxford, entailing a loss of $125,000, wiped out the crop used jointly by the Grand Trunk and the Michigan Central roads, ate up two carloads of food product ready on the factory siding for shipment, and did other damage. The Union hotel was seriously threatened, but was saved.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.
Three Rivers is to have a new post-office. Senator Burrows having recently introduced a bill in the senate to that effect.

John Guette, 84, applied at the office of the county clerk, Saginaw, for naturalization papers. He will be 86 before he can cast his first vote.

Representatives of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. have announced that in the near future the concern will erect a $25,000 hotel in Cadillac.

In saving the life of her little sister who was about to pour kerosene into an open fire, Anne M. Rose, a 10-year-old girl of Flint, sustained burns which resulted in her death.

Caught between two cars when he attempted to make a coupling in the Williamston yards, Nelson Yeake, 35, of Grand Rapids, a Pere Marquette conductor, was crushed to death.

Twenty-five senior engineers, Dean Bissell, and Prof. Vedder and Sawyer of the M. A. C., have started on their trip of inspection of big steel plants at Gary, Ind., Milwaukee and Chicago. This is the longest trip ever undertaken by engineering students of the college.

By appearing in the ranks of the cadets with the bright red fez which he is said to wear at all times except when asleep, Abdul Rasik, the Egyptian nobleman who is learning scientific farming at the M. A. C., created somewhat of a sensation at East Lansing.

Two women students at the university summer school, Ann Arbor, will be given a chance to learn the art of swimming if the present plans of the regents are carried out. It is proposed to make the exercise one of the requirements of the curriculum at the coming session.

According to Anton G. Hadeny, of New York, one of the syndicate managers of the big water power merger, a concern will not ask the state railway commission for the right to issue bonds for each individual company in the merger, but for each separate division of the industry, such as power plants, electric lines, etc. It will be a great many years, he declared, before the Au Sable and other streams will be placed on a paying basis.

Though the city council has made several efforts in the past few weeks to decide whether Big Rapids will have eight or nine saloons on May 1, the exact number will be five, four less than last year. This will probably be the number for several weeks, as two bonds were delayed and the bond of J. C. Hangstafer was turned down by the bonding surety company, and it will be necessary for these men to file new applications with the council for licenses.

LORIMER BRIBE PROBE STARTS

SEAT IN THE U. S. SENATE COST LORIMER $200,000—NEWSPAPER PLOT, SAYS LORIMER.

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES A. WHITE SAYS HE WAS PAID $1,000 FOR VOTE—CASH OFFERED OTHERS.

Lorimer Says Chicago Tribune Aims to Wreck Financial Institutions He Is Starting.

Investigation of the biggest legislative bribery scandal in the history of Illinois, which threatens far-reaching political complications whether it brings indictments or not, was begun in Chicago by States Attorney Wayman.

Representative Charles A. White, Dem., charges in the Chicago Tribune that he was paid $1,000 by Lee O'Neill Brown, Democratic leader in the house, to vote for William Lorimer for United States senator. He was summoned before the state's attorney.

Representative Jacob Groves, of Adams county, adds weight to the White charges. In an interview in Quincy, Ill., he was quoted as saying that he was offered money to vote for Lorimer, and that he had heard of members getting $5,000 for their votes.

It is said that additional evidence is in Mr. Wayman's hands, including an allegation that it cost $200,000 to elect Lorimer to the senate, of which ring leaders got $50,000 and individual members of the legislature the remainder.

Belgians Greet Col. Roosevelt.
Mr. Roosevelt, with Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel Roosevelt and Kermit, arrived at Brussels from Paris at noon. Their welcome officially and from a popular standpoint was most cordial.

There was a great throng at the station when the train drew in and while the crowd cheered and a brass band played Mr. Roosevelt was greeted by American Minister Charles Page Bryan and others of the legation, and officially welcomed to Brussels by Burgomaster Max and Baron de Moor, aide de camp to King Albert.

An automobile was waiting and escorted by a platoon of mounted police the Roosevelts were driven to the hotel Flandres in the place Royal. Soon afterward they were taken to the American legation, where a sister of Mr. Bryan gave a luncheon in their honor.

Explosion Damages 15,000 Buildings.
Shaking Kobe with the force of an earthquake and leaving damage suggestive of a typhoon, a terrific explosion took place on a dynamite lighter in Kobe harbor, British Columbia.

Not only was immense damage sustained ashore, including more than 15,000 buildings damaged, two persons killed and 83 injured, but the liner Myrmidon and some other vessels narrowly escaped.

Several steamers were quickly moved when the dynamite-laden lighter was seen to be on fire. The Myrmidon was stopped just as the lighter blew up with a terrific detonation. The steamer veered heavily and the hatches were forced off.

The explosion ignited 130 tons of dynamite and three other lighters, holding 50 tons more, were sunk by the upheaval without exploding.

New President for Venezuela.
Juan Vicente Gomez was elected constitutional president of Venezuela for a term of four years by congress. The election was unanimous. He will not, however, assume the presidency until next month. On April 19, in accordance with the new constitution, he surrendered the provisional presidency, relinquishing the office to Dr. Constantine Guerrero.

In honor of the election of President Gomez, all political prisoners have been released. Senator Veloz-Gottico, former charge d'affaires at Washington, has been appointed director of the census.

Hughes to Supreme Court.
Charles Evans Hughes, governor of New York, has accepted President Taft's offer of an appointment to the supreme court bench, and his nomination is now before the senate.

This means that Mr. Hughes will resign from the governorship and that Horace White, of Syracuse, will succeed him in the executive chair at Albany.

This change, however, will not take place until the opening of the fall term of the supreme court, early in October, when Gov. Hughes will qualify as a member of the bench. There will consequently be only a little more than two months of White as governor of the Empire State.

BILLION DOLLAR LOSS.

Fruit Crop of Middle West and Southern Cotton Badly Devastated.

From 12 western, middle west and southwest states comes the news of well nigh a billion dollar loss, from the freak storms that have swept fields, valleys, orchards and pastures. The fruit crop in the middle west is completely ruined. Half the south's great cotton crop is devastated, according to the latest reports.

In all the local parks, every effort is being made by horticulturists to save the vegetation, plants, trees, flowers and bushes. Coverings have been constructed and placed above the shrubbery.

Transportation, surface and elevated, was retarded as a result of the snow and sleet during the early rush. Life was endangered by the blinding snow that obscured the busy thoroughfares.

Union to Close Every Tin Mill.
Plans for carrying on war against the United States Steel corporation by the Amalgamated association have been completed in Pittsburgh, and will be put into effect the night of June 30, when the strike of tin plate workers is exactly one year old. The strike against the American Sheet & Tin Plate company has not been a success from the standpoint of union labor, but it is arranged to adopt drastic measures. It is the purpose of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers to close down every independent tin mill in the country when the present scale expires, and keep them closed until there shall be created a great famine in tin plate.

Boat Sinks; 187 Drown.
The sealing steamer Boothick, which reached St. Johns, N. F., has brought from the fishing grounds a report that the steamer Aurora has been sunk.

It is feared, according to the report current at the fishing banks, that her entire crew of 187 men lost their lives.

No definite confirmation of the report was obtained by the crew of the Boothick before they left the fishing grounds, and apparently no more definite news of the disaster is to be expected until the next arrival from the fishing grounds.

40,000 Miners Resume Work.
The controversy between the 40,000 union miners and operators of the Pittsburgh soft coal district, which has resulted in a month's suspension of mining, was settled Saturday night.

The miners are to receive an advance of 5.55 per cent, but the wage matter had not lately been as much of a controversy as the permissible "powder issue." As to this it has been arranged that in the twelve mines now using explosives, which the state law demands, tests are to be made and if it is shown that permissible powder produces more slack in coal than the black powder, the miners are to be paid the difference, based on an average test in each of these mines. If the run of coal is the same, no change is to be made.

WIRE BULLETINS.

A job paying 15 cents a day is offered by the United States government to anyone who wishes to become postmaster at Wheatfield, near Saltsburg, Pa. To permit the applicants to prove their competency the civil service commission will hold an examination on May 7. Last year the post paid $64.

A bill authorizing the government in time of war to commandeer all vessels flying the Russian flag for transport purposes has been introduced in parliament, the duma itself taking the initiative. The measure, which is modeled on German, Austrian and French laws, contemplates the compulsory service of all men employed in the merchant marine, excepting only foreign subjects and hands below 18 or over 50 years old.

Constipation

"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take an injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you, I am free from all that this morning. THE LITTLE BROWN JUG AT KILDARE

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, and Henry Maine Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, take trains out of Atlanta. Griswold to his college, Ardmore in pursuit of a girl who had winked at him. Mistaken for Gov. Osborne of South Carolina, Griswold's life is threatened. He goes to Columbia to warn the governor and meets Barbara Osborne. Ardmore learns that his winking lady is the daughter of Gov. Dangerfield of North Carolina. He follows her to Raleigh, and on the way is given a brown jug at Kildare. In Raleigh he discovers that the jug bears a message threatening Dangerfield unless Applegate, a criminal, is allowed to go free. Ardmore becomes allied with Jerry Dangerfield in running the affairs of the state in the absence of the governor. A scathing telegram is sent to Gov. Osborne. Griswold becomes adviser to Barbara Osborne, who is attending to her father's duties in South Carolina. Orders are sent to the sheriff to capture Applegate.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

As Barbara and Griswold turned to leave, a young man who had been writing a message at the standing desk in the lobby lifted his hat and addressed Barbara. He was a reporter for the Columbia Intelligencer, and his manner was eager.

"Oh, Miss Osborne, pardon me, but I've been trying to get you on the telephone. Can you tell me where your father is to-night?"

"Father was in town only a few hours, and then left on state business."

"May I ask if it's the Applegate case? The Raleigh papers have wired for information and we'd like to know here."

"I cannot answer that question. It's enough that the governor is absent on state business and that the business is important. You may print that in the Intelligencer and repeat it to Raleigh. There is no harm in that, Miss Osborne?"

"No; certainly not," Barbara replied.

"But the papers all over the state are talking about the Applegate gang. They intimate that those people enjoy immunity from prosecution and that the governor—you will pardon me, Miss Osborne—will take no steps to arrest them for personal reasons."

"Your question is quite proper," replied Griswold. "The governor's acts are subject to scrutiny at all times and it is just as well to have this matter understood now. I am employed by the governor as special counsel in some state matters. My name is Griswold. Take out your book and come to the desk here and I will give you a statement which you may publish as by the authority of the governor."

The three found seats at a table and Griswold dictated while the reporter wrote, Barbara meanwhile sitting with her cheek resting against her raised hand. She was experiencing the relief we all know, of finding a strong arm to lean upon in an emergency, and she realized that Griswold was not only wise, but shrewd and resourceful.

"Please print this exactly as I give it: It having been intimated in certain quarters that the Applegate gang of outlaws, which has been terrorizing the North Carolina frontier for several years, enjoys immunity from prosecution in South Carolina owing to the fact that Gov. Osborne was at some time attorney for Applegate, Gov. Osborne begs to say that steps have already been taken for the arrest of this man and his followers, dead or alive. The governor presents his compliments to those amiable critics who have so eagerly seized upon this pretext for slurring his private character and aspersing his official acts. The governor has no apologies to proffer the people of South Carolina, who have so generously reposed in him their trust and confidence. He is intent upon safe-guarding the peace, dignity and honor of the state through an honest enforcement of law and he has no other aim or ambition."

Griswold took the reporter's notebook and read over this pronouncement; then he handed it to Barbara, who studied it carefully.

"I think it sounds just right, only, why not substitute for 'honest' the word 'vigorous'?"

"Excellent," assented Griswold, and thus amended the statement was returned to the reporter.

"Now," said Griswold to the young man, "you are getting a pretty good item that no other paper will have. Please wire your story to Raleigh; Gov. Osborne is very anxious that the people up there shall understand fully his attitude in the Applegate matter."

"I reckon this will wake up old Dangerfield all right," said the reporter, grinning. "He'll be paralyzed. May

I use your name in this connection, sir?"

"Not at all. My engagement with Gov. Osborne is of the most confidential character and our purposes would be defeated by publicity. Remember, you get the exclusive use of this story—the return and immediate departure of the governor, his statement to the people in the Applegate case—all with the understanding that you use what you have to the best advantage."

"This is all right, is it, Miss Osborne?" asked the reporter.

"Maj. Griswold has full authority to act, and you need question nothing he tells you," Barbara replied.

"I suppose the governor didn't see the attorney general to-day?" asked the reporter detainingly, as Barbara rose. She exchanged a glance with Griswold.

"Father didn't see Mr. Bosworth at all, if that's what you mean?"

"Didn't see him? Well, Bosworth didn't exactly tell me he had seen him to-day, but I asked him about the Applegate case an hour ago at his house and he said the governor wasn't going to do anything and that was the end of it so far as the administration is concerned."

"Print his story and see what happens! We have no comment to make on that, have we, Miss Osborne?"

"Nothing at all," replied Barbara scornfully.

"I'm at the Saluda house at present. See me to-morrow and I may have another story for you!" and Griswold shook the reporter warmly by the hand as they parted at the carriage door.

"Home," said Barbara for the reporter's benefit, and then, to Griswold: "I must speak of another matter. Drive with me a little way until we can throw the reporter off."

She spoke quietly, but he saw that she was preoccupied with some new phase of the situation, and as the carriage gained headway she said earnestly:

"That young man told the truth—I am sure of it—about Mr. Bosworth. I knew he would do something to injure father if he could, but I did not know he had the courage to go so far."

They were now at the edge of the town and she bade him stop the carriage.

"We must go to the statehouse," said Griswold. "We must get that requisition, to guard against treason in the citadel. Assuming that Gov. Osborne really doesn't want to see Applegate punished we'd better hold the requisition anyhow. It's possible that your father had it ready—do pardon me!—for a grandstand play, or he may have wanted to bring Applegate into the friendlier state;—but that's all conjectural. We'd better keep out of the principal streets. That reporter has a sharp eye."

She gave the necessary directions and the driver turned back into Columbia. It was pleasant to find his accomplice in this conspiracy a girl of keen wit who did not debate matters or ask tiresome questions. The business ahead was serious enough, though he tried by manner, tone and words to minimize its gravity.

"Have you the office keys?" he asked.

"Yes; I have been afraid to let go of them. There's a watchman in the building, but he knows me very well. There will not be the slightest trouble about getting in."

"The watchman—an old confederate veteran—sat smoking in the entrance and courteously bade them good evening."

"I want to get some papers from father's office, captain."

"Certainly, Miss Barbara." He preceded them, throwing on the lights, to the governor's door, which he opened with his own pass key. "It's pretty lonesome here at night, Miss Barbara."

"I suppose nobody comes at night," remarked Griswold.

"Not usually, sir. But one or two students are at work in the library, and Mr. Bosworth is in his office."

The veteran walked away jingling his keys. Barbara was already in the private office bending over the governor's desk. She found the right key, drew out a drawer, then cried out softly. She knelt beside the desk, throwing the papers about in her eagerness, then turned to Griswold with a white face.

"The drawer has been opened since I was here this morning. The requisition and all the other papers in the case are gone."

Griswold examined the lock carefully and pointed to the roughened edges of the wood.

"A blade of the shears there, or perhaps the paper cutter—who knows? The matter is simple enough, so please do not trouble about it. Wait here a moment. I want to make some inquiries of the watchman."

He found the old fellow pacing the portico like a sentry. He pointed out the attorney general's office, threw on a few additional lights for Griswold's guidance, and resumed his patrol duty outside.

The attorney general's door was locked, but in response to Griswold's knock it was opened guardedly.

"I am very sorry to trouble you, Mr. Bosworth," began Griswold, quietly edging his way into the room, "but one never gets wholly away from business these days."

He closed the door himself, and peered into the inner rooms to be sure the attorney general was alone. Bosworth's face flushed angrily when he found that a stranger had thus entered his office with a cool air of proprietorship.

"Who the devil are you?" he demanded, glaring.

"I'm special counsel for Gov. Osborne in the Applegate case. There's no use in wasting time in further identification, but if you take down that volume on Admiralty Practice just behind you, you will find my name on the title page. Or, to save you the trouble, as you seem to be interested in my appearance, I will tell you that my name is Griswold and that my address is Charlottesville, Va."

"You are undoubtedly lying. If you are smart enough to write a book you ought to know enough about legal procedure to understand that the attorney general represents the state and special counsel would not be chosen without his knowledge."

"Allow me to correct you, my learned brother. You should never misquote the opposing counsel—it's one of the rules of the game. What I said a moment ago was that I represented the governor—Gov. Osborne. I didn't say I represented the state, which is a different matter, and beset with ultra vires pitfalls. There is no earthly reason why a governor should not detach himself, so to speak, from his office and act in propria persona, as a mere citizen."

Bosworth grinned, but not at the legal status of monarchs and states. He had thought of a clever stroke and he dealt the blow with confidence.

"Let us assume," he said, "that you represent Mr. Osborne. May I ask the whereabouts of your client?"

"Certainly. You may ask anything you please, but it will do you no good. It's an old rule of the game never to divulge a client's secret. Gov. Osborne has his own reasons for absenting himself from his office. However, he was at home to-night."

"I rather guess not, as I had all the trains watched. You'll have to do a lot better than that, Mr. Griswold."

"He has issued a statement to the public since you led to the Intelligencer reporter about him today. I suppose it's part of your office duty to misrepresent the head of the state administration in the press, but the governor is in the saddle and I advise you to be good."

The attorney general felt that he was not making headway. His disadvantage in dealing with a stranger whose identity he still questioned angered him. He did not know why Griswold had sought him out, and he was chagrined at having allowed himself to be so easily cornered.

"You seem to know a good deal," he sneered. "How did you get into this thing anyhow?"

"My dear sir, I was chosen by the governor because of my superior attainments, don't you see? But I'm in a hurry now. I came here on a particular errand. I want that requisition in the Applegate case—quick!—if you please, Mr. Bosworth."

"Mr. Griswold, or whoever you are, you are either a fool or a blackguard. There isn't any requisition for Applegate. The governor never had the sand to issue any, if you must know the truth! If you know anything about the governor you would know that that's why Osborne is hiding himself. He can't afford to offend the Applegates, if you must know the disagreeable truth."

"Mr. Bosworth," began Griswold deliberately, "that requisition, duly signed and bearing the seal of the secretary of state as by the statutes sary but not strictly military in character, Maj. Gen. Bell said:

"Lieutenant Miller while a volunteer officer commanded some troops in the island of Palawan, which is very isolated in the Philippine Islands, far away from the balance and backward in civilization. While in command of troops there as a volunteer officer he acquired such an influence with the people and gained their confidence to such an extent that they simply left him there as governor. He is practically alone and he controls the people simply through the force of his personality and through their personal regard for him."

"He was subsequently appointed an officer in the regular army. He has never joined his regiment; he has never seen it."

"I have heard it insisted that he could not be replaced, certainly not by a company, probably not by a battalion and possibly not by a regiment of troops."

Maj. Gen. Bell is wrong in one respect—that is when he says that Lieutenant Miller is alone in the island. He has a very efficient co-worker and helper in the person of his wife, a little Illinois girl. He married her before he undertook his present work, which has extended over ten years, and much of his success he owes to her. She has entered into the work with the same interest and enthusiasm as her husband and if the natives of Palawan have greater love and admiration for anyone on earth than for Lieutenant Miller it is for Mrs. Miller.

The Moros and natives of Mindanao and Jolo had in previous wars found the Palawans easy prey and thought it about time to replenish their coffers at the Palawans' expense. Lieutenant Miller learned of this as a matter of course. The invaders were coming to visit, levy tribute, collect it and depart. The Palawans were willing to let matters take their course.

"Suppose we don't pay," he said; "what then?" He was informed of the probable consequences and forthwith replied: "We don't pay."

It was then that Lieut. Miller thought of his little company of Philippine scouts. He drew them together, a mere handful in comparison to the invaders, told the Palawans to trust in him and started out. The invading horde was routed and driven pell mell in all directions. News that there was a "fighting demon" on Palawan island spread as fast as the mouth-to-mouth process in these wilds could carry it.

"It's an ugly charge," mocked the attorney general.

"It's all of that," and Griswold smiled.

HUSHED SHRIEKS OF VICTIM

Little Woman Found One Good Use for Discardant Notes of Carolers.

The shivering carollers had just selected a pitch beneath a lamp in a back street, when a small boy emerged from a house opposite and beckoned mysteriously to their leader.

"Mother says you're to sing something loud," he whispered. "That bit about 'Peace on earth' will do fine. She don't want no others. Just you go on hollering 'Peace on earth.'"

For ten minutes the willing minstrels yelled their loudest. Then a little woman, armed with a copper saucapan, appeared upon the scene.

"Thanks!" she said, handing the collector three-pence. "That 'Peace on earth' as done it beautiful! My ol' man went to fetch the turkey 'e won in a raffle to-night, an' comin' 'ome, 'e made one or two calls and forst it, so I've bee a-teachin' 'im to be more careful, an' I didn't want none o' the neighbors to interfere when 'e 'ollered out."—Pearson's Weekly.

RULES 34 000 ALONE

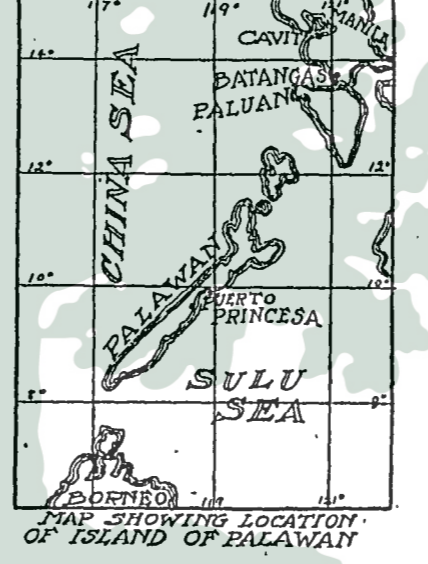

Illinois Soldier and Wife Idolized by Filipinos.

One Man, by Kindness, Accomplishes What a Regiment Could Not Do by Force, According to General Bell.

Washington.—A former Chicago boy, aided by his tactful wife, an Illinois girl, is ruler over 34,000 semicivilized and wild people in the Philippines. He lives with them as a brother and master combined, who rules them by the sheer force of his personality and accomplishes in many ways what a host of the best trained regulars could not accomplish.

First Lieut. Edward Y. Miller, Twenty-ninth infantry, who is on detached duty as governor of Palawan, Philippine Islands, is the man. He is not a West Pointer, he has spent comparatively little time with his brother officers, knows little of the regiment to which he is attached, and probably would not have been heard of at this time had not Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff, arguing before the house military committee for an increase in the number of army officers, brought the work of this officer to the fore.

Commenting on the fact that army officers are used for many particular government positions that are neces-

CANADA FORGING AHEAD

Thomas C. Shotwell, one of the greatest market reporters in America, writes from New York, under date of March 20th, and says:

"The Tariff tangle with Canada which President Taft has taken in hand is of importance chiefly because of the multitude of American farmers that are crossing into the Canadian northwest. Most conservative estimates of their number place it at 150,000 for 1910. Some say as many as 250,000 will cross. These are all expert farmers and their flocks in the United States are being filled by untrained men from Europe and from the cities. Canada is gaining rapidly in agricultural importance and within a few years the United States will have to call on the Dominion for wheat. Production of wheat in the United States is not keeping pace with the population. A tariff war would complicate the problem of getting food. Even now Canadian farmers are getting higher prices for their cattle on the hoof and Canadian housewives are paying less for meat in the butcher shops than farmers and housewives are receiving and paying in the United States. The tariff on cattle and wheat must be removed as between the two countries before long."

WOMAN'S GENTLE NATURE CALLS FOR GENTLE TREATMENT

Delicately formed and gently reared, women will find, in all the seasons of their lives, as maidens, wives or mothers, that the one simple, wholesome remedy which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally, and which may be used with truly beneficial effects, under any conditions, when the system needs a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. It is well known to be a simple combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic liquids, which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system when its gentle cleansing is desired.

Only those who buy the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna can hope to get its beneficial effects, and as a guarantee of the excellence of the remedy, the full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package, and without it any preparation offered as Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is fraudulent and should be declined. To those who know the quality of this excellent laxative, the offer of any substitute, when Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is called for, is always resented by a transfer of patronage to some first-class drug establishment, where they do not recommend, nor sell false brands, nor imitation remedies. The genuine article may be bought of all reliable druggists everywhere; one size only. Regular price 50 cents per bottle. Get a bottle today to have in the house when needed.

The extermination of dogs seems to be the order at Hamburg, as four were poisoned and one shot last Sunday and Monday. Poisoned meat was thrown around the streets. A shepherd dog valued at $50 and owned by Mr. Wendeline, on the Wm. Ball farm and a $50 beagle hound owned by Jos. Krasny, of Whitmore Lake, were two of the victims.—Howell Livingston Tidings.

The members of the Rebekah staff, went to the home of Mrs. Sam Dewey last Friday evening and spent a few pleasant hours with her. Candy and peanuts were enjoyed by the ladies, after which Mrs. Emery Rowe in half of the staff presented Mrs. Dewey with a fine berry spoon as a token of esteem. Mr. and Mrs. Dewey left Saturday noon for their new home at Lansing, where they each have a position in the Industrial School.

It is reported that agents selling steel ranges from a wagon are again working in Ingham county. There are reliable local dealers who sell reliable goods, and are going to stay here to make good any fault that may show up after goods have been sold, and it is hard to understand why some people will take chances with traveling merchants from whom they have no redress whatever if the articles they buy turn out to be worthless.

President Taft's First Golf Pupil

CHARLIE TAFT ON THE LINKS

CHARLIE TAFT PLAYING GOLF

RESIDENT TAFT has several hobbies, but foremost of those—measured by loyalty and enthusiasm—is the game of golf, of which he has been a devotee for a number of years past. Some idea of the estimate which he places on the Scotch game as a means of diversion and a contributory influence of good health may be formed from the fact that he recently insisted that his youngest son, Charlie, should take up the game. What is more, the president took time to personally instruct the junior member of his family in the rudiments of the sport.

It should be explained just here, that it did not require much insistence on the part of the president to induce "Cheerful Charlie," as he has been aptly nicknamed, to follow the white balls over the greensward. The 13-year-old son of the present chief magistrate is, with the possible exception of one or two of the Roosevelt boys, just about the liveliest lad that ever resided at the White House, and the only explanation of why he did not learn golf long ago must be found in the fact that he simply overlooked the game. Everything else from tennis to sailing he had mastered ere he set out to conquer his first golf course.

Mr. Robert Taft, the eldest son of the president, became a pretty good golfer almost unconsciously in the days when he and all his cousins gathered every vacation at the common summer rallying ground of the whole Taft clan at Murray Bay, Canada, on the shore of the St. Lawrence river. Miss Helen Taft has never cared much much for golf as compared with horseback riding and motoring and as to his son's "form," he is prone to let the lad work out his own salvation as a golfer. For a time Charlie was content to confine his activities to a nine-hole course, but now, like his father, he scorns anything less than an 18-hole course.

The president and his eldest son almost never go to the golf links save in golfing attire. Not that there is anything conspicuous in the costume of either, but some concession, even though it be only outing flannels and a Scotch cap, is made to the business in hand. The ever-active Charlie, on the other hand, as may be surmised from the accompanying pictures, is no stickler for togs when a-golfing. Incidentally it may be remarked that the youngest son of the president is always much more of a hero to his caddy than is his father. Perhaps this is due in part to his many likeable characteristics by no means the least of which is his refreshing democracy.

Ever since he took to golfing, Charlie Taft has chosen his partners and opponents only with regard to their skill and sportsmanlike tendencies, and with no reference to who their fathers might be. Charlie's independence in such matters was evidenced when his father was secretary of war, by his summary withdrawal from Quentin Roosevelt's baseball nine because of some of the dictates of the youngest member of the Roosevelt family.

Charles Phelps Taft is now a student in his uncle's private school at Watertown, Conn., and is, at 13 years, about the youngest boy in the school. He is preparing to follow in the footsteps of his father, and his elder brother Robert, by rounding out his education at Yale. Meanwhile he is dividing his recreation hours between golf and horseback riding. Ever since President Taft acquired an automobile as the connecting link between his place of residence and the nearest golf links, the nervous Charlie has been more than anxious to be allowed to drive the car—the theory of the operation of which he has already mastered perfectly, thanks to friendly chauffeurs. However, his father will not as yet, hear of his adding this to his other accomplishments.

CAMPAIGN PLANS BEING MATURED

Republican Congressional Committee Getting in Readiness for Active Work.

ORATORS TO DEFEND TARIFF

Question Is Bound to Be One of the Principal Issues in the Coming Elections—Democrats Determined to Keep It in the Front.

Washington.—If the Republican congressional committee has its way, a defense of the tariff law will be made by the principal campaign orators during the two months prior to the election next November. The Republicans had hoped that the tariff was buried as an issue past resurrection for at least ten years, but members of their own party have refused to attend a funeral or even to admit that the issue is in any immediate danger of death.

Then the Democrats also have announced that they are going to pay their attentions to the tariff, and by the use of frequent electrical oratorical currents, keep it not only alive, but with strength enough to dance constantly before the public until the November snows come.

It is extremely likely that President Taft will have some things to say about the tariff, maintaining a position of defense of his act in signing the bill. It is believed, however, that the president will pay most of his speaking attention to his legislative measures, and to his future program, for Mr. Taft, it is said, does not believe that the customs should by any means be made the main issue during the congressional campaign, even if the Democrats make good their threats.

Middle West May Not Want Speakers. Most of the members of the Republican congressional committee are high tariff men, and so naturally it is to be expected that they will urge the strongest kind of a defense of the Payne-Aldrich schedules. It is understood that some of the old time standard Republicans will be sent into the middle west to make tariff speeches of the kind that were popular in the days when William McKinley was running for the presidency. This means that there will be a wide difference between the tone of the speeches made during the Taft campaign and those to be made during the congressional campaign of the coming summer and fall.

When the Taft-Bryan campaign was on, the Republicans spoke of the tariff in much the same spirit that they spoke of it during the days of the national convention. They said they were going to revise the tariff, and the general understanding was that they were going to revise it downward. Now the Democrats charge that there was no revision downward, or if there was any lowering tendency at all, it was too slight to be worthy of attention. Some of the insurgent Republicans are in the same mood as the Democrats, and in the insurgent districts it is probable that there will be very little high tariff talk. This means that the Republican congressional committee will find that the speakers which they apparently intend to provide will not be in demand in the insurgent districts.

Tariff Worries Massachusetts. Representative McKinley of California, who must not be confused with Representative McKinley, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, although both are high protectionists, recently made a speech in the Chelsea (Mass.) district represented in congress by Ernest W. Roberts, a staunch Republican. The old Bay State is much exercised over tariff matters, and some of the Republicans there fear that they are not going to be re-elected. They find they can not repudiate their action on the Payne tariff law, and so they have made up their minds to defend the law and to try to bring the doubters back into the fold.

While the Republican congressional committee is getting ready to send out its best high tariff speakers, the Democratic congressional committee is preparing to send out its best anti-high tariff speakers. It is perfectly evident that the next campaign will be one in which the tariff will figure just as largely as an issue as it has figured any time in the past, except in the purely insurgent districts. It may be that the insurgent Republicans, not wishing to keep up the animosity within the party, will refrain from talking about the Payne tariff law, and will make their campaign on a basis of legislative progress in other directions, occasionally using a word, however, to the effect that under Democratic rule free trade will be a certainty, and that while the insurgents are tariff revisionists, they are very far removed from the condition of out and out believers in free trade.

Seek New Leaders. Both the Republican and Democratic members of the United States senate are considering the question of the leadership in the senate, after the fourth of March next, when Nelson W. Aldrich, the majority chief, and Fernando D. Money, the minority chieftain, retire from the service.

It is generally acknowledged by the members of both parties, and probably by the country, that in effectiveness of majority leadership, the Republicans have had no man in years as resourceful and as tactful as the senator from Rhode Island has proved himself to be. Countless thousands of people found fault with Mr. Aldrich's affiliations, and with his works of accomplishment, but no one has ever said that he did not know how to hold his party together, and how to save the situation at crucial times after a manner in which from his point of view, the situation ought to be saved.

Williams Succeeds Money. Senator Money of Mississippi will retire from the senate next March, to be succeeded by John Sharp Williams, who until a year and a half ago, was the leader of the minority in the house of representatives.

It is generally admitted that if Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas had been saved from a less stormy career in matters not connected with the senate, and if some of his colleagues did not differ widely from his views, he would be the logical leader of the Democrats in the senate. It can be taken for granted, however, that Mr. Bailey never will be chosen by the Democratic caucus as a party chief in the upper legislative hall.

If Senator Culberson regains his health and is able to reassume the duties of leadership, the Democratic problem will be an easy one to solve, for without question the Texan will be given once more the honor of leadership. The belief is, however, that even with returning strength, Mr. Culberson will see the necessity of husbanding it and will not care to take on the strenuous work of party leadership.

Some man who has been long in the service will be chosen by the Democrats to guide the destinies of their party in legislative matters. Of course this means that John Sharp Williams, who was the leader in the house, cannot for a long time assume a like leadership in the senate. The Democrats do not know today whom they will choose as a leader, but there seems to be a possibility, even a probability, that Senator Rayner of Maryland may be called upon to take the chief place.

Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, who has been senator Aldrich's able assistant chief for a long time, also is to retire from the senate next March, so he is eliminated from the successorship. It may be that the duties of leader will fall upon Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, unless there should be such a change in the factional complexion of the senate as to give the "insurgent" senators control.

The elections of next winter probably can not bring about an "insurgent" majority in the Republican senatorial ranks, but it is possible that between now and next March some of the "regulars" may break away and become either near or full fledged insurgents. In this case Mr. Lodge probably would not be chosen as leader, and the choice might go to Senator Beveridge of Indiana, or to Senator Cummins of Iowa.

Second-Term Talk. Evidences are accumulating that President Taft's Joscoe announcement to members of his college fraternity that he was inclined to think one term is enough, has led to some curious results. Some of the president's friends have told him that if he really intends not to be a candidate again it is within his power to check a good deal of the opposition to some of his legislative measures by making a direct statement that he will not again seek presidential office.

The president apparently has no present intention of making any such statement, because, of course, he does not know how the future may shape itself and how strong and insistent a demand there may be from the Republican party that he once more shall take on the duties of standard bearer. It is perfectly well known in Washington that Mr. Taft has not enjoyed greatly his first year's experience as president of the United States. The troubles that have come to him and the adverse criticisms that have been made concerning what some people think is a lack of initiative, have worried him as much as one of his equable temperaments can be worried, and it probably was because of the vexations of administrative life that he said what he did in indirect intimation that one term was pretty near enough for anybody.

From Selfish Standpoint. Some of the "regular" Republicans say that if Mr. Taft does pronounce decidedly against a second term for himself the attacks on his measures will cease, because some of the men leading the attacks are ambitious for presidential preferment, and so naturally they attack the sincerity of the present president in order to make capital for themselves by creating opposition to the administration of a man who it was supposed desired a second term. There are signs that even with a humorously worded expression of a lack of desire for a second term, the opposition to the legislation is subsiding. This, the friends of the president say, goes to show that the prophecy the attacks would cease altogether if Mr. Taft should declare himself out of the field was well based.

It must be said, however, that few hardheaded politicians can be found in Washington in either party to admit that there is any likelihood for a long time to come that Mr. Taft will come out with a flatfooted statement to the effect that he does not desire and will not take the nomination for a second term. The impression is, however, that if a real campaign should be started on behalf of some other Republican, even for Theodore Roosevelt, and the basis of the pleas for support for the new candidate should be built on the ground that Mr. Taft is not a success as a president, he will stay in the field and will fight for a renomination.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bump came and it bothered me so my doctor at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. Huxy, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview: "As an American I am naturally in favor of the remarkable growth of the western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands. I have met one who admitted that he had sold his land in Illinois and was now in Saskatchewan. He is a representative of the thousands of Americans who are flocking to the west. There is scarcely a community in the West that has not a representative of the American people in it."

WHERE ROBE WOULD COUNT

Under Friendly Cover Preacher Might Safely Proceed to Split His Infinitives.

"I tried to get a chance to speak to you at church Sunday," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "but the crush was so great that I couldn't push through to where you were." "Yes, wasn't it awful?" replied her hostess, as she flicked a bit of dust from the Gobelins tapestry. "All the common folks in town seem to want to crowd into our church lately. It's too bad they ain't satisfied to stay where they belong. How did you like the sermon?" "Well, as a sermon it was fairly good, but I do wish Doctor Goodman would quit spitting his infinitives. I try not to let it make me nervous, but I can't keep from being shocked every time he does it." "I never let them kind of things bother me, but that's where the Episcopalians have the advantage of us. If our preacher would wear a long robe he could split them and we would never notice it."—Kansas City Star.

A Howard girl who was uncertain as to her exact age, as her father and mother were not agreed on the year of her birth, decided to go to the physician who "attended the case." He said: "Why, certainly, my dear girl, I'll go and examine my old books." When he came back to report, he said: "I find your father charged with a girl baby born on the 'steenth day of April, 189—, and I also observe he still owes me for you."—Howard (Kan.) Courier.

SOCIAL LIFE IN RUSSIA

The oldest club in St. Petersburg, the Angliksko, or English club, was founded in 1759. It does not now number an Englishman, or any other foreigner among its members, though it was started by Francis Gardner, merchant, manufacturer and ship owner, a partner in the old Moscow company, whose first charter was granted by Queen Elizabeth of England and Czar Ivan the Terrible.

Throughout the ferment of a few years ago St. Petersburg was never without its crop of mushroom clubs, which sprang up in a night and changed their names and the names of the games they played every other month or at shorter intervals if they failed to reach a working agreement with the local chief of police. The old Angliksko klub has watched them come and go with indifference.

Its membership has contributed to the annals of universal clubland. Boefv Stroganoff, which figures in the restaurant menu of mankind, is an invention of one of its members, Count Stroganoff; sauce Nesselrode is another, named after Alexander I.'s secretary of state, who directed Russia's diplomacy in the days of Napoleon I, and signed the treaty of Vienna after the Corsican's downfall. Pushkin, poet and officer of the Imperial guard, "Russia's Byron," was a member, as was Bismarck's diplomatic rival, Prince Gortschakoff.

The membership today is drawn largely from the senior officers of the army and the nominated members of the council of empire. The absence of grand dukes is ascribed to a scene in the club card room long ago when one of them after a run of bad luck threw his hand angrily on the floor. As he refused to apologize to the other players the committee asked him to resign.

The grand dukes thereafter transferred their club attendance to the Yacht club on the Bolstova Morskata, an institution which has no more relation to yachting than the Angliksko Klub has to do with England. The social customs of the two are alike—dining, cards and plenty to drink, but no politics, although, of course, there must be no speak of doubt about the loyalty to the czar of any member.

The Yacht club is also the resort of the diplomats resident in St. Petersburg. The annual subscription is 400 rubles. The dinner is served at one great table and each newcomer before he sits down must walk around and shake hands with the members who have already begun.

Bridge and poker are the games. Vindt, the native Russian game, which is bridge of four dimensions, has been driven from the fashionable haunts, but holds its own at domestic parties and in the provinces, where the unworried technovnik will play it daily from noon till four o'clock the next morning in his government bureau with his government colleagues.

There is the German Merchants' club in the center of the city. Like the two senior aristocratic institutions it refuses to admit that its title should define its membership, which is neither very German nor very mercantile. It is the synonym for good bourgeois comfort and is probably the most steadily prosperous of all the clubs.

Its social complexion resembles the recently founded Octobrists club for moderate politicians, founded by the party of that name. Their radical opponents founded a constitutional democratic club three years ago.

The problem that the gregarious instinct of Russians in their long, dark evenings has set before the governor of the city springs mostly from the smaller clubs. In a tentative way the chiefs of the government are trying to steer them into what are officially looked on as safe and wholesome courses. Prime Minister Stolypin has just sent good wishes to the newly formed Academic club of senior officers and graduates, whose bond of union is interest in scholarship and university studies.

None of these institutions is allowed to see the light until its articles of association have been passed through a minute and suspicious examination by the officials of the ministry of justice.

The ingrained fear of meetings of association have been passed through a minute and suspicious examination by the officials of the ministry of justice.

any hired room they must give 48 hours' notice to the police, stating the purpose of their gathering, even if it is only a dance or a wedding feast.

St. Petersburg has an excess of male population, due to the greater number of men from the provinces in the junior branches of the imperial administration, and to the aggregation of young army officers. More youngsters lose great sums at cards than in any other capital in Europe, and the cheating is notorious. The gambling clubs that get closed and reappear in other premises are usually marked down on the complaint of a family whose son has gone bankrupt at their tables. At nearly all of them, men and women play side by side and, of course, take one another's money with equal remorselessness. Periodically there is a crisis. Somebody cuts the light off while his confederate scoops the stakes on the tables. A few revolver shots follow, there is a rush for the street and the police are brought in.

The scamps in the gambling clubs are so numerous and know so much about each other that nothing can be done to get up evidence for a prosecution. The police have no authority to arrest officers of the army and navy. If they are mixed up in a club scandal the officer of the brigade on guard duty must be sent for to discipline them.

This absolute authority of the senior officer over all military and naval men at all times overrides club committees or any other social authority, and it is exercised without compunction.

In the main saloon of a leading restaurant here some years ago, the late Grand Duke Vladimir after copious refreshment left his table, went toward the wife of a civilian, patted her on the shoulder and told her she was beautiful. The husband sprang up and pushed him sharply back some yards. Diners and the waiters looked for a scene, but a very old man in general's uniform—all military officers wear the uniform on the active or reserve list whether their uniforms at all times—got up and crossed to the grand duke with the order in one sentence to report himself at once to the military commandant's quarters.

Vladimir went without a word.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Butter must have a good color.

The cheap ram is a heavy handicap.

Cottonseed meal is fine for putting flesh on sheep.

The brood sow will be benefited by occasional feeds of oats.

Hooks are often the cheapest and best equipment on the farm.

Watch the ewes closely. A lamb disowned is generally a lamb lost.

The first litter is not always an index to the brood sow's profitability.

Soil should be thoroughly prepared to good depth, well drained and enriched.

The cow must have pure food, good water, and good health to make a good cream.

When people have stock that can be recorded it's a shame to overlook the process.

There is a vast difference in cows and it's the dairyman's duty to find out the difference.

Every dairyman should make up his ration to suit all his conditions and the necessities of his cows.

Hogs prefer ear corn in a muddy time. Ground feed is at a discount then, as so much of it is wasted.

The laying of soft shelled eggs sometimes results from overfeeding and sometimes for want of egg shell material.

For early hog pasture sow oats, using three and three and one-half bushels per acre. Such a pasture will last until June.

Roup, the scourge of poultry keeping in cold climates, must be prevented if pleasure and profit are to be gained from the business.

Don't starve the dry cow, just because she isn't bringing in any income at present. Later she will pay back all she gets now.

The great drawback about dairying with grades is the loss of the male calves. You should not sell them for sires and they seem too valuable for veal.

A sensible horse nowadays is not afraid of an automobile. These vehicles have come to stay so it would be best for you to introduce your horse to them.

Sweet oil is a safe medicine to administer to animals. It never injures, but is valuable in choking, bloating, inflammation or constipation of the stomach or bowels.

During the winter eggs sold in towns and cities at from 40 to 60 cents a dozen. During the summer and early fall eggs can be preserved or placed in cold storage very easily.

Good judges say that it will be at least two years before the supply of hogs can be made to equal the demand. The high price of breeding stock curtails what would otherwise be a large increase in quantity.

Plants should be sown with reference to their size and habits of growth; some require distance, and others thrive better when planted close together. The gardener must know his plants as the farmer does his field crops.

For wounds made on horses or cattle, by barbed wire fences, there is nothing better than a composition made of carbolic acid half an ounce, glycerine eight ounces and water eight ounces. A syringe is a good thing to inject this into the wound.

It is not too late to set the home orchard. The trees may be set any time before the buds swell and the foliage starts. If the trees have not been ordered, do this at once. Prepare the land by breaking it deeply; pulverize and give them good cultivation.

The Kentucky experiment station has just completed some interesting experiments with Rhode Island Reds. It reports that Reds are broilers at seven weeks old, friers at 20 weeks. While the census statistics of 1900 show that the average yield of eggs, annually, per hen, is 120, the Kentucky station states that the Rhode Island Red can be depended upon to lay 190 to 210 per hen.

Thoroughbred stock pays best.

Ducks can be raised without running water.

Autumn leaves are too valuable to be used for bonfire fuel.

One-third bran and two-thirds corn meal is a good food for little chicks.

A light porous clay loam having some lime in it is the best soil for fruit.

A cure for cornstalk disease—the silo. It cures by eliminating the cause.

The farmer who sells butter is not complaining much about the 50 cent prospects.

The litter carrier should be kept in a constant state of good repair. It is a necessity.

Mulching will keep the fruit clean and the soil in good condition during the fruiting season.

Milk is one commodity in which the buyer refuses to recognize the different grades of excellence.

If the skin of the horse is kept clean he will sweat more freely, which is necessary in keeping him in good condition.

To a very considerable extent the selection of a fruitful or unfruitful site decides the fruitfulness and value of the orchard.

Repeated plantings to keep up a supply, may in a measure be avoided by sowing early medium and late varieties at one sowing.

Many of the wastes and by-products of the fruit farm and household are utilized by the fowls and changed into valuable poultry products.

Fall pigs and spring pigs both should be kept growing from the very start. This does not necessarily mean that they should be kept over-fat.

To give milk is the natural function of the cow, but this function cannot be performed to advantage unless it is fostered by the right kind of care and feed.

It's a shame to whip or jerk a skittish horse that has shied or been frightened by an unusual obstacle. Soothe him rather than try to unnerve him.

With fruit trees the constant effort should be to keep the fruit bearing surface as near the ground as possible. It will make the harvesting of the fruit much easier.

If stock has breeding, quality and uniformity, it is easy to fit it for the show ring, on account of the fact that they will put in the right place every bit of feed that they can use.

Bees will produce more extracted honey to the hive than comb honey, yet the higher price that comb honey will bring makes the income derived from either hive about the same.

For the general farmer and others keeping not more than one or two hundred general-purpose fowls, the natural method of hatching and brooding cannot at present be improved upon.

Sick fowls, or those a little under the weather, should always be fed soft mash, preferably cooked and in small amounts. It is best also to separate them from the other fowls and put in dry warm quarters.

Popcorn should not be planted near field corn or sweet corn. If the stigmas of the popcorn are receptive when the pollen of the Indian corn is ripe, it will mix. Popcorn usually matures earlier than Indian corn and may be planted later.

If your system of farm management has not been profitable, reduce the area of arable land. It is no disgrace to fall in the management of a large farm. Few men have such extraordinary ability. You may have success with a small farm. Try it.

The one great advantage in hatching ducks early is that they can be put on the market early and a better price be realized. If well-fed, ducks grow very rapidly and will be ready for market by the time they are ten weeks old, at which age they will weigh as much again as chickens of the same age.

In selecting a site for the garden, it must be remembered that most vegetables require sunshine as well as plant food and moisture. Other things being equal, a southern exposure is preferable, as this gives a maximum amount of sunlight and will be favorable for the growth of early plants. Care should be taken to avoid a northern exposure, or a site sheltered from the sun by buildings.

Tomato and egg plants may be grown for early maturity by setting the seed in four-inch pots. Another method is to use strawberry boxes, minus bottoms, set on a layer of coal ashes. The boxes should be set close and the earth fairly well firmed before planting the seed. If premium plants are wanted, twelve to fourteen inches high and in bloom by planting time, sow the seed in three-inch pots right now and later shift to the six-inch size. If the plants are given sufficient room for normal growth, that is all that is necessary.

PRaises BIG PHILANTHROPY

President Schurman of Cornell Thinks Well of Rockefeller Foundation.

Ithaca.—John D. Rockefeller's philanthropic scheme, which the Rockefeller foundation bill, now pending in congress, proposes to incorporate was commended by President Jacob G. Schurman in an address before the Cornell congress Friday night. In summing up an exhaustive discussion of the measure, President Schurman said:

"I recognize that section No. 2 of the bill, which defines the object of the Rockefeller foundation, authorizes and empowers that foundation to do anything and everything which may promote and advance human civilization, that is to say, morals and religion, art and science, manners and social intercourse, and all that concerns the political, economic, and material well-being of individuals and communities. This is a vast field for the exercise of philanthropy.

"But Mr. Rockefeller has conceived a vast scheme of philanthropy, for the benefit of his fellow citizens and mankind. His character, ability and organizing skill are adequate guarantees that he will carry out his scheme wisely and successfully, with incalculable benefit and blessing to mankind. It is in the interest of the nation that he be given a free hand in the exercise of his colossal beneficence. So long as he is active or his influence remains it would be wise and safe to give the foundation the sort of organization he desires. Neither now nor hereafter does it seem necessary to limit the scope of his beneficence, which is coextensive with the efforts of mankind to attain a higher civilization.

"The only change I would desire to see in the proposed bill is the total or partial elimination of the method of selecting trustees by co-operation. The organization might well be left a close corporation, if Mr. Rockefeller so desires, for a generation. But after that time I am confident that it would inure both to the efficiency of the foundation and to the public welfare—to say nothing of the satisfaction of the sentiment of a democracy—if the majority of the trustees were appointed by the president of the United States, with the advice and consent of the senate, or selected by some other high abiding, governmental agencies that may fairly be regarded as representing the people of the United States, whose welfare is the primary object of the immense and glorious benefaction."

HOT WAVE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Temperature Reaches 85 Degrees In Shade Where Freezing Weather Usually Prevails This Time.

St. John's, N. F.—Record-breaking temperatures have accompanied a hot wave that has been experienced on the west coast of Newfoundland for the last few days.

At points where the usual temperature at this season of the year would be below freezing the thermometers have registered as high as 85 degrees in the shade.

These figures are unprecedented in the history of the colony.

SHIPS COLLIDE, ONE SINKS

Two Schooners Crash in the Night Off Fortune Bay, N. F., and One Founders—Crew Saved.

North Sydney, N. S.—A collision in the night off Fortune Bay, N. F., of two Newfoundland schooners, the Edna Carter and the Victoria, by which the former vessel was sunk, was reported. For two hours the two vessels hung together with their rigging entangled, and it was feared both would founder. After they were cut apart, the Edna Carter went down. Its crew escaped to the Victoria.

BIG DAM SLOWLY BURNING

Lowlands of Mississippi Below Brainerd, Minn., Are Imperiled by Fire—People Desert Homes.

Duluth, Minn., April 25.—The lowlands on the upper Mississippi river for fifty miles below Brainerd, Minn., are imperiled. The big Weyerhaeuser dam, holding back immense head water in the height of the manufacturing season, is slowly burning. Its center piers were afire when the last word was received from there.

The city water plant was destroyed by fire of unknown origin. The city is dark, water service paralyzed, and the citizens reported panic-stricken. Residents of the lower quarter have deserted their homes, couriers report, and women and children line flame-lit banks, while the men fight the fire hopelessly with buckets.

The Northwest Paper company's pulp plant was catching afire when the last mounted courier left Brainerd downstream to warn settlers to flee to the surrounding hills.

Chicago, April 25.—Sixty persons were rescued from the Cledan apartment building, 740-46 East Forty-fifth street, by an evening dress brigade of men and women attending a house party near by, when fire attacked the big building. One woman, Mrs. E. E. Ballard, was burned probably fatally, and several others had narrow escapes from death.

"Is that Mary you are talking about?" asked papa.

"Yes, sir. It is a mere formality, I know, this asking for your daughter's hand; but we thought it would be pleasant to you if it were observed."

Mary's papa stiffened.

"And may I inquire," he asked, "who suggested that asking my consent to Mary's marriage was a mere formality?"

"You may, sir," replied the young man, simply. "It was Mary's mother."

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

STOCKBRIDGE, MICHIGAN

THE WOOL MARKET

In commenting on the wool situation, the Michigan Farmer gives the following from Boston: The local wool trade has practically ceased to be of any interest to dealers, because of the lack of stocks, and further on account of interest in the new clip which is now being taken from the sheep's back quite generally in the southwest and west. It is common knowledge, that holdings from last year are well cleaned up the country over. The attempt on the part of dealers in the wool-producing sections, is to play a "waiting game" by only giving what they wish for early deliveries of wool. It does not appear from the conditions which apparently exist to be the part of wisdom for farmers to sell their fleeces until prices have reached a level, in keeping with the new ever present supply and demand. It will be remembered that a year ago there was a rapid advance in prices following the early sales and those who held their clip were far from being disappointed. Conditions this year seem even more favorable for such a rise than they did, in 1909 and well informed farmers will probably not dispose of their wool at from 18 to 25c per pound.

After La Grippe

"I had suffered several weeks with LaGrippe. Had pains in my head and eyes. It felt as though there was a heavy weight on the top of my head, until it seemed that my brain would burst. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. When I dozed off I would awake with a sudden jerking of my whole body. Dr. Miles' Nerve, Heart Remedy and Nerve and Liver Pills cured me. A number of friends have since realized the same benefits."
MRS. ALVIN H. LOCKS, Seabrook, N. H.

The after effects of LaGrippe are often more serious than the disease, as it leaves the system in a weakened condition that invites more serious troubles, such as pneumonia, etc.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve
